Throughout debate Rep. John B. Bennett (R Mich.) unsuccessfully tried to win House approval of an amendment to give the FCC power to regulate the networks in the public interest, without licensing them. He said without such a provision the bill "hammers the little fellow over the head and lets the big monopolies, who control this industry, go scot free." His amendment was defeated June 27 by a 16-101 standing vote.

Bennett suffered another defeat June 28 when he sought to have the bill recommitted and reported back with the addition, as an amendment, of a bill (HR 11340) providing for FCC licensing of networks. His recommittal motion was rejected by a 35-149 standing vote. Harris opposed Bennett's amendment on grounds it was not "the proper time or the proper place" to insert it.

Debate on S 1898 began June 23 with a lengthy speech by Harris. He said the Subcommittee's recommendations for legislation were followed "immediately" by "pressure...moving in on all sides" and that, "in my judgment, these recent attacks on Members of the Congress are conspiracies of the Knight newspapers and Life magazine" because "both...own substantial broadcasting facilities." He referred to a June 1 article copyrighted by the two news organizations which alleged that certain House Members, including Harris, had charged off to the Government expenses for such things as trips to resorts and nightclubbing. Harris said the articles carried "nasty innuendoes" and were a "smear attack". Publisher John S. Knight in a June 24 statement said Harris' charges were "unfair and unfortunate". (See p. 408)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 27 -- John James Flynt Jr. (D Ga.) -- Require that violations liable to license-suspension must be made knowingly, negligently or intentionally. Voice vote.

William H. Avery (R Kan.) -- Stipulate that license forfeiture should be based on intelligent or intentional failure to operate a station properly or negligent or intentional violations. Voice.

Oren Harris (D Ark.) -- Repeal provision permitting acceptance by FCC Members of honorariums for publications or delivery of speeches. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 27 -- John B. Bennett (R Mich.) -- Authorize FCC to regulate radio and television networks in the public interest. Standing, 16-101.

Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.) -- Provide that forfeiture be invoked only if the violation continued for five days after serving of a written notice. Standing, 49-90.

June 28 -- Jonas -- Provide for a show-cause order and public hearing before ordering forfeiture. Standing, 76-105.

Jonas -- Cut the fine from $1,000 to $200. Voice.

George Meader (R Mich.) -- Delete language providing for forfeiture if respondent violated a cease-and-desist order. Standing, 64-91.

J. Edgar Chenoweth (R Colo.) -- Eliminate provision for forfeiture. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

ACTION -- Aug. 19 reported S 1898 with amendments reducing House-approved penalty provisions for stations violating FCC regulations or engaging in payola or other deceptive practices (S Rept 1857). The Committee eliminated a House-passed provision giving the FCC the power to suspend the license of a radio or television station that violated the bill's ban on payola or disobeyed other Government regulations and also limited fines that could be imposed on violators to $10,000. Prior to the Committee action, the Communications Subcommittee held a one-day hearing Aug. 10.

The report said the Committee had eliminated the license suspension provision because the public, as well as the broadcaster, would suffer through such a penalty by loss of programming. The Committee said it felt "the sanctions now available in the Communications Act, plus the forfeiture penalties herein being provided, give the Commission (FCC) adequate tools to take effective action against offending licensees." A limitation was set on forfeitures, the report said, to assure that the sanction "will be reasonably administered."

Floor Action

The Senate Aug. 25, by voice vote, agreed to the Committee amendments to the House-passed version of S 1898, and returned the bill to the House for final approval.

An amendment by Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.) to restore the license suspension provision was defeated by voice vote. Proxmire contended the suspension provision was the "heart" of the legislation, and that $10,000 was "peanuts" to large metropolitan stations. Sen. John O. Pastore (D R.I.), chairman of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Communications Subcommittee and sponsor of S 1898, countered that suspensions would penalize television viewers more than the industry.

FINAL ACTION -- The House Aug. 30 by voice vote agreed to the Senate changes in S 1898, clearing the bill for the President.

EXCISE TAXES EXTENDED, DEBT LIMIT RAISED

- Passed by the House, by a 223-174 roll-call vote, June 8. (See p. 452)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 1602) June 16.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate, by an 84-0 roll-call vote, June 20. (See p. 505-506)
- Conference report (H Rept 2005) agreed to by the House by voice vote June 27 and by the Senate by a 61-32 roll-call vote June 28. (See p. 508)

PL 86-564 -- Signed into law June 30.

For the seventh successive year, Congress in 1960 approved President Eisenhower's request for another one-year postponement in the scheduled reductions of the corporation income and certain excise tax rates. As enacted, HR 12381 assured the Treasury of an additional $2.6 billion in estimated receipts in fiscal 1961. The bill also authorized a temporary one-year increase in the public debt ceiling, from $285 billion to $293 billion, as requested by the President.

As in 1959, the Senate tried and largely failed to modify the simple extension measure voted by the House. Amendments to repeal 10 percent excise taxes on local telephone service and passenger transportation were approved by the Finance Committee but rejected on the floor. But the Senate once again voted to repeal the 4 percent tax credit on dividend income, and to limit deductions for business entertainment expenses. Both amendments were dropped in conference with the House, however -- a fact that led a majority of Senate Democrats to vote against the conference report, as they did in 1959.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 12381:

Increased the national debt limit for one year, through June 30, 1961, from its permanent level of $285 billion to $293 billion.

Continued until July 1, 1961 the 52-percent tax rate on corporations and certain mutual insurance companies; the excise rates set by the Revenue Act of 1951 on distilled spirits, beer, wine, cigarettes, passenger cars and auto accessories; the 10 percent taxes on passenger transportation and local telephone service.

Provided that, effective Dec. 31, 1960, the percentage depletion allowance for certain minerals could not be computed on the selling price of the finished product.

Directed the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and the Treasury to study and report to the next Congress on the effectiveness of current IRS regulation in curbing excessive tax deductions for business entertainment expenses.

Background

REFERENCES -- Revenue Act of 1951 (1951 Almanac p. 409); Revision of Internal Revenue Laws (1954 Almanac p. 476, 495); Corporate, Excise Taxes (1955 Almanac p. 419; 1956 Almanac p. 510; 1957 Almanac p. 613; 1958 Almanac p. 145; 1959 Almanac p. 200); National Debt Limit (1959 Almanac p. 277).

The Revenue Act of 1951, designed to raise an additional $5.7 billion in taxes to help finance the Korean war, raised the normal tax rate on corporate profits from 25 percent to 30 percent. (The surtax rate of 22 percent on income over $25,000 was retained, making the over-all rate on most corporate income 52 percent.) The 1951 law also raised excise tax rates on distilled spirits, beer, wine, cigarettes, passenger cars, and auto accessories. All of the increases were scheduled to expire March 31, 1954.

In 1954, Congress rewrote the Internal Revenue Code, cutting taxes by about $1.4 billion, but at the President's request postponed for one year the scheduled reduction of the corporate normal rate from 30 percent to 25 percent. The same year, Congress cut excise taxes by $1 billion; included among the cuts were reductions from 15 percent to 10 percent in excises levied on passenger transportation and local telephone service and telegrams. But certain excise tax rates raised in 1951 and scheduled to drop in 1954 were retained for another year.

In 1955 and each year thereafter, the President proposed further one-year postponements of the reductions scheduled in the corporate income and certain excise tax rates, and Congress went along, usually with minimum opposition. In 1958, however, the extension bill sent to the President also provided for repeal of excise taxes levied since World War II on the transportation of freight, oil by pipeline, and coal, at an estimated cost to the Treasury of $485 million per year.

The extension bill of 1959 passed the House without amendment, but the Senate voted to repeal three tax laws before sending the measure to conference: the 4 percent tax credit on dividend income, first enacted in 1954; the 10 percent excise levied on passenger transportation (effective Aug. 1, 1959), and the 10 percent tax on local telephone service and telegrams (effective July 1, 1960), both of which had been cut from 15 percent in 1954. House conferees refused to accept any of the amendments, but agreed to a compromise calling for reduction of the transportation tax from 10 percent to 5 percent, effective July 1, 1960, and repeal of the telephone tax at the same time, unless previously extended along with the Korean war excise rates.

In his Budget Message Jan. 18, 1960, President Eisenhower again asked Congress to postpone, for the seventh time, reductions in corporate income and excise tax rates. He also urged postponement of the reduction in the transportation tax and of repeal of the telephone tax, as scheduled under terms of the 1959 extension law. As in prior years, the House Ways and Means Committee waited until late May before taking up the request, leaving little time for debate before the annual June 30 deadline for enactment.

The Committee decided to incorporate in the same bill the President's request for an increase in the debt ceiling -- his fourth such bid in three years. In 1958 Congress first authorized a temporary increase in the ceiling from $275 billion to $280 billion, later raised the permanent ceiling to $283 billion, with the temporary addition of $5 billion. In 1959 the permanent ceiling was raised to $285 billion, while a temporary ceiling of $295 billion was authorized through June 30, 1960, to accommodate seasonal gaps between expenditures and receipts. Although the President's budget for fiscal 1961 estimated a public debt of $284.5 billion on June 30, 1960 -- just under the permanent ceiling of $285 billion -- another increase was requested to see the Treasury through fiscal 1961.

House

COMMITTEE -- Ways and Means.

HEARINGS -- No hearings were held, but Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson and Budget Director Maurice H. Stans testified in executive session May 24-25 in support of the President's requests. Both Anderson and Stans argued that a projected budget surplus of $4.2 billion in fiscal 1961 could turn into a substantial deficit if current tax rates were not maintained. Stans also said the Administration expected to equal or slightly better the January forecast of a $200 million surplus in fiscal 1960. (Revised budget estimates released Oct. 4 showed an actual surplus of $1.2 billion for the year that ended June 30, 1960. At the same time, the estimated surplus for fiscal 1961 was cut to $1.1 billion, largely because of a $2 billion reduction forecast for corporation income tax receipts.)

Regarding the debt limit, Anderson asked for another temporary increase of $8 billion to cover seasonal financing needs, raising the $285 billion permanent ceiling to $293 billion through June 30, 1961.

ACTION -- The Committee May 31 reported a clean bill (HR 12381 -- H Rept 1699) raising the public debt limit to $293 billion through June 30, 1961, and continuing until July 1, 1960 existing tax rates on corporation income, distilled spirits, beer, wine, cigarettes, passenger cars, auto accessories, passenger transportation, and local telephone service. Earlier the Committee had rejected proposals to cut the last two excise rates from 10 percent to 5 percent.

Floor Action

The House June 8 passed HR 12381 without change, by a 223-174 roll-call vote, after adopting a closed rule (H Res 550) barring all but Committee amendments, by a 204-181 roll-call vote. Members of both parties assailed the closed "gag" rule as "un-American" and an Administration-sponsored maneuver to prevent any tax cuts in 1960. Opponents of the bill also charged that it reneged on the implied promise of Congress in 1959 to repeal the telephone tax and cut the transportation tax in 1960. (For voting, see chart p. 452)

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (D Ark.) said the Ways and Means Committee had agreed to continue the taxes, not because the President requested it, but because "the circumstances warrant us doing it." But the Committee's senior minority member, Noah M. Mason (R Ill.), opposed the bill on grounds that "we have spent too much and... could immediately arrange our fiscal affairs so as to spend less."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Finance.

HEARING -- June 14 heard Secretary Anderson in executive session urge extension of existing tax rates to produce a budget surplus, on grounds that "debt repayment must be established as a normal practice in good times."

ACTION -- June 16 reported HR 12381 (S Rept 1602), with amendments to repeal the 10 percent tax on local telephone service and telegrams, effective July 1, and the 10 percent tax on passenger transportation, effective Aug. 1. The first amendment had been approved, 11-6; the second, 10-6. Chairman Harry Flood Byrd (D Va.) was the only Democrat voting against repeal of both taxes, and Sen. John Marshall Butler (R Md.) the only Republican voting for repeal. Cost of the changes was estimated at $565 million in fiscal 1961.

At the same time, the Committee rejected several other proposed amendments designed to produce additional revenue, allegedly by closing tax "loopholes." These included proposals by Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy (D Minn.) to repeal the 4 percent tax credit on dividend income (rejected by a 7-9 vote), and to withhold taxes on dividend income beginning in 1962 (rejected by a 5-10 vote). Also rejected were similar amendments by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), to withhold taxes on income from both dividends and interest (rejected 3-12) and to withhold on dividend income only (rejected 5-12).

Repeal of the tax on local telephone service was justified, the Committee report said, "both because the burden of this tax bears most heavily on those least able to pay, and because a substantial portion of this tax is a business cost item which enters into the costs of other goods and services and therefore is a factor tending toward higher prices generally." The major reason cited for repealing the transportation tax was that "the industries involved have been faced with problems of maintaining their volume of business."

Floor Action

The Senate June 20 passed HR 12381, by a roll-call vote of 84-0, after rejecting the two Finance Committee amendments and accepting three "loophole-closing" amendments -- to repeal the 4 percent dividend credit, tighten rules for computing depletion allowances, and limit the deductibility of business entertainment expenditures. In all, 11 roll calls were required to complete action on the bill. (For voting, see charts p. 505-506)

Passage was preceded by a lengthy and stormy debate, which began immediately after Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) called up the bill June 17. Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) objected to hasty consideration of a "fiscally irresponsible" measure reducing taxes at a time when the Senate had increased appropriations by more than $2 billion over budget requests.

Clark said he had been assured that the bill would not be brought up until a caucus of Democratic Senators could be held. Johnson denied that he had given any such assurance or that he intended to rush passage of the measure.

Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.) June 18 offered the first of a series of "loophole-closing" amendments, designed to prevent producers of clay and other minerals from computing their percentage depletion allowance on the selling price of finished products rather than the raw material value. (President Eisenhower had requested such legislation in his Jan. 18 Budget Message, after a series of lower court decisions had ruled that existing law permitted use of the higher, finished product value in computing the allowance.)

Offered first as an amendment to the Finance Committee amendment to repeal the telephone tax, Gore's amendment was tabled on Johnson's motion by a 39-26 roll-call vote. Several Republicans spoke in favor of the amendment, but opposed attaching it to the repealer. Later, following rejection of the Committee amendments,

Gore again offered his amendment and won unanimous support, by an 87-0 roll-call vote.

Finance Chairman Byrd led the fight against the two Committee amendments, calling them unwise in the light of the critical world situation. Repeal of the telephone tax, said Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.), would not benefit the taxpayer, because the states would soon levy their own taxes in its place. (Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller (R N.Y.) earlier had urged repeal of the federal tax so that the states might tap this source of revenue to meet rising school budgets.) Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.), sponsor of the telephone tax repealer, countered that Congress had committed itself in 1959 to remove the tax. But the amendment was rejected by a 30-54 roll-call vote.

Sen. George A. Smathers (D Fla.), sponsor of the second Committee amendment to repeal the transportation tax, argued that failure to remove this levy would lead to demands for federal subsidies for railroads. Adopted in 1941 to discourage wartime travel, the tax was outdated and discriminatory, he said. But the amendment to repeal it was also rejected, by a 29-55 roll-call vote.

The Senate then agreed to the Gore amendment and two others. The first was McCarthy's amendment, rejected by the Finance Committee, to repeal the 4 percent dividend credit, for an estimated revenue gain of $350 million per year. It was accepted, 42-41, only after Sen. Johnson had persuaded Democrats Robert C. Byrd (W.Va.) and J. Allen Frear Jr. (Del) to change their votes from "nay" to "yea". The other amendment, approved 45-39, was Clark's proposal to limit "expense account" deductions, for a gain of $250 million yearly.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 20 -- McCarthy -- Repeal the 4 percent tax credit on dividend income, from domestic corporations, exceeding $50 (the amount excluded from taxable income), effective Dec. 31, 1960. Roll-call vote, 42-41.

Gore -- Provide that producers of minerals could not compute the percentage depletion allowance on the selling price of the finished product. Roll call, 87-0.

Clark -- Prohibit individuals and corporations from claiming tax deductions for entertainment expenses, except for food and beverages, for the purchase of gifts costing more than $10, or for dues or initiation fees to social, athletic or sporting clubs. Roll call, 45-32.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 20 -- Kenneth B. Keating (R N.Y.) -- Reduce the tax on local telephone service from 10 percent to 6 percent for taxpayers living in states or localities which levy a 4 percent local telephone tax to be used for state or local purposes. Voice.

William Proxmire (D Wis.) -- Provide for withholding at their source a 20 percent income tax on interest and dividends. Roll call, 24-62.

Clark -- Tax gains from the sale or exchange of depreciable property used in a trade or business and held more than six months at the ordinary income tax rates instead of at the capital gains rate. Roll call, 16-69.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Repeal the current across-the-board 27.5 percent depletion allowance for oil and gas producers and substitute the following scale: 27.5 percent on the first $1 million of annual income from oil and gas properties, 21 percent on annual income between $1 million and $5 million and 15 percent on annual income in excess of $5 million. Roll call, 30-56.

Russell B. Long (D La.) -- Increase by $144 million a year the federal share of the cost of public assistance payments to needy aged, blind and disabled persons and dependent children. Roll call, 37-45.

Conference

REPORT -- Senate-House conferees June 25 reported a compromise version of HR 12381 (H Rept 2005), minus both the McCarthy and Clark amendments. As a substitute for the latter, the conferees added a provision calling for reports on the effectiveness of administrative steps to curb excessive "expense account" deductions. The Gore amendment, aimed at excessive claims for depletion allowance, was retained in its essentials but rewritten.

ACTION -- The House agreed to the conference report June 27 by voice vote after brief debate. The Senate concurred June 28, by a 61-32 roll-call vote, with a majority of Democrats voting "nay" in protest against the dropping of the McCarthy and Clark amendments. (For voting, see chart p. 508)

These dissenters objected to the fact that of the six Senate conferees on HR 12381, only two had voted for the two amendments. They also criticized the Ways and Means Committee for its practice of holding up tax-extension bills until the eve of the new fiscal year, leaving the Senate little opportunity to insist on its amendments. Finance Chairman Byrd, who headed Senate conferees, defended their efforts to win over the House conferees, saying "there is no way the Senate conferees can force the conferees of the other body" to do what they do not wish to do.

Byrd also produced a letter from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Dana Latham, regarding the Clark amendment. Latham said the IRS had initiated a new program of scrutinizing claims for entertainment expense deductions, and predicted that the reports called for by the final version of HR 12381 would show "improvement in our efforts to deny deductions for business expenses which are not proper deductions under the law."

RELATED DEVELOPMENT -- June 27 -- In a decision paralleling, in effect, adoption of the Gore amendment, the Supreme Court ruled, in U.S. v. Cannelton Sewer Pipe Co., that the depletion allowance was calculable only on gross income from "commercially marketable mineral products," the cut-off point being "where the ordinary miner shipped the product of his mine."

OTHER TAX BILLS

The unwillingness of Congress to approve any tax cuts for the general taxpayer in 1960 did not prevent the legislators from enacting five other bills embodying tax relief for smaller groups of taxpayers. These measures were as follows:

Cabaret Tax. HR 2164, passed by the House Sept. 1, 1959 and by the Senate March 29, 1960 by voice votes, reduced the cabaret tax from 20 percent to 10 percent. Both House and Senate reports (H Rept 817, S Rept 1084) said the 20-percent tax, affecting establishments offering entertainment with the service of food or beverages, was "discriminatory" and had had "a serious adverse effect on the employment of musicians and other entertainers." Although the Treasury opposed the bill, which involved a revenue loss of $20 million annually, the President signed it April 8 (PL 86-422).

Mining Deductions. HR 4251, passed by the House Sept. 9, 1959 and by the Senate June 23, 1960 by voice votes, removed the four-year time limit imposed by previous law on the deductibility of exploration expenditures (up to a maximum of $400,000) for ore or mineral deposits other than oil and gas. Both House and Senate reports (H Rept 1054, S Rept 1137) said the four-year limit discriminated against "the smallest producers." The Treasury opposed HR 4251, saying the revenue loss "would be substantial and the benefit would accrue largely to established miners." But the President signed the bill July 6 (PL 86-594).

Medical Expenses. HR 9660 amended the law limiting deductions for medical expenses to 3 percent of gross income for taxpayers under 65, to permit such taxpayers unlimited deductions for medical expenses incurred in behalf of dependent parents 65 or over -- a benefit already available to taxpayers themselves 65 or over. The new benefit, involving an estimated revenue loss of $50 million, was added by the Senate Finance Committee to a minor tax measure (HR 9660) passed by the House Feb. 8, 1960 and by the Senate March 29. House conferees accepted the amendment (H Rept 1549), but rejected another one added by the Senate, granting a $600 deduction to taxpayers who maintain foreign students in their homes while attending American high schools. (A somewhat similar benefit was included in a later bill, however. See below.) Senate and House agreed to the conference report May 4 and 5, and the President signed HR 9660 May 14 (PL 86-470).

Dealers' Reserves. HR 8684 was designed to overcome a 1959 Supreme Court ruling that auto dealers and other merchants who sell their installment contracts to finance companies must pay tax on the full amount of a customer's note, including that portion known as the "dealer's reserve" withheld by the finance company until the note is paid off. Previously dealers had been reporting as income only the amount actually received from the finance company at the time of sale, accounting for the reserve payment when it was received. The bill provided alternate methods for spreading out tax payments on reserves acquired prior to the 1959 ruling. Passed in different forms by voice votes of the House Sept. 9, 1959 and the Senate March 28, 1960, HR 8684 emerged from conference April 21 (H Rept 1548), was approved by Senate and House May 4 and 5, and signed by the President May 13 (PL 86-459).

Omnibus. HR 10960, a minor measure dealing with the cigar excise tax passed by the House Aug. 24, 1960, became the traditional session-end vehicle for the enactment of a number of other tax provisions, six of which had previously been incorporated in two other House-passed bills (HR 5547, 7885) reported by the Senate Finance Committee but never called up. All of the additional provisions were offered as amendments to HR 10960 on the Senate floor before passage of the bill Aug. 28 and accepted by House conferees in their report (H Rept 2214) agreed to by both chambers Aug. 31. The President signed the bill Sept. 14 (PL 86-779). Included were the following provisions:

FNMA Stock -- Institutions selling mortgage paper to the Federal National Mortgage Assn. are required to buy FNMA common stock equal to 2 percent of the mortgages sold, paying the issue price of $100 par value even though the stock sells in the market for as little as $55. HR 10960 authorized such institutions to deduct the excess of issue price over market price as an ordinary and necessary business expense in the year of purchase, as had been the practice before a 1958 Internal Revenue Service ruling that the entire FNMA stock purchase price must be capitalized. Sent to the President originally as HR 7947 and vetoed May 14 because of its retroactive features, the provision was revised and passed by the House June 27 as HR 7885. Reported to the Senate Aug. 24 (S Rept 1910), along with unrelated amendments, the provision was then added to HR 10960.

Virgin Islands -- This provision, designed to prevent windfall gains to U.S. taxpayers in the Virgin Islands, was passed by the House originally as HR 5547 on Sept. 9, 1959. Reported to the Senate June 29, 1960 (S Rept 1767), along with unrelated amendments, the provision was later added to HR 10960.

Unrelated Students -- When House conferees refused to accept a Senate amendment to HR 9660 granting a $600 deduction for maintenance of foreign students attending American high schools (see above), the Finance Committee added a revised version to HR 5547 allowing as a charitable deduction up to $600 a year paid by a taxpayer to maintain any unrelated student in his home while attending school through the 12th grade, pursuant to a written agreement with charitable organizations. When HR 5547 was not called up, this provision was incorporated in HR 10960 and accepted by the House.

Real Estate Trusts -- HR 12559, reported (H Rept 2020) to the House June 28 and passed next day, extended to real estate investment trusts the same privilege enjoyed by regulated investment companies of distributing income to shareholders without payment of the corporation tax. A similar provision was offered on the Senate floor as an amendment to HR 10960 and accepted by the House.

Lighters -- To help American producers of mechanical lighters, swamped by imports of cheaper lighters that climbed from 460,000 units in 1950 to 46 million in 1959, the Ways and Means Committee March 28 reported HR 8273 (H Rept 1430), reducing the excise tax from a flat 10 percent of the selling price to a tax of 10 cents for lighters selling for $1 or more, and 10 percent for those selling for less than $1. The Senate Finance Committee added the same provision to HR 7885. When neither bill reached the floor, it was added by the Senate to HR 10960 and accepted by the House.

Estimated Tax -- At the request of the Treasury, the Finance Committee added a provision to HR 7885, later incorporated as an amendment to HR 10960, designed to eliminate nontaxable declarations of estimated income required by previous law. The provision provided, in effect, that no declaration would be required in any case in which the estimated tax liability amounted to less than $40.

Lead-Zinc Duties. Before reporting HR 5547 June 29 (S Rept 1767), the Finance Committee attached to it the substance of S 3698, introduced by Sen. Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.), designed to replace quotas on lead and zinc imports imposed by President Eisenhower in 1958, with a set of fixed and flexible import duties tied to the market price of lead and zinc. (1958 Almanac p. 321) In minority views, Sens. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and Albert Gore (D Tenn.) opposed the amendment as "an attempt to undermine our reciprocal trade program and a return to log-rolling on tariffs," which would open a "Pandora's box" of demands from other industries for similar favors. The Senate took no further action on HR 5547 as reported, nor was any effort made to add the lead-zinc amendment to another bill. The Ways and Means Committee Aug. 17 reported an identical bill (HR 11584 --

H Rept 2105), but it did not reach the floor. President Eisenhower, who opposed the measure, also vetoed a lead-zinc subsidy bill. (See p. 253)

Du Pont Relief. A second provision added by the Finance Committee to HR 5547 on which no further action was taken, was the substance of S 200, introduced by Sen. J. Allen Frear Jr. (D Del.), designed to aid stockholders of the Du Pont Co. in the wake of a 1957 Supreme Court ruling that Du Pont's holdings of 63 million shares of General Motors stock constituted a violation of the anti-trust laws. In further proceedings, the Justice Department sought to force Du Pont to sell its GM shares, and when a lower court ruled Oct. 2, 1959 against divestiture, the decision was appealed to the Supreme Court, where the case was still awaiting argument as of Dec. 1, 1960.

Under existing law, sale of the 63 million GM shares (valued at $2.8 billion) under a divestiture order would entail a tax liability to Du Pont stockholders of an estimated $1.3 billion. The Frear formula, incorporated in HR 5547, would have cut this to an estimated $63 million, by basing the tax on the original cost to Du Pont of $2.10 per GM share rather than on the current market value. Stockholders subsequently selling their GM shares would then pay the lower capital gains rate on the difference between $2.10 and the selling price. Sens. Douglas and Gore, noting that the divestiture issue was still before the courts, objected that "tax relief of the enormous amounts contemplated is against the public interest."

Capital Gains. In his Budget Message, the President said that "administration of the depreciation provisions is being hampered by the attempts of some taxpayers to claim excessive depreciation before disposing of their property." He proposed an amendment making gains from the sale or exchange of depreciable personal property (plant and equipment) taxable as ordinary income rather than capital gains, to the extent that such gains exceeded depreciation deductions already claimed. The Ways and Means Committee March 2-3 held hearings on bills (HR 10491, 10492) incorporating the proposed change, at which opposition was expressed by spokesmen for the National Coal Assn., American Cotton Manufacturing Institute, Chamber of Commerce of the U.S., Air Transport Assn., American Mining Congress, and Machinery and Allied Products Institute. The Committee voted March 22 to postpone further action indefinitely. A similar provision, offered June 20 by Sen. Clark as an amendment to the 1960 tax extension bill (HR 12381), was rejected by a roll-call vote of 16-69 (see above).

Trusts and Partnerships. HR 9662, designed to correct unintended benefits and hardships in the income tax treatment of estates, trusts, beneficiaries, partners and partnerships, was reported (H Rept 1231) Jan. 28, 1960 by the Ways and Means Committee and passed by voice vote of the House Feb. 4. Amended by the Senate Finance Committee, the bill was reported June 18 (S Rept 1616) but never taken to the floor -- reportedly because of strong opposition from interests that would have been affected by provisions in the bill relating to multiple trusts. Work on the omnibus measure began in 1956 with the appointment of advisory groups, the bulk of whose recommendations (made in 1958) had been incorporated in HR 9662 as reported to the House.

State Tax Study. PL 86-272, enacted in 1959, a stop-gap measure dealing with interstate taxation, also directed the House Judiciary and Senate Finance Committees to make a study of state income taxes on incomes derived from interstate commerce and to report to Congress by July 1, 1962. (1959 Almanac p. 280) On June 14, 1960 the Finance Committee reported a bill (S 3549 -- S Rept 1574) enlarging the study to cover state sales and use taxes, following a March 21 Supreme Court ruling (in Scripto, Inc. v Carson) that Florida could require a Georgia firm to collect use taxes on pens sold in Florida by independent jobbers. The Senate June 18 passed S 3549 by voice vote, but it died in the House Rules Committee.

Federal-State Relations

Tax-related developments in 1960 included these:

President Eisenhower April 12 dissolved at its own request, the Joint Federal-State Action Committee, at the same time releasing its final report. Created on the President's initiative in 1957 and composed of Governors and Executive Branch officials, the Committee reported that its usefulness had "come to a close" when Congress in 1959 agreed to establish a permanent Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. (1957 Almanac p. 797; 1958 Almanac p. 326; 1959 Almanac p. 256)

In its final report, the Committee acknowledged that it had failed to achieve its principal objective: the transfer of specific functions and revenue sources from the federal to state governments. The only such transfer on which the Committee itself agreed called for turning over federal programs involving grants for vocational education and sewage plant construction, along with a portion of the 10 percent excise tax on local telephone service. Transmitted to Congress by the President in 1958 the proposal was studiously ignored. The Committee couldn't agree on other proposals for transfer of the school lunch program and public assistance programs "mainly because of unresolved problems of allocating federal revenue sources, on a state-by-state basis, to match the financial responsibility to be transferred to each state."

One tangible accomplishment for which the Committee took credit was the enactment in 1959 of amendments to the Atomic Energy Act, paving the way for transfer of regulatory authority over radioactive materials from the Atomic Energy Commission to the states. Other matters on which the Committee initiated studies or recommendations in 1959 included: regulation of migratory labor, minimum state-local expenditures for disaster relief, revision of estate taxes and flood insurance, and the strengthening of state workmen's compensation laws.

Pending discovery of a workable solution to the fiscal problem, the Committee concluded, "no large-scale program shifts are likely." For the future, it argued, "the best way to avoid an unnecessary concentration of governmental responsibility in Washington is to prevent in advance, whenever possible, the need for 'crash' programs involving the national government. In some measure, the present degree of federal participation in state and local affairs reflects previous failures to anticipate needs."

The 26-member Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations May 25 approved a study program for 1960. It selected the following areas of study: real property tax; estate tax credit; investment of idle cash balances by state and local governments; cooperative tax administration; fiscal capacity and tax effort of state and local governments; new grant-in-aid statutes; block grants and public health categorical grants-in-aid; state laws and local governments; federal, state and local governments and post-high school education; and metropolitan mass transportation facilities and federal, state and local governments.

COLLEGE CONSTRUCTION

Both the House Education and Labor Committee and the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee held hearings in 1960 on proposals for a new, long-range program of federal aid to colleges for construction of housing and classroom facilities. Also considered at the Senate hearings were several measures proposing loans or grants to needy college students.

Neither of the two Committees took action beyond hearings, and the various proposals died with the adjournment of the 86th Congress. However, a stop-gap housing measure (H J Res 784) was enacted by Congress in the waning days of the 1960 session carrying $500 million additional authorizations for the existing college housing loan program. (See story p. 271)

House

COMMITTEE -- Education and Labor, Special Education Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 21-25, 1960 on HR 4267, an Administration-backed proposal for federal aid in construction of additional college and university facilities.

TESTIMONY -- March 21 -- Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Arthur S. Flemming said colleges and universities faced a "major crisis" by 1964 because of an anticipated increase of one million students over 1959 enrollments. He said surveys indicated colleges would need to spend $9 billion for expansion in 1960-65 but probably could raise only $6 billion. "I would plead with this Congress to deal with this problem at this session," he said.

Flemming also said he would regard it as "unfortunate" if Congress tried to extend the existing college housing program, providing only low-interest loans. President Eisenhower in his January Budget Message requested that the college housing program be terminated. (See p. 271)

Flemming endorsed a bill (HR 4267), introduced in February 1959 by Rep. Peter Frelinghuysen Jr. (R N.J.), to provide federal aid for construction as follows: cash grants, limited to $5 million to any one institution and $500 million over-all, to help colleges repay principal and interest on long-term construction bonds they sold to the public. Federal grants to any institution were to be restricted to one quarter of the face value of the bonds sold and were to be made over a 20-year period. Both public and private institutions were to be eligible for the grants. Grants were to be made on bonds sold to raise money for construction of classrooms or housing or both. The bill also proposed Government guarantees of the entire principal and interest of bonds, on which income was taxable, issued by private colleges, up to a total of $1 billion in bonds. (Public institutions would not need the guarantee since they can issue tax-exempt bonds with a ready market.) Flemming said the guarantee would help colleges greatly in obtaining favorable interest rates in selling their bonds.

Under HR 4267, the program was to be administered by HEW rather than the Housing and Home Finance Agency, which handled the existing program.

March 24 -- U.S. Commissioner of Education Lawrence G. Derthick said unless new college classrooms were built, hundreds of qualified young people would be denied an education. He said it was "both appropriate and necessary" for the Federal Government to help colleges build the necessary facilities.

Everett Case, American Council on Education, said federal loans would help relieve needs but that outright grants might be necessary in some cases.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Senate Labor and Public Welfare, Education Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- June 13-21 on a variety of college-aid bills, as follows:

- The Administration bill (S 1017), identical to HR 4267. The bill was introduced by Sen. Leverett Saltonstall with numerous Republican co-sponsors.
- A bill (S 3007) introduced by Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.), with 20 co-sponsors, to establish a $125 million revolving fund to make low-interest 50-year loans to colleges for construction of classrooms, laboratories and other teaching facilities. Clark Feb. 10 said it was "self-evident that it is at least as desirable" to build teaching facilities as to build dormitories and other housing, for which the college housing loan program already existed. The Clark bill was proposed as an amendment, but withdrawn before it came to a vote, to the Senate version (S 8) of the aid-to-public-schools bill. (See story p. 232)
- A measure (S 879) introduced by Sen. Clifford P. Case (R N.J.) to authorize $250 million over five years in federal grants to the states for establishment of public junior colleges, the states to match every $2 of federal money with $1 of their own.
- A bill (S 2710) introduced by Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) to provide a permanent program of federal guarantees of $1 billion a year on loans to college students. The bill would permit a student to borrow up to $1,000 per year, with a total limit of $5,000, at 5 percent interest from the college, which in turn could borrow it from private lending institutions.
- A bill (S 1087) introduced by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) to authorize federal scholarships for needy and able college students. The bill, authorizing scholarships of up to $1,500 per year for each eligible student, would cost up to $460 million over the first four years and $184 million for each year thereafter.

TESTIMONY -- June 13 -- Sen. Clark, in an opening statement, said the existing college housing program had been extremely successful but the Federal Government should provide financial assistance for constructing academic as well as housing facilities. Because 3.5 million college students were expected by 1970, Clark said, it was impossible to "delay any longer."

Flemming said by 1965 additional college facilities requiring an estimated $9 billion expenditure would be needed of which the colleges themselves could afford only about $6 billion. If the Government did not "act now" to make up the $3 billion difference, Flemming said, colleges would have to use a disproportionate amount of their resources to construct those facilities and thereby make impossible an adequate salary structure. He presented additional Administration proposals to provide: $225 million in loans to take care of the backlog in applications to the Housing and Home Finance Agency for college housing aid; $600 million (instead of $500 million) in construction grants to colleges and universities with a 30 percent (instead of a 25 percent) debt retirement program over a 25-30 year period.

June 17 -- Sen. Case said colleges had to reject qualified applicants "simply because there is no space" and recommended approval of his bill (S 879) to provide federal aid for the establishment of public junior colleges. He also recommended consideration of a second bill (S 878) he introduced to provide federal aid to help states inventory their college facilities.

Kenneth G. Skaggs of the American Assn. of Junior Colleges supported both Case bills.

Johnson supported his bill and said there would be "no appropriations involved." He said there was a great need for the bill and said he could think of no safer collateral than the Nation's youth.

June 20 -- Everett Case of the American Council on Education said the total construction needs of colleges through 1970 would be about $20 billion, of which two-thirds would be required for academic programs. He recommended approval of a program similar to the Clark bill and also a plan for federal grants to match the institutions' contribution.

David D. Henry of the American Assn. of Land-Grant Colleges and State Universities said construction aid for colleges and universities should take precedence over student loan programs, as it was the "first priority need by all odds."

June 21 -- Eric A. Walker, president of Pennsylvania State University, recommended federal studies to determine the extent of existing educational facilities and those that would be required by 1975, and a federal grant program to match state funds for financing construction of the necessary additional facilities.

CASEIN IMPORTS

HR 9862 -- Reported by House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 1288) Feb. 22, 1960.
- Passed by the House by voice vote March 2.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 1270) April 14.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote May 5. (For roll-call vote on amendment, see p. 494)
- Conference report (H Rept 1884) agreed to by standing vote of the Senate June 17 and by voice vote of the House June 25.

PL 86-562 -- Signed into law June 30.

Congress in 1960 approved two bills extending the duty-free importation of casein, a skim milk by-product used in coated papers, wallboard and other products. Suspension of casein duties was authorized in 1957 (PL 85-257) and was due to lapse March 31, 1960.

The first bill (HR 7456 - PL 86-405) provided a 90-day extension. The second bill (HR 9862 -- PL 86-562) extended the suspension for an additional three years, through June 30, 1963, but prohibited the duty-free entry of caseinates (a soluble form used in foods). HR 9862 also extended for two years, until Aug. 7, 1962, the duty-free entry of copying lathes used for making rough or finished shoe lasts.

Argument over the bill centered on whether imported casein could be converted to food uses cheaply enough to compete on the U.S. market; those who said it could wanted the duty-free status of any casein intended to be used for food purposes to be ended, so that casein could enter duty-free only if intended for non-food use. Others, whose opinion prevailed, said only caseinates could be imported cheaply enough to compete as food on the U.S. market, and therefore only caseinates should lose duty-free status.

First Casein Bill (HR 7456)

HR 7456 was reported Aug. 10, 1959, by the House Ways and Means Committee (H Rept 823) and was passed by the House Aug. 18, 1959, extending the duty-free importation of casein for three years. The bill was reported without change Jan. 13, 1960, by the Senate Finance Committee (S Rept 1022). In Senate debate March 28, Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R Iowa) said the bill was of concern to the domestic soybean industry and Sen. George D. Aiken (R Vt.) said the dairy industry was "particularly interested in seeing that casein is not imported and used as a substitute for powdered milk."

In order to afford the objecting groups an opportunity for a committee hearing, the Senate by voice vote agreed to an amendment by Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) limiting the duty-free extension to a 90-day period, through July 1, 1960. The amended bill was passed March 28 by the Senate; the House March 31 agreed to the Senate amendments and the measure was signed by the President April 4.

Second Bill (HR 9862)

The Senate Finance Committee held hearings on casein importation in April. The Committee approved a three-year extension of the duty-free importation of the product, without restriction, and April 14 included an amendment to that effect in a bill it reported (HR 9862 -- S Rept 1270) extending the duty-free import of lathes used in making shoe lasts.

The Senate passed HR 9862 by voice vote May 5, after adopting by a 31-23 roll-call vote an amendment by Sen. Vance Hartke (D Ind.) excluding from the duty-free provisions any casein imported for conversion or use in edible food stuffs. (For voting, see chart p. 494) A Hartke amendment limiting to one year the extension of duty-free importation for other casein was rejected by voice vote.

DEBATE -- May 5 -- Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah) -- The Bureau of Customs said it would be impossible to administer the amendment prohibiting the conversion of duty-free inedible casein into food.

George D. Aiken (R Vt.) -- The Hartke amendment would merely state that casein imported "for the manufacture of paint and glue shall not be used for baby food". The "three million dairy people in this country need protection against that kind of business."

Conference

House-Senate conferees June 16 rejected the Hartke amendment barring duty-free entry of casein intended for human consumption, recommending in its place an amendment barring duty-free entry of caseinates (H Rept 1884).

The Senate June 17 agreed to the conference report by standing vote after a debate in which Sen. Russell B. Long (D La.), urging a new conference, said the Senate conferees had thrown the Hartke amendment "in the trash basket". Sen. Wallace F. Bennett (R Utah), supporting the conference report, said the new language made the law easier to administer.

The House June 25 agreed to the conference report by voice vote and the President signed the measure into law June 30.

MEXICAN FARM LABOR, MIGRANT FARM WORKERS

HR 12759 -- Reported June 22 by House Agriculture Committee (H Rept 1954).
- Passed by the House by voice vote June 29.
- Reported Aug. 23 by Senate Agriculture and Forestry Committee (S Rept 1901).
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by voice vote Aug. 31.
- House agreed to Senate amendments by voice vote Sept. 1.

PL 86-783 -- Signed into law Sept. 14.

After considering a variety of proposals dealing with both domestic and foreign (Mexican) migrant farm labor, Congress took only one action in 1960 -- the passage of a bill (HR 12759) which extended the existing program authorizing recruitment of Mexican workers for U.S. farms six months beyond its June 30, 1961 expiration date. The Administration had opposed any changes in any laws affecting domestic or foreign farm workers in 1960, although Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell said he favored action in 1961 on a minimum wage law for agriculture.

In related developments, a Senate subcommittee held hearings on migrants, the President established the Committee on Migratory Labor on a permanent basis and the Committee issued its second report.

PROVISION -- As enacted into law, HR 12759:

Extended PL 82-78, the basic law relating to the Government's activities in the field of Mexican farm labor, until Dec. 31, 1961.

Background

Extension of the 1951 Mexican farm labor law (PL 82-78) was a repetition of extensions agreed to in 1953, 1955 and 1958. (1951 Almanac p. 95; 1953 Almanac p.116; 1955 Almanac p. 183)

The law authorized the Secretary of Labor to recruit and transport Mexican farm workers (braceros) from recruitment centers outside the U.S. to U.S. reception centers near the Mexican border, where the Labor Department would help workers and employers negotiate contracts. PL 82-78 also required a positive finding from the Secretary of Labor that sufficient domestic labor was not available for the work to be done, and that the employment of foreign workers would not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of similarly employed U.S. workers. The law governed the annual entry of about 350,000 to 450,000 Mexicans for temporary farm work.

The latest extension of the law was recommended Oct. 23, 1959 by a Labor Department study group, which also urged that the Secretary of Labor be given more power under the law to safeguard the jobs and working conditions of Americans who might suffer from competition with the Mexican workers.

The group's report said Mexicans were being used increasingly in year-round and skilled occupations, contrary to the original intent of the legislation. The report added that many employers preferred Mexicans because they represented an assured work force, and that in some areas, almost 100 percent of the seasonal work on certain crop activities was performed by foreign workers.

Under an agreement with the Mexican Government, the report said, the imported workers were given guaranteed employment and free transportation, housing and occupational insurance. It noted that U.S. workers lacked similar protections.

The four-member study group, headed by ex-Sen. Edward J. Thye (R Minn. 1947-59), made these specific recommendations: (1) use of braceros should be confined to necessary crops in temporary labor-shortage situations and to unskilled non-machine jobs; (2) the Secretary should be given power to establish wage rates for Mexicans at the prevailing local levels and at no less than necessary to avoid an adverse effect on U.S. workers; (3) the Secretary should be given power to refuse to certify employment of braceros unless employers had made "positive and direct" efforts first to recruit native U.S. workers in other nearby farms, unless U.S. workers were given benefits equivalent to those given Mexican nationals, or unless employers of Mexicans paid U.S. nationals as much as they paid the braceros; (4) the Secretary should be given power to establish standards for judging whether employment of braceros was having an adverse affect on the wages and conditions of native U.S. workers; and (5) an advisory group with labor, management and public representatives should be set up to advise the Secretary on the bracero program.

During 1960 Secretary Mitchell issued two regulations to foreign migrant farm labor:

- A May 20 directive set standards for the employment of some 6,500 migrant workers from the British West Indies, requiring that employers provide free housing, food at cost, a major portion of transportation costs between jobs in the U.S. and a guarantee of employment during at least three-quarters of the normal hours of work during the contract period.
- Mitchell May 24 announced a new directive, issued jointly with the Government of Mexico, to tighten safety requirements for the transportation of Mexican nationals. Employers of braceros were made responsible for the safe transport of their employees over short distances, and drivers and vehicles were required to meet safety and licensing standards of the states in which they operated.

DOMESTIC AND MIGRATORY FARM LABOR

Although Mitchell's authority over Mexican migrant labor led to controversy in 1960, the major dispute centered around his efforts to regulate the conditions of domestic migrant farm workers. Battle lines were drawn over a Nov. 20, 1959 directive which Mitchell announced despite the objections of Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. The regulation, which went into effect Dec. 30, 1959, required that persons utilizing the U.S. Employment Service (USES) to recruit farm labor provide wages, housing and transportation at least as favorable as those prevailing in the area of employment.

While Mitchell's directive was still being considered for promulgation, Benson Sept. 8 said it contained "the concept of federal intervention and administrative control and regimentation that is contrary to the principles of this Administration and that is so repugnant to agriculture." Benson added that no regulations dealing with farm labor should go into effect "until adequate study can be made".

The directive also was challenged in hearings in March 1960 before the House Agriculture Equipment, Supplies and Manpower Subcommittee. Committee members and Agriculture Department witnesses denied that Mitchell had the right to regulate migrant working conditions through USES, but others cited a Justice Department brief upheld the Secretary's November directive as a legitimate interpretation of the 1933 Wagner-Peyser Act under which the employment service was created. The Attorney General's opinion, issued July 2, 1959, in response to an inquiry from Mitchell, said that Mitchell had the right to issue regulations, but could enforce them only by withdrawing the services of the USES from employers who refused to conform to the standards.

Growing out of this inter-Departmental feud were legislative proposals advanced during 1960 to give the Secretary of Agriculture an equal voice -- i.e., a veto -- in the formulation of standards controlling working conditions of domestic migratory farm workers. The issue was, in fact, tied to the extension of the bracero law in bills before the House Agriculture Committee. Mitchell heightened the dispute May 10, 1960 by releasing the findings of a farm labor study by his Department which he said he hoped would form the basis for legislation in 1961.

The study recommended a federal minimum wage law for agriculture. It said such a law for hired farm workers was both "desirable and feasible."

In order to be effective, the study said, a minimum wage law would have to be applied to 20 percent or more of the nation's 2 million hired farm workers. In addition, the study said, it would have to be applied on farms in each of the major farming areas, on farms along the routes of the major domestic migratory labor movements, and "most of all" on farms in labor-surplus areas.

(For Fact Sheet on the domestic migrant farm labor issue, describing the federal and state laws dealing with migrant labor, the role of migrant workers in the farm labor force, the proposals for changes in the laws, and the stands of government and private groups on the proposed changes, see 1960 CQ Weekly Report p. 409)

LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS

Two bills (HR 9871 and 9875) were introduced in 1960 aimed at restricting the Secretary of Labor's power over migrant workers. Introduced Jan. 25 by Reps. E.C. Gathings (D Ark.) and Clifford G. McIntire (R Maine), respectively, both bills would have required the Secretary of Labor to obtain the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture in issuing regulations involving both domestic migrants and Mexican nationals, and would have extended the bracero law two years to June 30, 1963. In addition, HR 9875 specifically denied any authority to the Labor Secretary to regulate the wages, hours or working conditions of domestic farm workers.

A third and contrary measure (HR 11211) was introduced March 16 by Rep. George McGovern (D S.D.) to repeal the bracero program by 1966 and give the Labor Secretary complete authority over migrants' working conditions, both domestic and Mexican.

In direct contrast to the two House proposals to tie the hands of the Secretary of Labor were bills introduced in the Senate to provide federal aid to the states for education of migrant farm workers and their children and to require labor contractors (crew leaders) furnishing migrant farm labor to register with the Secretary of Labor. These measures were studied in the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee's Special Subcommittee on Migratory Labor, headed by Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.).

The Senate regulatory and aid proposals never got beyond the Subcommittee, but measures similar to the House bills restricting the Secretary of Labor did come before the Senate as amendments to the minimum wage bill (HR 12677) passed Aug. 18. The proposed amendments were rejected on the Senate floor. Unlike the legislation proposed in the House, the unsuccessful Senate amendments would not have interfered with the Secretary of Labor's power over the bracero program. However, they would have barred him from regulating working conditions for all or part of the domestic migrant labor force. (See below)

Passage of the legislation (HR 12759) to extend the Mexican farm labor law is dealt with in the following section. A subsequent section covers the unsuccessful Senate bills on domestic migrant workers.

MEXICAN LABOR LAW

House

COMMITTEE -- House Agriculture, Equipment, Supplies and Manpower Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- March 22-25 and March 31 on HR 9871, HR 9875, HR 11211 and related bills.

TESTIMONY -- March 22 -- Matt Triggs, American Farm Bureau Federation, said the Labor Department order setting wage standards for migrants would hurt the small farmer. Operators of large farms could switch to labor-saving machinery to avoid paying higher wage rates, he said, but small farmers could not afford to.

Spokesmen for the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives and the National Farm Labor Users Committee and several individual farm operators joined Triggs in support of HR 9871 and HR 9875.

March 23 -- H.R. Adams, Agricultural Council of Arkansas, called for extension of PL 78.

March 24 -- The National Grange, represented by Fred Bailey, said Labor Secretary Mitchell had exceeded his authority when he set standards for migrant workers. He also recommended extension of the bracero program.

Andrew Biemiller, legislative director of the AFL-CIO, supported HR 11211.

March 25 -- A spokesman for the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. called for an immediate end to the practice of importing Mexican braceros.

J. Banks Young of the National Cotton Council said Mexican workers were necessary in the cotton belt.

March 31 -- Clarence Miller and Newell Brown, assistant secretaries of Agriculture and Labor, respectively, said the Administration would not support any farm labor legislation in 1960. Brown said the Labor Department's plan to support minimum wage legislation for migrants also had been put off. Miller said Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson was opposed to the two bills to give him joint authority with the Secretary of Labor over migrants.

TWO BILLS REPORTED

ACTION -- The Subcommittee April 8 voted 5-0 to approve an amended version of HR 9875, striking the provision which would have given the Secretary of Agriculture a veto over any changes in the bracero program as administered by the Secretary of Labor. The approved bill, however, prohibited the Secretary of Labor from regulating the wages, hours or working conditions of domestic farm workers and would have nullified his Nov. 20, 1959, regulation. The bill also extended PL 78 two-years beyond its June 30, 1961 expiration date.

The full House Agriculture Committee May 23 reported HR 12176 (H Rept 1642), a clean bill containing the major provisions of HR 9875, as amended by the Subcommittee.

The report specifically attacked Mitchell's 1959 directive and the "legal logic" of the Attorney General's opinion on which Mitchell based his right to issue the regulations. The report called attention to a subcommittee counsel statement that the Wagner-Peyser Act was "a service statute, not a regulatory statute", and denied that anywhere in the legislative history of the law was there any indication of intent to use the act "to authorize regulation of wages or working conditions of farm workers." The report interpreted the Attorney General's opinion as saying that the Secretary of Labor could issue regulations because he had done so in the past and the Congress had not objected. Attacking this reasoning, the report said that the Labor Department was proceeding without a "specific mandate" and thus usurping legislative powers.

In minority views, Reps. Merwin Coad (D Iowa), Lester R. Johnson (D Wis.) and George McGovern (D S.D.) described HR 12176 as "shocking". Passage of the bill, the three Democrats said, would "increase the destitution, the underemployment and the exploitation of 2.3 million domestic farm workers who are the poorest of poor in our Nation."

They said extension of the Mexican farm labor program "would increase the stain...on our national values and prestige."

They recommended an alternative measure (HR 11211) which would reduce the number of Mexican migrants brought in each year by 20 percent yearly until 1965 when the program would be eliminated entirely.

The Committee's action was also attacked by the Labor Department and the AFL-CIO. Secretary Mitchell June 15 said several improvements in the Mexican labor program were needed and there was ample time to make changes in the law in 1961 before the program expired. The AFL-CIO's Economic Policy Committee June report said the bill would further "undermine the opportunity of (domestic) farm workers...by subjecting them to the competition of close to half a million foreign workers." If the law were to be extended, the report said, it should be done so only temporarily and only after substantial reform.

Following this expression of opposition, the Committee June 22 reported a new bill (HR 12759-H Rept 1954) without the controversial restrictions on the Secretary of Labor. HR 12759 simply extended PL 78 for two years.

Floor Action

The House June 29 passed HR 12759 by voice vote. Much of the debate on the bill centered on attempts to write into the Mexican farm labor law floor provisions that would permit the Secretary of Labor to regulate the bracero program more closely. Opponents of a simple extension of the program, which HR 12759 provided, argued that the Mexican migrants, currently being imported at the rate of about 450,000 a year, deprived domestic farm workers of employment and depressed working conditions.

An amendment by Rep. John E. Fogarty (D R.I.), rejected by a 51-138 standing vote, would have given the Labor Secretary complete authority over both foreign and domestic migrants' working conditions.

Proponents of a simple extension of the bracero law, including Congressmen from California, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona where most of the Mexicans find work, contended the Secretary of Labor already had authority under the law to regulate the program by permitting the importation of Mexicans only when domestic labor is not available. They said many crops could not be harvested without the Mexican labor because (1) the domestic labor market could not meet the peak demands for seasonal farm work and (2) domestic workers were not interested in the so-called stoop labor which the Mexicans were willing to undertake.

The chief spokesman for the forces seeking to amend HR 12759 was Rep. George McGovern (D S.D.), who said that in areas using large numbers of Mexicans, wages and working conditions were worsening. From a program providing temporary workers for unskilled, seasonal work on necessary crops, it had evolved, McGovern said, into a vehicle permitting the year-round employment of many Mexicans, often in skilled or semi-skilled jobs.

PROVISION -- As sent to the Senate, HR 12759:

Extended the law permitting the importation of Mexican nationals for U.S. farm work through June 30, 1963.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

June 29 -- Fogarty -- Substitute for the Committee bill the provisions of a measure providing a two-year extension of the Mexican farm labor law, and giving the Secretary of Labor complete authority to set employment standards for migrant workers, both foreign and domestic. Standing vote, 51-138.

Alfred E. Santangelo (D N.Y.) -- Add to the Fogarty amendment a section prohibiting the entry of Mexicans for any farm labor other than the cultivation and harvesting of food supplies. Standing, 33-122.

John F. Shelley (D Calif.) -- Limit the extension of the bracero program to one year. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Agriculture and Forestry.

ACTION -- Aug. 23 reported HR 12759 (S Rept 1901) with an amendment cutting the extension of PL 78 from two years to six months. The Agriculture and Labor Departments both suggested deferring action on an extension until 1961, but the Committee report said that extension of the law through 1961 was essential so that farmers could make their plans and financing for that year with the assurance that labor would be available at harvest time.

FLOOR ACTION -- The Senate by voice vote Aug. 31 passed the Committee-approved six-months extension (HR 12759), and the House Sept. 1 agreed by voice vote to the Senate change reducing extension from two years to six months.

DOMESTIC MIGRANT WORKERS

Additional developments in 1960 on the domestic migrant worker problem:

- A special Senate subcommittee held hearings intermittently from August 1959 through July 1960 and approved several bills dealing with migrant workers.
- An attempt was made to amend the minimum wage bill (HR 12677) on the Senate floor to bar the Secretary of Labor from regulating the conditions of farm workers.
- President Eisenhower gave permanent status to the President's Committee on Migratory Labor; the Committee also released its second report.

Following are the details:

Subcommittee Hearings

COMMITTEE -- Senate Labor and Public Welfare, Special Migratory Labor Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Aug. 7, 26, Sept. 28, 30, Oct. 1, Nov. 30, Dec. 7-8, 1959; May 12, 16, 18, July 8, 11, 1960.

BACKGROUND -- The Subcommittee was established in August 1959 with Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.) as chairman. Others members: Jennings Randolph (D W.Va.), James E. Murray (D Mont.), Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.) and Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.). Testimony:

The AFL-CIO and National Agricultural Workers Union (AFL-CIO) supported the aims of bills requiring licensing and registration of migrant worker crew leaders (S 1778), extending the minimum wage law to agriculture (S 1085) and eliminating the exemption of children under 16 in agricultural work from child labor sections of the Fair Labor Standards Act (S 2141).

The Administration opposed bills (S 2864, 2865) to provide federal grants to state education programs for migrant workers and their children. Ralph C.M. Flynt of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said the Government should and did provide leadership in the field, but not cash aid. The Florida Council of Chief State School Officers said the program needed federal money.

ACTION -- The Special Subcommittee June 24 approved a clean bill containing the provisions for farm labor registration in S 1778 and S 2498.

The Labor and Public Welfare Education Subcommittee the same day approved S 2864 and S 2865, but the full Committee took no action in 1960.

S 2864 would have established a five-year program of matching grants of federal aid to the states for the education of families of migrant workers. The major cost of the program would have come under Title I, a program of payments during the regular school year, operating on a 75-25 matching basis for the first two years and a nearly 50-50 payment ratio for the last three. Cost of the first two years was estimated at $2,044,025 annually for payments to states giving regular school-term education to the children of migrant workers. No estimates of the cost of the last three years were available, but Subcommittee sources said there would be a considerable decline in federal expenditures when the 50-50 ratio went into effect. Title II -- for special summer schools for migrants' children -- and Title III -- for planning funds for education projects -- carried annual authorizations of $300,000 and $250,000, respectively, for each of the five years of the program's operation. Thus the estimated cost of each of the first two years would be $2,594,025, with $1,650,000 being spent over the final three years for Titles II and III.

S 2865 would have set up a similar federal aid program for the education of adult workers in basic health, cleanliness and dietary practices at a cost of $1,250,000 for five years. Both S 2864 and 2865 were introduced in January by Williams.

Minimum Wage Amendments

Two floor amendments involving the Secretary of Labor's right to regulate employment of migrant agricultural workers were proposed to the minimum wage bill (HR 12677) passed by the Senate Aug. 18. Both amendments were defeated on roll-call votes Aug. 16. (See story p. 309)

The first, proposed by Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), would have prohibited the Secretary of Labor from making regulations for the conditions of employment of any U.S. migrant agricultural workers. The second, a substitute proposed by Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R Ky.), would have prohibited regulating workers who did not move from state to state. The Cooper substitute amendment was defeated 18-80 and the Holland proposal 42-56 on roll-call votes. (For voting, see chart p. 513)

Migratory Labor Committee

President Eisenhower Nov. 15 announced an Executive Order formally establishing the President's Committee on Migratory Labor. The Committee had existed on an informal basis since 1954. Its members, as in the past, were the Secretaries of Labor (chairman), Agriculture, Interior, and Health, Education and Welfare, and the Housing and Home Finance Agency Administrator.

The Committee Nov. 15 released its second report.

Mitchell, in releasing the report, said several important advances had been made since 1956, namely: extension of Social Security benefits to many migrant farm workers; issuance of safety regulations for interstate transport of migrant workers by bus and truck; establishment of 21 new state migratory labor committees, making 28 states that had such committees; strengthening of regulations governing interstate recruitment of farm workers through USES; adoption of migrant housing laws by several new states, bringing states with such regulations to half the total states; expansion of the Annual Worker Plan, providing continuous employment for agricultural migrants; strengthening of administration of PL 78, the Mexican farm labor law, to protect interests of Mexican workers in the U.S. and prevent adverse effects to domestic workers; and expansion of public health services available to migrants.

The Committee made nine major recommendations for further action: (1) continuing federal review of foreign worker import programs to guard against adverse effects on U.S. workers; (2) elimination of residence requirements as a condition for state receipt of federal funds for state health, education and welfare programs; (3) passage of legislation regulating activities of crew leaders and others who supplied migrants to farmers; (4) extension of state workmen's compensation coverage to farm workers; (5) extension of state child labor laws to farm workers; (6) adoption and enforcement of housing regulations governing seasonal workers in states without such regulations; (7) state reimbursement to local school boards for education of children of migrant workers, (8) extension of state and local child welfare services, including day care, to migrant children; (9) elimination by states of residence requirements in state health, education, rehabilitation and welfare programs.

CONGRESS INCREASES DEFENSE BUDGET

- Conference report (H Rept 2049) agreed to June 30 by the House and Senate by roll-call votes of 402-5 and 83-3, respectively. (See p. 460, 510)

PL 86-601 -- Signed into law July 7. Final appropriation: $39,996,608,000.

After strenuous controversy, generated both by Democratic critics of Administration defense policies and by critics within the Administration itself, Congress in 1960 approved a defense appropriation of $39,996,608,000 for fiscal 1961. The appropriation was $780,708,000 higher than the President's revised request of April 6, which itself was $119.1 million lower than the original January budget estimates. In addition to new funds the Congress authorized transfers from stock funds totaling $365.5 million.

In a separate bill, Congress appropriated $994,855,000 for military construction. (See story p. 403)

Not all of the unbudgeted funds voted by Congress were released for spending by the Defense Department. At the end of September, $388 million still was "frozen".

Background

Comparable fiscal 1960 appropriations totaled $39,234,239,000 for regular Defense Department activities. This sum, nearly $54 million lower than fiscal 1959 appropriations, is shown below broken down by organizational units:

Army	$ 9,315,000,000

SPENDING TREND

The Defense Department budget had been a subject of continuing controversy since the Eisenhower Administration introduced the "new look" concept in 1953 and proclaimed its goal of stabilizing defense spending at about $33 billion a year. That level was never reached; after rising to a postwar high of $43.6 billion in fiscal 1953 (the last year of the Korean war), defense spending dropped to $35.5 billion in fiscal 1955, then climbed each year to reach $41.2 billion in fiscal 1959.

The table shows, for the fiscal years 1953 through 1960, expenditures in millions for (1) military defense, (2) development and control of atomic energy, (3) stockpiling and defense production expansion, (4) military assistance, and (5) the total for "major national security."

	(1)	(2)	(3)	(4)	(5)
1953	$43,611	$1,791	$1,008	$3,954	$50,353
1954	40,336	1,895	1,045	3,629	46,904
1955	35,532	1,857	944	2,292	40,626
1956	35,591	1,651	588	2,611	40,641
1957	38,439	1,990	490	2,352	43,270
1958	39,062	2,268	625	2,187	44,142

*Budget Bureau estimates, Jan. 1960.

Uniformed personnel dropped from 3.5 million to 2.5 million during this period, but the savings that accrued were more than matched by rising expenditures for new weapons. The Air Force in particular found itself spending huge sums to develop a variety of missile systems while at the same time purchasing ever more expensive bombers and fighters. Although appropriations generally fell short of total requests, neither the executive nor legislative branch was able to reverse the trend toward higher expenditures.

In 1957, when an "economy" wave engulfed Congress and the Administration, the legislators lopped $2.4 billion from the Defense Department appropriation request for fiscal 1958. The Capital's mood was suddenly changed, however, when the Soviets placed their first sputnik in orbit on Oct. 4, 1957. One month after reconvening in January 1958, the 85th Congress appropriated in full $1.3 billion requested by the President to speed missile development and expand air defenses.

By the time action on the fiscal 1959 defense appropriation was completed in August 1958, Congress had added $826 million to the Administration request. One year later, however, Congress appropriated $20 million less than requested, after adding substantial amounts for some programs and cutting others. (1959 Almanac p.320)

Budget Message

Perhaps in anticipation of criticism to come, the President's fiscal 1961 Budget Message commented directly on the background of decisions relating to the controversial B-70 long-range, supersonic bomber and airborne alert programs.

The B-70 bomber, "which was planned for initial operational use about 1965," the President said, "would be complementary to but likewise competitive with the four strategic ballistic missile systems, all of which are scheduled to become available earlier.... By 1965, several or all of these systems (Atlas, Polaris, Titan and Minuteman) will have been fully tested and their reliability established. Thus the need for the B-70 as a strategic weapon system is doubtful. However, I am recommending that development work on the B-70 airframe and engines be continued." The goal of this continuation, the President stated, was to have two prototypes "available for flight testing in 1963", when their value could be better determined.

Although President Eisenhower authorized a start toward reaching "a standby alert" of heavy bombers, he forcefully denied the value of a continuous airborne alert. Characterizing it as "neither necessary nor practical", he reported that "such a procedure would, over a relatively short period of time, seriously degrade our overall capability to respond to attack." His own program resulting in dispersal of Strategic Air Command aircraft and facilities, would permit a "large portion" of the heavy bombers and their supporting tankers to get off the ground "within 15 minutes after receiving warning of attack."

In the message the President also reported his decision not to use $137 million appropriated for fiscal 1960 production of the Nike-Zeus anti-missile missile, at least until the completion of "essential phases" of testing the weapon.

Defense Debate

As soon as Congress received the President's defense estimates, Democratic critics began an attack on the budget's adequacy. In general terms, these opponents denied the White House assertion that the proposed funds would make the armed forces "capable of contending successfully with any contingency which may be forced upon us, from limited emergencies to all-out, nuclear general warfare." Agreeing with the President that the "change of emphasis from conventional-type to missile-type warfare" constituted "one of the greatest transitions in history", Democrats and some retired military leaders denied that the budget made adequate provisions for this transition. In two areas -- vulnerability of the U.S. missile deterrent to Soviet attack and mobility of the armed forces in meeting limited challenges or "brush-fire" actions -- critics accused the Administration of paring defense expenditures to fit budgetary considerations.

Criticism became even sharper after Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates Jr. told the House Appropriations Defense Subcommittee Jan. 13 that new intelligence estimates were based on an appraisal of Soviet "intentions" as well as "theoretical capabilities". This disclosure and its corollary -- that the "missile gap" would be smaller than expected over the next two or three years -- were sharply challenged Jan. 27 by Sen. Stuart Symington (D Mo.). Symington, ex-Secretary of the Air Force (1947-50), and leading Democratic critic of defense policies, charged that "the intelligence books have been juggled so the budget books may be balanced."

President Eisenhower countered Feb. 17 that any charge that he had misled the public on the condition of U.S. defenses was "despicable". But Symington repeated his accusation on the Senate floor two days later and was joined by Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas), who also denied the accuracy of the Administration's estimates of the defense situation.

Symington had initiated the "missile-gap" controversy in 1959 with the charge that Soviet capacity for producing ICBMs would give the U.S.S.R. a 3-to-1 lead over the U.S. within a year or two. Answering this argument, then Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy claimed that though there might be a "missile gap" there was no "deterrent gap". President Eisenhower in a Feb. 21 speech stressed that since the U.S. missile deterrent was too strong to be wiped out by sudden attack, it was strong enough to deter such an attack. Symington and others said the U.S. might equal the Soviets in missile capability in 1960 but not in 1963 unless speed-ups were initiated right away.

Ammunition for 1960 Democratic attacks came also from Administration decisions substantially to reduce the B-70 development program (to two prototypes by 1963), to drop the proposed F-108 fighter-bomber program and to "stretch out" procurement of the B-58 medium bomber, a 1,300-mile-per-hour plane designed to replace the subsonic B-47, over 500 of which were slated for retirement under the fiscal 1961 budget. This budget originally provided $1.3 billion less for Air Force aircraft procurement than had the fiscal 1960 appropriations.

ARGUMENTS FOR BALANCED FORCES

Another 1959 decision which became a subject of debate in 1960 was the concept of a "balanced" force, rather than one overly reliant on air power. The more conventional forces of the Army and Navy received in both the fiscal 1960 and 1961 budgets substantially less than the Air Force. Seeking to redress this imbalance, these services attempted to promote the view that the nation's air-atomic retaliatory power was already "excessive to requirements" and added up to superfluous capacity to "overkill" any aggressor nations. Although the force of this argument was reduced by the cut-backs in fighter and bomber funds, concern over the ability of the armed forces to meet challenges beyond those of large-scale nuclear attack was a major factor in criticism of the Eisenhower defense policies.

Controversy over two missile programs -- Bomarc and Nike-Zeus -- began in 1959 but continued throughout the 1960 debate on the budget. Programmed funds for the Army's Nike-Hercules and the Air Force's Bomarc, both anti-aircraft missiles, were challenged in 1959 on the grounds that neither would have any effect against an ICBM attack. On the other hand, many Congressmen felt that the Nike-Zeus, the Army's anti-ICBM missile, should be allotted the $700 million in production funds for which the Army had been unable to obtain Defense Department approval. The President's decision not to spend even the $137 million granted in 1959 for a start on production of the Nike-Zeus prompted House Science and Astronautics Committee Chairman Overton Brooks (D La.) to write the President Feb. 17 that the "release of these funds to the Army is essential."

CHIEFS OF STAFF TESTIFY

Adding fuel to the Democratic fire was the testimony of retired Army Chief of Staff Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor who asked for a $9 billion raise in the President's budget. Testifying Feb. 4 before a joint meeting of the Senate Aeronautical and Space Sciences Committee and the Armed Services Preparedness Investigating Subcommittee, he said: "The trend of relative military strength is against us. Our manned bomber force is a dwindling military asset. Our long-range missile force is limited in size, uncertain in reliability, and immobile upon exposed bases. We have no anti-missile defense in being or in sight. We have no effective fall-out protection for our civil population."

Incumbent Chiefs of Staff testifying the same day before separate committees uniformly reported that their requests for funds to the Secretary of Defense had been substantially cut before presentation in the President's budget. Testimony indicated that the following programs had been curtailed over the objections of Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer (Army), Gen. Thomas D. White (Air Force) and Admiral Arleigh A. Burke (Navy), respectively: airlift for the Army, Nike-Zeus anti-missile system and Army modernization; airborne alert (a cut of $90 million); and Polaris submarines (a cut of six submarines at a cost of $975 million). Support for extra funds to provide an around-the-clock airborne alert also came Feb. 2 from Strategic Air Command chief Gen. Thomas S. Power, who feared, he said, that the Soviets would soon be able to destroy his force with one salvo. President Eisenhower came down hard on Power at a Feb. 3 news conference when he characterized Power's views as "parochial" and said "there are too many of these generals who have all sorts of ideas."

More criticism of the lack of urgency allegedly reflected in the Administration's defense budget came from ex-Air Force official Thomas G. Lanphier Jr., who resigned as vice president of Convair, major manufacturer of the Atlas ICBM, to carry his criticisms to the public. Lanphier told the House Science and Astronautics Committee March 7: "I believe we are losing World War III for, among other reasons: lack of a sufficient and timely ICBM program; lack of a defense against a submarine attack; lack of a weapons program and policy to deter limited aggression; lack of a sufficient and timely space program; and, above all, lack of recognition that we are and have been for a long time actually engaged in World War III." He, too, recommended a constant airborne alert, "no matter what it costs," accelerated production of the Atlas and Titan and swifter construction of underground, hardened, launching sites for those missiles; speed-ups in the development of solid-fuel missiles such as the Minuteman and Polaris; faster development of the Midas and Samos satellite warning systems; more B-52 and B-58 bombers as well as restoration of the cuts made in the B-70 program; more airlift facilities for the rapid transportation of mobile troop units; and the inauguration of a civil defense shelter program.

PARTISANSHIP CHARGED

As the debate on Capitol Hill mounted in intensity, Republicans accused the Democrats of making defense a political football. To this charge, made by Rep. James G. Fulton (R Pa.), House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D Mass.) replied: "Anytime we Democrats don't agree with the Administration on defense we're accused of talking politics. I think you're getting on dangerous ground when you impugn the motives of anyone who questions defense policies."

Republicans also expressed fear that the open hearings on defense matters were leading to security "leaks". The GOP National Committee's publication, "Battle Lines", warned Sen. Symington against committing "an act of total, reckless irresponsibility" if he followed out a threat, made Feb. 8, to reveal the true "percentage figures" on the Russian lead in long-range missiles.

President Eisenhower pitted his own prestige as an experienced military man and as guardian of the welfare of the whole nation against advocates of increased defense spending both on Capitol Hill and in the Pentagon. At a press conference Feb. 11, one day after his visit to the Cape Canaveral, Fla., missile testing station, he said, "I have been in the military service a long time. I am obviously running for nothing. I want only my country to be strong, to be safe...." He added that his decisions on the budget for defense programs represented consideration of all related factors, rather than the single view he said was represented in the outlooks of his critics.

Revised Budget

Nevertheless the Administration on April 6 did revise some of its budget estimates for the Air Force and Navy. Although the changes actually met some of the most frequent criticisms, there was no admission that the alterations were the result of Democratic attacks. Presented to the House Appropriations Defense Subcommittee in a letter from Secretary Gates to its chairman, Rep. George H. Mahon (D Texas), the budget changes proposed:

For the Air Force -- the addition of 18 Atlas ballistic missiles to the 130 scheduled to be operational in 1962 -- cost $226 million; acceleration of the development of the Midas warning satellite, the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System (BMEWS) and the Minuteman solid-fuel missile -- cost $201 million; almost complete elimination of the Bomarc air defense and SAGE communications systems -- reduction of $585 million.

For the Navy -- purchase of lead-time components, such as nuclear reactors, for six more Polaris submarines -- cost $153 million; cancellation of two out of three proposed attack submarines -- reduction of $114 million.

The result of these changes was a net reduction of nearly $120 million in the January budget figures.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 29 reported HR 11998 (H Rept 1561), carrying appropriations of $39,337,867,000 plus authority to transfer $365.5 million from various revolving stock funds. The sum approved was $2,867,000 more than requested in the original budget estimates, but $121,967,000 more than the revised estimates. In reaching its figures, the Committee made additions of more than $1.5 billion and reductions of about $1.4 billion in the estimates, "in the expectation of better defense for the dollars expended".

The Committee's revisions apart, its report gave strong support to the Administration's basic defense policy. The report said the concept of a mixed attack force "will continue to be basic to our defense effort". The Committee accepted, implicitly, the Administration's contention that, although there was "missile gap", there was no "deterrent gap".

Following are the major amounts added by the Committee to the Administration's requests:

- Polaris Submarines -- The Defense Department had asked full funding for three more Polaris subs (to be added to nine already completed or under construction) and partial funding for nine additional subs. The Committee approved the 21-vessel program, but recommended full funding for five subs and partial funding for seven, adding $241 million for that purpose.
- Anti-Submarine Warfare -- Instead of dropping two attack submarines, as proposed by the Defense Department to offset increases for Polaris, the Committee recommended funds for three such subs and two destroyer escorts, as well as $100 million for ASW research and development, for a total increase of $321 million.

● Air Defense -- As replacement for the Bomarc-B anti-aircraft missile, the Committee recommended adding $215 million for two more squadrons of F-106 fighters.

● Airborne Alert -- To the $85 million requested, the Committee added $115 million for procurement needed to sustain an airborne alert by the Strategic Air Command "if and when necessary".

● Airlift -- In addition to approving requests for $50 million for development of a new cargo plane and $70 million for purchase of C-130B aircraft, the Committee added $250 million to buy another 50 C-130s and a cargo version of the KC-135 jet tanker.

● Army Modernization -- $37.1 million.

● Army Guard, Reserves -- $105.4 million to maintain the Army National Guard at 400,000 and the Reserves at 300,000. The Administration had proposed a 10 percent reduction in both forces.

Offsetting the bulk of these increases were the following major reductions in the estimates:

● Aircraft carrier -- The Committee deleted the $293 million requested for an additional attack carrier.

● Bomarc Missile -- To a $381 million reduction in Bomarc funds proposed by the Defense Department in its revised estimates, the Committee added a further reduction of $294 million in 1961 and earlier funds, calling the missile "a very questionable weapon system".

● Procurement -- The Committee recommended a cut of 3 percent in each procurement appropriation, adding up to $400.5 million, "in an effort to compel prompt remedial action" against waste.

● Miscellaneous -- Cuts of over $50 million each were made in travel, operation and communications requests.

Floor Action

The House May 5, by a roll-call vote of 377-3, passed and sent HR 11998 to the Senate. The $39,337,867,000 total was unchanged from the amount recommended by the Appropriations Committee. (For voting, see chart p. 442)

Debate on the bill, which began May 3, centered on the Committee's elimination of funds for the Bomarc missile and a new carrier. No amendments were offered, however, to restore these funds to the bill.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House and sent to the Senate, HR 11998 appropriated funds as follows:

Military Personnel	$11,818,760,000
Operation and Maintenance	10,353,092,000
Procurement	12,948,627,000
Research, Development, Test and Evaluation	4,217,388,000
TOTAL	$39,337,867,000

The breakdown by service was as follows:

Army	$ 9,403,440,000
Navy	11,900,675,000
Air Force	16,843,752,000
Office, Secretary of Defense	1,190,000,000
TOTAL	$39,337,867,000

The bill also:

Continued Presidential authority, first granted in 1959, to spend at the President's discretion any amount required for an airborne alert.

Stipulated that $80 million of Military Air Transport Service funds be used "only for procurement of commercial air transportation service".

Authorized the Secretary of Defense to transfer $365.5 million from stock funds.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 5 -- Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.) -- Strike provisions setting dollar ceilings on funds available for departmental administration, and raise from $18 million to $20 million the amount provided for expenses of the Office of the Secretary of Defense (offered en bloc). Voice.

Harris B. McDowell Jr. (D Del.) -- Bar use of funds for projects leading to inventions and discoveries to which the U.S. does not gain title. Standing, 37-104.

Alfred E. Santangelo (D N.Y.) -- Bar payment or reimbursement to defense contractors who hire retired officers as salesmen within two years of their retirement. Standing, 53-89.

John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) -- Delete provision requiring the Military Air Transport Service to spend $80 million for commercial carriers. Voice.

James G. O'Hara (D Mich.) -- Bar use of funds for contracts awarded to other than low bidders solely on basis that work would be performed in privately owned facilities. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- In reporting HR 11998 June 10 (S Rept 1550), the full Committee added $218.8 million to the amounts approved June 8 by its Defense Subcommittee, bringing the total appropriation for fiscal 1961 to $40,384,897,000. This amounted to $1,047,030,000 more than was voted by the House, and $1,168,000,000 more than the Administration's revised requests.

Most of the changes made in the House bill were related to long-standing and thoroughly debated issues regarding the adequacy of defense measures. In one respect, however, the Committee's action reflected the turn of international affairs since the U-2 incident first came to light May 5, the day the House passed HR 11998. This was the addition of $50 million to $33.8 million already added by the House to speed development of the Samos reconnaissance satellite program. It is "a matter of national urgency to move forward as rapidly as possible" with this program, the Committee said.

Other major changes were as follows:

● Procurement -- The Committee rescinded the 3 percent cut made by the House in the $13 billion appropriation for procurement.

● Army Modernization -- $125 million added, both to cover restoration of the 3 percent procurement cut and to guarantee funds which the House had hoped would come from sales under the military assistance program.

● Carrier -- $293 million for a conventionally powered carrier of the Forrestal class was added.

● Bomarc -- The Committee restored the $294 million cut by the House and added another $75 million to complete two Bomarc bases. At the same time, the Committee deleted $215 million added by the House for additional F-106 fighters, intended to replace the Bomarcs.

● B-70 -- The Committee added $285 million "for a complete B-70 weapons system development".

- Airborne Alert -- The Committee deleted $115 million added by the House for an expanded airborne alert capability, on grounds that the President had sufficient authority to spend whatever was needed in an emergency.
- Manpower -- The Committee added language to make maintenance of the higher levels for Army Reserve and National Guard.
- Airlift -- Reducing the House-approved appropriation by $50 million, the Committee provided $200 million for "transport aircraft suitable for the movement of fully equipped troops and combat equipment"; $140 million was to go to extended-range C-130B aircraft and $60 million to long-range, "turboprop or turbofan" combat equipment carriers.
- Nuclear Attack Submarines -- The Committee cut $57 million, or one nuclear attack submarine, from the House appropriation of $228 million for four such ships. The cut returned the program to the level first proposed in January, but cut to one submarine by the April revisions.

Floor Action

The Senate June 16 passed HR 11998 by a roll-call vote of 85-0, appropriating $40,514,997,000 to the Department of Defense. Passage followed voice-vote approval of two floor amendments adding $130.1 million to the bill as reported from committee. (For voting, see chart p. 501)

Debate on the measure, compressed into one day under the rising pressure of the adjournment rush, reflected general satisfaction with the increase in the House bill recommended by the Appropriations Committee. Three of the Committee's amendments were agreed to by individual voice votes -- the additions of $293 million for a Navy carrier and $285 million for the B-70 bomber, and a provision establishing a mandatory strength of 400,000 for the Army National Guard. All of the remaining Committee amendments were agreed to en bloc, by voice vote.

ARMY, MARINE FUNDS

The Senate also accepted an amendment by Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.) adding $90.1 million to Army procurement funds for equipment modernization. Jackson had first proposed adding $140.1 million, then agreed to reduce this amount by $50 million on the assurance of Committee leaders that the smaller amount would be acceptable. Also accepted was an amendment by Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) establishing a mandatory strength of 200,000 for the Marine Corps and providing an additional $40 million to meet the costs of expanding the Corps from its current strength of 175,000 men.

Stuart Symington (D Mo.), who had drawn up amendments that would have added $2.6 billion to the bill, did not formally propose them to the Senate. He said the leadership's lack of support for them made it clear that they could not be adopted.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate and sent to conference, HR 11998 appropriated funds as follows:

Military Personnel	$11,866,804,000
Operation and Maintenance	10,489,258,000
Procurement	13,988,911,000
Research, Development, Test and Evaluation	4,170,024,000
TOTAL	$40,514,997,000

The breakdown by service was as follows:

Army	$ 9,646,596,000
Navy	12,243,465,000
Air Force	17,433,636,000
Office, Secretary of Defense	1,191,300,000
TOTAL	$40,514,997,000

The bill also:

Established the mandatory strength of the Army Reserve at 300,000 and of the Army National Guard at 400,000.

Asked for competitive bidding in the awarding of defense contracts.

Authorized the transfer between appropriations of $150 million for speeding up missile or satellite programs and the transfer of $365.5 million from stock funds.

Required that $80 million of MATS appropriation be spent on commercial air carriers.

Gave the President a free hand to initiate and pay for an airborne alert.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 16 -- Henry M. Jackson (D Wash.) -- Add $90.1 million for Army procurement. Voice vote.

Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Establish mandatory strength of Marine Corps at 200,000 and add $40 million for that purpose. Voice.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Add proviso that "so far as practicable, all contracts shall be awarded on a competitive basis to the lowest responsible bidder." Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

June 16 -- Strom Thurmond (D S.C.) -- Add $2 million for Naval Air Reserve flight operations. Voice.

Conference

Congress completed action June 30 on HR 11998 by approving a conference report (H Rept 2049) providing $39,996,608,000. The final figure, about $659 million more than the House voted and $518 million less than the Senate approved, was $661.6 million over the budget estimates and $780.7 million more than the Defense Department's revised requests. Both chambers agreed to the compromise by roll-call vote, after brief debate, the House by 402-5, the Senate by 83-3. (For voting, see charts p. 460, 510)

As signed by the President July 7, HR 11998 provided these major increases over the budget: $241 million for the Polaris program, $200 million for increased airlift capacity, $190 million for the B-70 program, $158.4 million for modernization of Army equipment, $145.7 million for Air Force space programs -- the Samos reconnaissance satellite, the Midas early warning satellite, the Discoverer research satellite and the Minuteman solid-fuel ICBM, $85 million for airborne alert capability, and $221 million for attack submarines -- $171 million extra for nuclear submarines and $50 million extra for research and development.

Partly offsetting these increases of more than $1 billion was an across-the-board cut of 3 percent in procurement funds, amounting to about $400 million, aimed at eliminating wasteful practices.

The three major compromises decided on by the conferees involved appropriations for an aircraft carrier, for the Bomarc missile and for fighter interceptor aircraft. Having deferred the Navy's request for an additional carrier for two straight years, the House was, in effect, overridden by the Senate conferees, helped by their House colleagues. The $293 million requested in the January budget had been cut by the House but restored by the Senate and left in the final appropriation.

The Bomarc program was even more controversial, being strongly opposed in the House, which cut the Administration's revised $344 million request to a token $50 million. The Senate, however, apparently influenced by two successful tests of the missile, approved $419 million for the project, and the conferees compromised on $244 million. A related item of $215 million for fighter interceptors -- F-106 and F-102 planes -- was approved in the House but completely deleted by the Senate. Only $100 million was restored in conference, and it was noted that even these funds could be spent instead on the Bomarc, which the fighters had been meant to replace.

PROTESTS VOICED

The only opposition to the compromise measure in the House was voiced by Rep. Daniel J. Flood (D Pa.), who objected to the inclusion of $244 million for the Bomarc air defense system, which he described as a "dead pigeon" and a "fake". He also protested deletion of a Senate amendment, opposed by the Administration, raising Marine Corps strength from 175,000 to 200,000.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) defended the measure as a "fine bill" that actually increased funds for key defense programs by $1.7 billion. He noted that the conferees had agreed to drop "mandatory language pertaining to the Army Reserve, on the basis of assurances received from the White House that the Reserve would be maintained at 300,000 if the mandatory language were deleted". But Johnson said this appeared to be an exception to Administration policy of freezing extra funds voted by Congress, citing a Defense Department memorandum of June 9 that said "agencies should reserve the increases and carry them forward to the maximum practical extent to fiscal year 1962."

In contrast to Johnson, Sens. Stuart Symington (D Mo.) and Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) called the conference report "inadequate". Joining Clark in voting to reject the conference report were Sens. Ernest Gruening (D Alaska) and Philip A. Hart (D Mich.). Symington and Sen. John F. Kennedy (D Mass.) were paired against the bill.

Republicans raised no objections to providing more money than the President had asked for the defense program. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.), ranking minority member of the Armed Services Committee, proclaimed the compromise measure a "balanced bill" that "is substantially better than even the budget estimates originally recommended". In the House, Rep. Gerald R. Ford Jr. (R Mich.) declared that "I wholeheartedly endorse" the compromise bill.

Frozen Funds

The controversy over defense spending continued even after enactment of the defense appropriation. Although the President's message of Aug. 8 to the post-convention session of Congress cited increases in defense preparations paid for by the extra funds Congress had voted (for text, see p. 639), Sen. Johnson Aug. 11 accused the Administration of "freezing" $621 million in appropriations that exceeded the President's January request.

The White House message had announced the authorization of additional funds voted by Congress for the controversial B-70 program, the Samos reconnaissance satellite and the Polaris submarines and the cancellation of a scheduled phasing-out program of medium jet bombers and tankers. Nonetheless, Johnson said that a July 7 decision freezing $1,097,633,000 voted by Congress had been revised only to the extent of spending $476 million. Mr. Eisenhower, however, denied that funds were frozen, remarking at a press conference Aug. 10 that the changes Congress made among the various categories required "a lot of study and tedious allocation and priorities to be settled".

As of Sept. 30 the Defense Department reported that $388 million voted by Congress had not been released for obligation by the services.

D.C. APPROPRIATIONS

HR 10233 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1246) Feb. 5, 1960. Recommended total budget: $237,118,276. Recommended federal payment: $27,533,000.

- Passed by the House by voice vote, without amendment, Feb. 8. Voted: same as recommended.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1141) Feb. 26. Recommended total budget: $240,089,152. Recommended federal payment: $28,533,000.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by an 85-0 roll-call vote March 24. (See p. 484) Voted: same as recommended.
- Conference report (H Rept 1434) agreed to by voice votes March 30 in the House and March 31 in the Senate.

PL 86-412 -- Signed into law April 8. Final budget: $239,470,433. Final federal payment: $27-533,000.

HR 10233 provided a $239,470,433 fiscal 1961 budget for the government of the District of Columbia that included $27,533,000 in federal payments. The latter was $7 million less than the Administration requested. Although the Senate increased by $1 million the $25 million voted by the House under federal payments for the D.C. general fund, the House refused in conference to accept the increase. The bill included $20,100,000 in loan authorizations. The remaining funds in the bill were to be financed from D.C. revenues.

House and Senate Committees considering the First Supplemental Appropriation bill for fiscal 1961 (HR 12740) in June turned down a request by the D.C. Commissioners for a $7 million increase in the federal payment, sought for school construction projects.

PROVISIONS -- As it became law, HR 10233 appropriated the following funds as the federal payment toward D.C. operating costs in fiscal 1961:

General fund	$25,000,000
Water fund	1,661,000
Sanitary sewage works fund	872,000
TOTAL	$27,533,000

The bill also authorized for capital outlay these loans: general fund, $15,900,000; highway fund, $3,500,000; sanitary sewage works fund, $700,000.

COMMERCE FUNDS

HR 10234 -- Reported Feb. 5, 1960 by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1247). Recommended appropriation: $760,522,235.

- Passed House, amended, by voice vote Feb. 9. Voted: $760,522,235.
- Reported, amended, Feb. 22 by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1097). Recommended: $738,388,300.
- Passed Senate, amended, by roll-call vote of 79-2 March 29. (See p. 485) Voted: $738,388,300.
- Conference report (H Rept 1558) agreed to by voice votes of House April 28 and Senate May 4. (For Senate roll-call vote, see p. 493)

PL 86-451 -- Signed into law May 13. Final total: $729,624,375.

Final appropriations for the Commerce Department and related agencies for fiscal 1961 (HR 10234) totaled $729,624,375 -- a cut of $69,990,625 from the President's budget request. The bill also authorized withdrawal of $2,688,691,500 from the Highway Trust Fund for federal-aid highway programs.

The major cuts in funds requested were $10 million from the $60 million sought for the Small Business Administration revolving loan fund and a Senate-originated cut of $40 million in the amount requested for repayable advances to the Highway Trust Fund. The latter reduction was made possible when both chambers excluded $39 million in funds the President had requested for advances to the Trust Fund to enable it to pay costs of forest ($36 million) and public lands ($3 million) highways.

Under existing law, forest and public land highways were not financed by the Highway Trust Fund but by direct appropriations by Congress. President Eisenhower in his Jan. 18 Budget Message had requested that the Trust Fund be assigned the responsibility for forest and public land highway costs, but there was no Congressional action. Consequently, the $39 million request was excluded from HR 10234 on grounds no enabling legislation had been passed.

(The Second Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1961 (HR 13161 -- PL 86-722), passed later in the session, made direct appropriations of $27 million for forest highways and $2.7 million for public lands highways.)

The Senate May 4 rejected, by a 38-46 roll-call vote, a motion by John J. Williams (R Del.) to stand firm on his amendment, adopted previously by the Senate, prohibiting free or reduced-rate travel on American-flag ships for officials and employees of the Government. (For voting, see chart p. 484) The Williams amendment was adopted by the Senate by voice vote March 29 but House conferees Prince H. Preston (D Ga.), Albert Thomas (D Texas), Clarence Cannon (D Mo.), Frank T. Bow (R Ohio) and John Taber (R N.Y.) refused to accept it. After rejecting Williams' motion the Senate agreed by voice vote to recede from the amendment. The amendment later was added to a bill raising ship construction subsidies. (See p. 268)

The House, in adopting the conference report April 28, insisted, by voice vote, on disagreement with the Williams amendment.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the White House, HR 10234:

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Feb. 5 reported HR 10234 (H Rept 1247), recommending $760,522,235.

This was a decrease of $320,575,665 under 1960 appropriations, due, in part, to inclusion in the fiscal 1960 bill of roughly $69 million for special enumeration work on the 1960 census, $34 million for national forest and public land highways, and $150 million to augment the Small Business Administration revolving fund, compared to $50 million for 1961.

The Committee reduction of $39.1 million in the President's fiscal 1961 requests included these cuts: Small Business Administration revolving fund, $10 million; Coast and Geodetic Survey, ship construction and general expenses, $4.3 million; National Bureau of Standards research programs, $6.6 million; general maritime ship construction, $2.8 million; Aviation Weather Services (Weather Bureau), $10.6 million. Rep. Prince H. Preston (D Ga.), who submitted the Committee report, said the group had not yet had an opportunity to give the new aviation weather program comprehensive study. It involved combined research by the Air Force, Federal Aviation Agency and the Weather Bureau.

Aside from the advance for the Highway Trust Fund, the largest items in the bill, both listed under Maritime Activities, were $120 million for the ship-construction subsidy program and $150 million for operating subsidies to private shiplines.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 9 passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate an amended bill (HR 10234) appropriating $760,522,235 in fiscal 1961 for the Department of Commerce and related agencies. The appropriation figure included a repayable advance of $200 million to the Highway Trust Fund. In addition, the bill authorized payment of nearly $2.7 billion from the Highway Trust Fund for highway commitments. (1959 Almanac p. 285)

During House debate, points of order were sustained which deleted two provisions authorizing the Trust Fund to assume responsibility for the costs of highways built through national forests ($36 million) and public lands ($3 million). The provisions were deleted as legislation in an appropriations bill, but the House neglected to delete actual cash of $39 million, included in the $200 million loan to the Trust Fund, intended to cover the stricken authorizations.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 10234: Authorized the Bureau of Public Roads to draw $2,687,383,000 from the Federal Highway Trust Fund. Appropriated the following:

Commerce Department	$677,376,235
Panama Canal	25,650,000
Small Business Administration	55,201,000
Tariff Commission	2,295,000

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Feb. 9 -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Bar use of Panama Canal funds to build flagpoles, stands or other devices from which to fly the Panamanian flag in the Canal Zone. Voice vote.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Feb. 22 reported HR 10234 (S Rept 1097), recommending $738,388,300. The Committee increased the House-approved figures by a total of $17,915,065 for a number of items and made a reduction of $40,049,000 for two items, leaving a net reduction of $22,133,935. The two reductions were $49,000 for Bureau of Census salaries and $40 million in repayable advances to the Highway Trust Fund. The increases included $10,089,100 for the Weather Bureau, chiefly for use in the development of improved weather forecasting systems for aviation and agriculture, $2.1 million for coast and geodetic surveys, and $2,630,000 for National Bureau of Standards research.

The Committee followed the House's lead in refusing to authorize payment of $36 million for forest highways and $3 million for public land highways from the Highway Trust Fund, as requested by the President.

Floor Action

The Senate March 29 passed by a 79-2 roll-call vote and sent to conference an amended bill (HR 10234) appropriating $738,388,300 in fiscal 1961 for the Department of Commerce and related agencies, and authorizing payment of nearly $2.7 billion from the Highway Trust Fund for highway commitments. The Senate-approved appropriations figure represented a cut of $22,133,935 below the amount voted earlier by the House and was $61,226,700 less than the $799,615,000 requested by the President in his 1961 Budget Message. Voting against the bill were Sens. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and John J. Williams (R Del.), who criticized it as extravagant A Williams amendment to cut shipline operating subsidies by $20 million was rejected on a 28-54 roll call. (For voting, see chart p. 484, 485)

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate HR 10234: Authorized the Bureau of Public Roads to draw $2,689,000,000 from the Federal Highway Trust Fund. Appropriated the following:

Commerce Department	$654,686,300
Panama Canal	25,650,000
Small Business Administration	55,597,000
Tariff Commission	2,455,000
TOTAL	$738,388,300

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

March 29 -- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Prohibit U.S. shipping companies from offering free or subsidized rates of travel to officials of employees of the U.S. Government except in government-negotiated contracts. Voice vote. (1959 Almanac p. 284)

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- Take $2,080,000 from the $50 million provided for the Small Business Administration revolving fund and use the money for a program authorized in 1958 to provide grants to the states for research and counseling on the management and operation of small businesses. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Williams -- Cut back the number of ship voyages subsidized under the bill from 2,400 to 2,225, for a saving of $20 million in fiscal 1962. Roll call, 28-54.

DEBATE -- March 24 -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Commerce Secretary Frederick H. Mueller appeared before the Appropriations Subcommittee to plead for restoration of $25,584,000 cut by the House, on grounds "that 'it is not very much,' and four days later made a speech in Philadelphia in which he said the Eisenhower Administration 'will continue to wage a no-quarter fight against the budget-boosters and the surplus spenders.' Which Mr. Mueller shall we believe? ...I think the Eisenhower Administration should practice what it preaches.... If Secretary Mueller attacks Democrats as spenders, and wants economy, let us practice economy on Secretary Mueller."

Conference

REPORT -- House-Senate conferees in their April 27 report (H Rept 1558) recommended $729,624,375 -- $31 million less than the earlier House version and $8.8 million less than the Senate version. Reported in disagreement was the Senate prohibition against reduced travel rates on American-flag vessels, which House conferees refused to accept.

The conferees agreed to delete these Senate provisions: $5,000 for the Commerce Secretary's entertainment fund; an increase of $161,525 for administration of the Secretary's office; $2,080,000 for a program of research and management counseling under the Small Business Administration; and $1,030,000 for the purchase of foreign currencies for National Bureau of Standards research. They agreed to about half of a Senate-proposed $10,089,100 increase in Weather Bureau funds.

ACTION -- The House agreed to the conference report by voice vote April 28, refusing to recede from its disagreement to the Williams anti-junket amendment.

Final Congressional action on the bill came May 4, when the Senate rejected on a 38-46 roll-call vote a motion to stand firm on the Williams provision. (For voting, see chart p. 493) The Senate May 3 had agreed to the rest of the conference report by voice vote, reserving until May 4 its final decision on the Williams amendment.

SENATE DEBATE -- May 4 -- Williams on his anti-junket amendment -- "If we in Congress are going to establish a code whereby representatives of the Executive Branch are to be censured when they accept excessive entertainment or subsidized vacations from companies with which they are making decisions, how can we in Congress refuse to live by the same code?"

Spessard L. Holland (D Fla.), chairman, Senate Appropriations Department of Commerce and Related Agencies Subcommittee -- "This bill has been held up an unconscionable amount of time.... The skirts of the Senate are clean on this (anti-junket) matter.... I do not think...we should longer postpone final action."

The Executive Office of the President and related agencies were voted $14,207,500 by Congress for fiscal 1961. The amount was $420,000 less than the Administration requested and $694,000 more than appropriated for fiscal 1960.

The major controversial item in the bill (HR 11389) was the appropriation for management improvement planning in the Executive Office of the President, for which Congress voted $165,000. The House initially had voted $40,000 and the Senate $350,000.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 11389 appropriated:

House

The House March 28 passed HR 11389 by voice vote, appropriating $13,787,500, exactly the amount recommended by the House Appropriations Committee.

The Committee, in its March 25 report (H Rept 1427), generally backed the Administration's program, but made cuts because it believed carry-over funds would cover all estimated needs. The largest Committee cut was made in the request for management-improvement planning funds, reduced from $350,000 to $40,000. The next largest cut was in funds for the Budget Bureau, which were reduced by $200,000, to $4.9 million. The Committee approved only 11 of the 33 new positions sought by the Bureau.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

March 28 -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Reduce from $75 to $50 per diem the pay for management-improvement advisors. Voice vote.

Gross -- Reduce by $40,000 the management improvement expenses allotted to the White House. Voice.

Senate

The Senate June 22, by an 81-1 roll-call vote, passed HR 11389, appropriating $14,572,500. Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), who cast the only opposing vote, said he was "distressed" that the White House requests for funds were $177,500 higher than the previous year, "in view of the constant cry for economy". (For voting, see chart p. 507)

The Senate bill's total was $55,000 less than Administration requests and $785,000 more than the House voted.

The Senate Appropriations Committee June 17 had reported HR 11389 (S Rept 1610), restoring $310,000 for management improvement projects and $200,000 for 22 new Budget Bureau positions disallowed by the House. The Committee also added $100,000 for the Advisory Commission on Intergovermental Relations in response to a Presidential request for $175,000 made after House passage.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 22 -- Edmund S. Muskie (D Maine) -- Increase by $75,000 -- to the full $175,000 budget request -- funds for the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. Voice vote.

John J. Sparkman (D Ala.) -- Increase by $100,000 funds for the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission. Voice.

Conference

Congress completed action on HR 11389 when the House June 30 and the Senate July 1 by voice votes agreed to the conference report (H Rept 2039).

The conferees retained a limit of $50 a day for payment for Budget Bureau consultants, rejecting a $75-a-day limit authorized by the Senate, and approved $115,000 for the Intergovernmental Relations Commission. The two chambers split their differences on Budget Bureau funds, appropriating $5 million. Management improvement funds were compromised at $165,000.

LABOR-H.E.W. FUNDS

HR 11390 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1428) March 25, 1960. Recommended appropriations: $4,184,022,731.

- Passed by the House, without amendment, by a 363-10 roll-call vote March 29. (See p. 432) Voted: $4,184,022,731.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1576) June 14. Recommended: $4,484,088,931.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 63-6 roll-call vote June 17. (See p. 504) Voted: $4,485,788,931.
- Conference report (H Rept 2152) agreed to by voice votes in the House Aug. 25 and the Senate Aug. 26.

PL 86-703 -- Signed into law Sept. 2. Final total: $4,354,170,331.

The fiscal 1961 appropriation bill (HR 11390) for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare, in addition to providing $4,350,921,331 in direct appropriations, provided $3,249,000 in indefinite appropriations, which are estimates rather than specific sums. The total definite and indefinite funds ($4,354,170,331) were $333,948,350 more than the President's budget request of $4,020,221,981 and $288,887,850 more than fiscal 1960 appropriations.

Congress made the largest increases over Administration requests in funds for the National Institutes of Health -- a $160 million increase over the request, from $400 million to $560 million.

Computed into Administration requests but not acted on in the bill was $17.9 million for defense educational activities. This request, a supplemental, was forwarded too late for action in the Labor-HEW bill, and while the budget request was credited to HR 11390, actual appropriation (of $14,430,000) was made in the Second Supplemental Appropriations bill (HR 13161).

In a related development, the House and Senate June 21 passed by voice votes, and the President June 29 approved, a joint resolution providing a $6 million supplemental Labor Department appropriation for fiscal 1960 (H J Res 765 - PL 86-535). The funds, $2 million less than the President requested, were aimed at preventing unemployment compensation funds for ex-servicemen and federal employees from running out in June.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 25 reported HR 11390 (H Rept 1428), recommending $4,184,022,731 in direct and indefinite appropriations for fiscal 1961. Of the President's $4,020,221,981 final request, the Committee considered only $4,000,083,981; the remaining $20,138,000 in requests was not transmitted to Congress until after the House had acted on the bill. The Committee's recommendation represented an increase of $183,938,750 over the amount the Committee considered. The Committee, in adding $55 million to the Administration's proposed $400 million budget for NIH, said the budget "represented a retrenchment, a step backward" and was "completely inadequate". It said the mere fact that the requests were exactly the same as fiscal 1960 appropriations "makes it obvious that the Administration simply picked an arbitrary figure rather than assessing the needs and gearing the budget to them." For NIH the Committee added: $13.6 million for the National Cancer Institute, $12.3 million for mental health activities, $8.6 million for the National Heart Institute, $5.4 million for general research, $5.3 million for studies of arthritis and metabolic diseases, $4.7 million for neurology and blindness, $3.7 million for allergy and infectious diseases and $1.4 million for dental health.

The Committee granted $45 million for construction of waste treatment plants, a $25 million increase over the President's request, which it termed "completely unrealistic in view of the urgency of need and the growing hazard of water pollution...." The report said the argument that this was a local problem was not true, since "it is seldom that the locality which builds the waste treatment plant gains more than a small part of the advantages that result," whereas communities downstream and often other states "really benefit". (For veto of bill increasing pollution grants authorization, see p. 250)

In granting $187,310,000 for payments for operation of schools in federally impacted areas the Committee said the proposed budget reduction to $126,695,000 was an "arbitrary cut" that would reduce by one-third each school's funds. The Committee also added $19 million for school construction in these areas, raising the appropriation to $63,392,000.

Grants for hospital construction were increased by $23.8 million over what the report called a "woefully inadequate budget" of $126.2 million. The Committee also called attention to a rising rate of juvenile delinquency, declaring it had doubled in the 10 to 17-year age group between 1948 and 1958. It added $1 million in NIH mental health funds and approved a $60,000 increase in Children's Bureau funds for additional work in this field.

The Labor Department was given a net cut of $13,241,700 in its over-all appropriations although its direct appropriations were $51,777,300 more than requests. This represented the difference between several fund cuts and the transfer from indefinite to definite appropriations of $62.2 million in Bureau of Employees' Compensation funds for claims and expenses.

Over-all, the largest single item in the entire bill was $2.1 billion in grants to the states for public assistance.

Floor Action

The House March 29 passed HR 11390, without amendment, by a 363-10 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 432)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 11390 appropriated:

Labor Department	$ 542,245,300
Health, Education and Welfare	3,615,795,531
Related agencies	22,732,900
TOTAL	$4,180,773,731
Indefinite appropriations	($3,249,000)
GRAND TOTAL	$4,184,022,731

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

March 29 -- Leonor Kretzer Sullivan (D Mo.) -- Add $3,591,000 to Food and Drug Administration funds for radiological surveys of contamination of food, office renovation and testing of pesticide residues on food. Standing, 41-83.

Mrs. Sullivan -- Add $332,000 to FDA funds for radiological study equipment. Voice.

DEBATE -- March 29 -- John E. Fogarty (D R.I.) -- The bill was based on "selected, high-priority areas of need". It was not "irresponsible to recommend strengthening good federal programs.... Irresponsibility consists of failure to look at problems squarely...."

Elford A. Cederberg (R Mich.) -- If the Federal Government "is going to get into all these problems...I just do not believe we can ever look forward again to any tax reduction at the federal leve'."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations, Labor-HEW Subcommittee.

HEARINGS -- Intermittently from Feb. 10 to May 20.

HEW Secretary Arthur S. Flemming March 29 said he was "convinced" the Administration requests for his agency were "a fair proportion of the total recommended for the Federal Government" and reflected "a better program balance than the House Committee recommendations".

Dr. Leroy E. Burney, the Surgeon General, April 1 said that although testimony of Public Health Service officials might show increases over Administration requests "can be utilized to advantage", he was bound to support the President's requests because "our budget is part of a carefully considered financial plan."

ACTION -- The full Committee June 14 reported HR 11390 (S Rept 1576), recommending $4,484,088,931 in direct and indefinite appropriations for fiscal 1961.

The Committee dealt at length with its NIH recommendations, calling for "farsightedness" in considering programs and appropriations for an agency "whose activities have such meaningful import for the health, well-being, and productivity of our people and of people everywhere for generations to come." The report reiterated Committee sentiments of previous years that Administration requests were shortsighted and arbitrary.

The report said that in keeping with a 1959 recommendation, there had been established in June 1959 a Committee of Consultants on Medical Research to make an intensive study of NIH programs. The special group reported to the Committee May 19 and the Committee said its recommendations had been accepted as "sound" and "not as a maximum level but as the floor from which further advances will be made in years to come". The consultants' report said the Administration's concern over a too-rapid increase in the NIH medical research program was "unjustified" and that federal support of this research was "far from adequate". They said NIH could use "effectively" in fiscal 1961 $576.5 million for its existing programs and urged an additional $87.5 million for seven new undertakings.

The Committee, in recommending the $664 million proposed by the consultants, added $209 million to House-voted NIH funds, with the largest increases going to the National Heart Institute ($53.4 million) and general research and services ($51.7 million). Another sizeable addition was in Public Health Service funds for hospital construction grants, where the Committee recommended $211.2 million, or a $61.2 million increase over House-voted funds and $85 million over the President's request. The report said this would make available the full amount authorized under the Hospital Survey and Construction Act.

The Committee also added $7,362,000 to the bill for payments to school districts in federally impacted areas to pay entitlements in full for fiscal 1959. The report said funds included in a 1959 appropriation bill to meet this need had been underestimated.

Floor Action

The Senate June 17, by a 63-6 roll-call vote, passed HR 11390, amended, and sent it to conference.

The Senate rejected, by a 13-57 roll-call vote, a motion by Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) to recommit the bill and cut $250 million from HEW funds, other than those for public assistance grants to the states. The bill gave HEW $473 million more than the President requested. Dirksen told the Senate he would ask Mr. Eisenhower to veto the measure, "to stop the business of accepting every project that comes along, irrespective of its real merit." (For voting, see chart p. 504)

Prior to passage, the Senate agreed to two amendments adding $1.7 million to the bill, with $1 million earmarked for studies of pollution from automobile exhausts and $700,000, as recommended by the President, for social security research and demonstration projects.

The bill provided $465,566,950 more than Administration requests for direct and indefinite appropriations and $301,766,200 more than the House voted March 29. Included was $3,249,000 in indefinite appropriations. Total administration requests considered by the Senate included $20,138,000 in supplemental estimates not considered by the House -- bringing Administration requests to a total of $4,020,221,981. The largest increase over budget requests -- $393,286,000 -- was voted to the Public Health Service.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 11390 appropriated:

Labor Department	$ 547,245,300
Health, Education and Welfare	3,912,341,631
Related agencies	22,953,000
TOTAL	$4,482,539,931
Indefinite appropriations	($3,249,000)
GRAND TOTAL	$4,485,788,931

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 17 -- Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- Add $1 million to environmental health activities funds for a study by the Surgeon General on pollution from automobile exhaust pipes as provided in HR 8238, which became law June 8 (PL 86-493). Voice vote.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Provide $700,000 for cooperative research and demonstration projects on the social security program. Voice.

DEBATE -- June 17 -- Lister Hill (D Ala.) -- The bill provided $500,000 for a study of water pollution in the Great Lakes, in line with a suggestion of the Justice Department, and although Illinois Congressmen had asked that funds be included to test the effects of diverting Lake Michigan water into the Illinois Waterway, the Committee had "no thought or idea or intent" to provide for any diversion.

Gordon Allott (R Colo.) -- Congress was "creating a dynasty of so-called research which is not research.... We do not have the scientific personnel to carry on this kind of accelerated (NIH) program."

John O. Pastore (D R.I.) -- The medical research appropriations were based on "careful and exhaustive research" by the special consultants, and "no one ever found any fault with the consultants until they brought back their report."

Dirksen -- He had been advised that the 10 institutions the consultants represented were beneficiaries under the bill and he believed "if I were in their shoes...selfishness would color to some extent the amount that I would say was the minimum."

Conference

REPORT -- Senate-House conferees Aug. 24 reported a compromise version of HR 11390 (H Rept 2152) providing $4,350,921,331 in definite appropriations and $3,- 249,000 in indefinite appropriations for the Departments of Labor, HEW and related agencies in fiscal 1961. The total definite and indefinite funds in the final version of the bill were $131,618,600 less than had originally been voted by the Senate, but $170,147,600 more than the initial House version, $288,887,850 more than appropriated the previous year, and $333,948,350 more than President Eisenhower's budget request of $4,020,221,981.

The largest increases in the Labor-HEW appropriations, compared with Administration requests, were for the National Institutes of Health (increased $160 million over Mr. Eisenhower's request, from $400 million to $560 million); federally impacted school districts (increased $79,617,000, from $171,085,000 to $250,702,000); federal hospital construction aid (increased $60 million from $126,200,000 to $186,200,000); and sewage plant construction grants (increased $25 million, from $20 million to $45 million).

ACTION -- The conference report was agreed to by voice votes in the House Aug. 25 and the Senate Aug. 26.

- Passed, amended, by the Senate by an 86-0 roll-call vote Aug. 10. (See p. 512) Voted: $4,030,010,605.
- Conference report (H Rept 2181) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate Aug. 30.

PL 86-700 -- Signed into law Sept. 2. Final total: $3,969,982,485.

Congress for fiscal 1961 appropriated $3,969,982,485 for public works projects and the Atomic Energy Commission. It was the first time public works and AEC funds had been included in the same bill.

Of the total, $2.7 billion was earmarked for the AEC, the remaining $1.3 billion for the various public works projects of the Army Corps of Engineers, the Interior Department, the Tennessee Valley Authority and two river basin study commissions.

Although individual projects were changed, the bill as a whole fell only $34 million short of the President's $4,004,141,180 request for funds. Of the $34 million, $23 million was cut from the request for public works, the remaining $11 million from the request for the AEC.

The amount voted for public works included funds for new construction starts on 57 water and reclamation projects and for resumption of work on four additional projects previously stopped. Of the 57 new starts, 34 were requested by the President, 23 added by Congress. Five other new starts requested by Mr. Eisenhower were rejected by Congress.

The relative ease with which the fiscal 1961 bill (HR 12326 -- PL 86-700) was enacted contrasted with 1959, when President Eisenhower vetoed two different public works bills and Congress overrode the second veto.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 12326 appropriated:

Army Department
Cemeterial expenses	$ 9,400,000
Rivers, harbors & flood control	929,130,600
Interior Department
Reclamation Bureau	280,113,705
Bonneville Power Administration	29,520,000
Southeastern Power Administration	800,000
Southwestern Power Administration	2,575,000
Independent Offices
Atomic Energy Commission	2,663,960,000
Tennessee Valley Authority	20,520,000
Study Commissions	2,800,000
TOTAL	$3,938,819,305
Indefinite appropriations	($ 31,163,180)
GRAND TOTAL	$3,969,982,485

Background

President Eisenhower in his 1958 and 1959 Budget Messages requested "no new starts" on public works and asked for a stretchout of projects already underway. Congress in 1958 nevertheless voted funds for 65 new starts, and in 1959, for 67 new starts. In 1960, the President reversed his stand and asked Congress to appropriate funds for 39 new starts -- 33 for the Army Corps of Engineers and six for the Reclamation Bureau. (1958 Almanac p. 357; 1959 Almanac p. 315)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 20 reported HR 12326 (H Rept 1634), recommending $3,914,789,985 in indefinite and definite appropriations for fiscal 1961 -- $2,659,060,000 for the AEC, $1,224,566,805 for public works (which included $881,798,100 for the Corps of Engineers and $277,362,705 for the Reclamation Bureau) and $31,163,180 in indefinite appropriations. The total was about $90 million less than the President's request.

The Committee in reducing the amount of the budget request cut $16 million from AEC recommendations, $24 million from the Interior Department and $45 million from the Army Department.

The Committee recommended appropriations for 388 water resources construction projects of the Army Engineers and the Reclamation Bureau. The projects carried an ultimate federal cost of approximately $15 billion. The Committee recommended funds for 32 of the 39 new construction projects proposed in the budget, disallowed construction funds for two projects started in fiscal 1960 and added five unbudgeted construction starts. The five starts were located at: Decatur Bend, Iowa; St. Paul, Minn.; Perry County, Mo.; Ridgeway, Pa.; and Greenville Harbor, Miss.

The report said it had become the tendency of the Army Engineers and the Reclamation Bureau to supply camping areas, trailer parks and other facilities at recreational areas developed as a result of water storage projects, an extension of the established policy to provide only minimum requirements for health and safety. The Committee asked for reports on the construction of these facilities and recommended that fees collected be sufficient to pay for the construction and maintenance of the facilities.

The Committee limited spending for the airplane propulsion reactor program in fiscal 1961 to $58 million. The Administration had said it wanted to spend $73 million for the program. The Public Works Subcommittee had recommended dropping the program altogether.

Floor Action

The House May 25 passed HR 12326, without amendments, by a 388-18 roll-call vote.

The House defeated by a 110-294 roll call a motion by Rep. Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.) to recommit the bill to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to report it back with an amendment prohibiting the use of funds for the construction of the Allegheny River Reservoir (Kinzua Dam) in Pennsylvania and New York. The House May 24 had defeated, by a 48-74 standing vote, Goodell's amendment to eliminate the $4,530,000 recommended for the construction of the Kinzua Dam. Protests by the Seneca Indians against Army Engineers' plans to take some tribal lands for the flood control project had been turned down by federal courts. (For voting, see chart p. 448)

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 24 -- Thomas F. Johnson (D Md.) -- Provide $17,200 for a survey of the Honga River and Tar Bay, Md. project. Voice vote.

Fred Wampler (D Ind.) -- Provide $85,000 to begin construction on the Sugar Creek, Ind. levee and $100,000 to start a West Terre Haute, Ind., project. Standing, 17-50.

Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.) -- Prohibit the use of funds for the construction of the Allegheny River Reservoir, Pa. and N.Y. Standing, 48-74.

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Prohibit the use of funds for projects which had not specifically been authorized. Standing, 21-76.

Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- Eliminate the use of funds to develop certain recreational facilities. Voice.

Hoffman -- Eliminate AEC official entertainment expenses. Voice.

Hoffman -- Reduce funds for the purchase of automobiles for the AEC. Voice.

DEBATE -- May 24 -- Joe L. Evins (D Tenn.) -- The "most significant thing" about the bill is that "at last the Budget Bureau and the Administration have realized that this is a national development program" which must have continuity.

Charles E. Goodell (R N.Y.) -- With reference to the Kinzua Dam project, Congress owes it to the Seneca Indians, who have had a treaty with the U.S. concerning that land since 1794, "to make a fair and full study before we take the heart out of their land."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 20 reported (S Rept 1768) HR 12326, recommending $4,030,010,605 -- of which $1,322,887,425 was for public works (including $964,563,400 for Army Engineers' projects and $292,559,025 for Reclamation Bureau projects), $2,675,960,000 for the AEC and $31,163,180 in indefinite appropriations. The Committee recommendation was $115 million more than the amount voted by the House and $25 million over Mr. Eisenhower's requests.

To the House version, the Committee added $82,765,300 for rivers, harbors and flood control projects under the Corps of Engineers and $16.9 million for the AEC. All told, the Committee recommended funds for nearly three dozen more new starts than approved by the House, increasing total future commitment, for over 400 projects, to $15.5 billion.

The Committee removed the House's $58 million ceiling on spending for the development of the airplane propulsion reactor.

Floor Action

The Senate Aug. 10 passed HR 12326 by an 86-0 roll-call vote without changing the amount recommended by the Committee. One floor amendment specifically earmarking funds already in the bill was agreed to. (For voting, see chart p. 512)

Sen. Allen J. Ellender (D La.), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Public Works Subcommittee and floor manager of the bill, successfully defended the measure against monetary changes. The Senate rejected by voice votes two amendments offered by Sen. Vance Hartke (D Ind.) to increase by $2.5 million the appropriations for general construction and by $1 million the funds for general investigations, and an amendment offered by Sen. Paul Douglas (D Ill.) to delete from the bill $25,000 designated for the construction of a levee on the Indiana side of the Wabash River.

Douglas' amendment renewed a long-standing controversy between Illinois and Indiana Senators. Douglas contended that the construction of levees on the Indiana side of the Wabash River would cause excessive flooding on the Illinois side and the Senate should withhold further funds for the project until levees could be constructed on both sides.

The Senate made no change in the controversial provision appropriating funds for the construction of the Allegheny River Reservoir (Kinzua Dam) in Pennsylvania and New York.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Aug. 10 -- Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) -- Earmark $900,000 of funds appropriated for the Illinois Waterway for the Western Ave. Highway Bridge in Chicago. Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Aug. 10 -- Vance Hartke (D Ind.)-- Increase funds for general construction by $2.5 million to $740,384,600. Voice.

Hartke -- Increase funds for general investigations by $1 million to $14,062,800. Voice.

Douglas -- Reduce funds for general construction by $25,000 to $737,859,600, prohibiting the use of any funds for a levee on the Indiana side of the Wabash River. Voice.

Conference

The House and Senate Aug. 30, by voice votes, agreed to the conference report (H Rept 2181) on HR 12326. The $3,969,982,485 provided in the bill was $34,158,695 less than requested by the President, $55,183,500 more than voted by the House and $60,028,120 less than voted by the Senate. The major change from the Senate version was a cut of $35 million from Army Engineers' funds for water projects and cuts of $12 million each from Reclamation Bureau and AEC funds. The conferees left 57 new starts in the bill. They also adopted the Senate position that the funds for the aircraft propulsion reactor program should not be limited to $58 million.

BACKGROUND -- President Eisenhower's original budget request for fiscal 1961 was $713,803,755, including State, $247,013,610; Justice, $280,900,000; Judiciary, $46,871,965; USIA, $123,793,180; special international program, $8,600,000; Civil Rights Commission, $995,000; indefinite appropriation, $5,630,000. A supplemental budget request presented to the Senate after the House had completed action on the bill raised the total estimate to $733,030,395. The $19,226,640 increase was divided as follows: State, $15,348,000; Justice, $2,300,000; Judiciary, $212,900; and USIA, $1,365,740. Of the increase in State Department funds $8,300,000 was requested for an East-West cultural and technical interchange center and $6 million for payment to the government of Japan for settlement of claims of displaced residents of the Bonin Islands; $2 million was added to the Justice Department's salaries and expenses for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the entire USIA increase was earmarked for the Philippine-American Cultural Foundation.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 8 reported HR 11666 (H Rept 1467), recommending $676,579,807 (including indefinite appropriations). This was $37,223,948 less than the budget request.

The Committee cut $23,228,856 from State Department requests. Justice Department requests were cut by $2,679,820, but the full $118 million requested for the Federal Bureau of Investigation was allowed, in order to permit hiring of 137 additional clerks for fingerprint files.

The Committee cut $6,804,200 from United States Information Agency requests. It allowed $8,740,000 for completion of a shortwave broadcasting facility in Liberia for Voice of America coverage of Africa and parts of the Middle East.

Other cuts: the Judiciary, $2,701,920; President's special international program, $1,664,152; Civil Rights Commission, $145,000. An additional provision declared that none of the appropriations could be used for programs funded by foreign currencies unless a specific dollar appropriation had been made to purchase such currencies.

Floor Action

After voting to cut the Appropriations Committee total by $15,000 and rejecting two other amendments, one to cut $435,000 and a second to add $400,000, the House April 13 passed HR 11666 by a 312-31 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 432)

The House agreed to a cut of $15,000 in the appropriation for the Interparliamentary Union after Rep. H.R. Gross (R Iowa) raised a point of order that the proposed $30,000 appropriation exceeded the authorization of $15,000 for the Union.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 11666 appropriated:

State Department	$223,769,754
Justice Department	278,220,180
Judiciary	44,500,045
U.S. Information Agency	116,988,980
President's Special International Program	6,935,848
Civil Rights Commission	850,000
TOTAL	$671,264,807
Indefinite appropriations	($ 5,300,000)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

April 12 -- John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) -- Cut the appropriation for the Interparliamentary Union from $30,000 to $15,000. Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

April 12 -- Gross -- Cut $435,000 from State Department representation allowances. Voice.

John V. Lindsay (R N.Y.) -- Add $400,000 for salaries of U.S. judges' law clerks. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 29 reported HR 11666 (S Rept 1777) with recommended appropriations of $718,010,147, a cut of $15,020,248 in the 1961 budget estimates, which had been increased by $19,226,640 since the House passed the bill in April. The Committee not only agreed to most of the supplemental budget request, but also restored virtually all of the cuts made by the House in funds for the State Department because "of the urgencies of the world situation," the report said. The Committee also added $1.7 million to the supplemental request of $8.3 million for an East-West cultural and technical exchange center and $5 million above budget estimates for construction of the Amistad Dam and Reservoir by the U.S.-Mexico Boundary and Water Commission; the measure authorizing construction of the dam had been cleared by Congress June 24, 1960 and was signed into law (HR 12263 -- PL 86-605) July 7.

The Committee recommended $257,212,954 for the State Department, an increase of $33,443,200 over the sum allowed by the House. The Committee said it hoped and urged that the funds which it recommended would be used "imaginatively" to achieve high quality in the Foreign Service and also "for the planning of new approaches to the rapidly developing crises in world affairs."

The Committee said it was difficult to avoid the feeling that "we are merely appropriating money to carry out outmoded policies which may have been vigorous and dynamic at the time of their inception a decade ago, but which now...are not calculated to give this Nation the initiative which it must have if freedom is to flourish." It said those responsible for our foreign policy should be concerned with developing new, aggressive policies instead of "routine administration designed to react defensively against Communism."

Floor Action

The Senate June 30, by a 70-10 roll-call vote, passed and sent to conference an amended bill (HR 11666) appropriating $712,719,147 for the Departments of State and Justice, the Judiciary and related agencies in fiscal 1961, plus $5,550,000 in indefinite appropriations -- a total of $718,269,147. (For voting, see chart p. 510)

Final action on the bill was put off until August. The amount granted by the Senate represented a cut of $14,761,248 in the funds requested by the Administration. It exceeded the sum voted by the House April 13 by $41,704,340.

Much of the debate on the bill centered on an amendment by Minority Leader Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) to provide $73,666,700 for the newly created International Development Assn. The amendment was rejected on a standing vote after Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) said that funds for IDA did not belong in legislation providing money for the State and Justice Departments. As Chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee that considered the bill, Johnson acted as floor manager of HR 11666. He said the proposed IDA appropriation, which would constitute the initial U.S. subscription to the international fund, would be considered as part of another measure (HR 12740) providing supplemental appropriations for several Government agencies. The Senate passed HR 12740, with the IDA provision intact, the following day. (See p. 393)

By voice vote, the Senate agreed to two floor amendments adding $259,000 to the amount that had been recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 11666 appropriated:

State Department	$257,471,954
Justice Department	280,320,180
Judiciary	45,286,445
U.S. Information Agency	121,354,720
President's Special International Program	7,435,848
Civil Rights Commission	850,000
TOTAL	$712,719,147
Indefinite appropriations	($ 5,550,000)

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 30 -- Francis Case (R S.D.) -- Increase the State Department appropriation by $3,000 to provide a more liberal rental allowance to the U.S. Consul General in Geneva, Switzerland. Voice vote.

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- Increase the appropriation for the International Boundary and Water Commission by $256,000 which would be used to construct an oxidation plant for sewage coming into San Diego county, Calif., from Tijuana, Mexico. Voice.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

June 30 -- Dirksen -- Appropriate $73,666,700 as the first installment of the U.S. subscription to the International Development Assn. Standing vote.

Conference

REPORT -- Senate-House conferees Aug. 23 reported a compromise version of HR 11666 (H Rept 2136) appropriating $699,607,567 for the Departments of State and Justice, the Judiciary and related agencies in fiscal 1961, plus $5,425,000 in indefinite appropriations.

The conference committee, in three major instances of disagreement, more or less split the difference between House and Senate figures.

The conferees approved $115 million for State Department salaries and expenses, $1.5 million above the House figure and $2.4 million below the Senate total; $119,354,720 for the USIA salaries and expenses -- $2.5 million above and $2 million below the respective House and Senate figures; and $25.7 million for the Fulbright educational exchange program, $2.5 million dollars less than the Senate had voted and $2.5 million more than the House approved.

Two sums added to the bill by the Senate -- the $5 million for the Amistad Dam and the $256,000 in the Kuchel floor amendment -- were deleted in conference. However, the full $5 million for Amistad Dam and $225,000 of the $256,000 in the Kuchel amendment were appropriated in another bill, the First Supplemental Appropriations bill (HR 12740). (See p. 393)

ACTION -- Both chambers Aug. 24 agreed by voice vote to the conference report.

Senate approval was preceded by a brief debate in which Sen. J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) voiced his disapproval of Congressional cutting of the exchange program funds from the budget estimate of $28.2 million to the conference report figure of $25.7 million.

Fulbright said he was particularly worried about language in the conference report which, he felt, would lead to a disruption "in the integrity of the established (exchange) program in Western Europe."

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) assured Fulbright that "there was no intention to cut" all of the $2.5 million reduction from the budget request out of funds for Western Europe.

Majority Leader Johnson noted that the $25.7 million, though less than the budget request, was $2.5 million more than the 1960 total and added that if Fulbright had attended the conference committee, of which he was a member, the State Department "might have secured an extra half million dollars."

TREASURY-POST OFFICE FUNDS

HR 10569 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1281) Feb. 19, 1960. Recommended appropriations: $4,795,414,000.

- Passed by the House by voice vote, amended, Feb. 23. Voted: same as recommended.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1282) April 21. Recommended: $4,877,014,000.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate by a 75-0 roll-call vote April 25. (See p. 489) Voted: same as recommended.
- Conference report (H Rept 1665) agreed to, except for one provision reported in disagreement, by voice votes of the House June 1 and Senate June 6. (For Senate roll-call refusing to agree to disputed provision, see p. 498)
- Final agreement on bill reached June 23 when House, by a 235-164 roll-call vote, agreed to accept Senate amendment eliminating a House provision permitting use of the franking privilege by Congressmen in sending mail addressed to "Occupant". (See p. 458)

PL 86-561 -- Signed into law June 30. Final total: $4,841,914,000.

The fiscal 1961 appropriation bill for the Treasury and Post Office Departments and the United States Tax Court provided $55,939,000 less than President Eisenhower requested. Congress followed the same pattern as in the fiscal 1960 bill and again made the largest cut -- $45.5 million -- in postal funds. The total represented an increase of $198,551,000 over appropriations for the same agencies in the fiscal 1960 bill.

As usual, funds that come to the Treasury Department from permanent appropriations already made available by Congress were not included in the bill, but were estimated at $9,625,421,245. Of this sum, $9.5 billion was estimated for interest payments on the public debt.

House-Senate conferees wrangled for more than a month over a House provision, eliminated by the Senate, that would have permitted delivery of mail in urban areas under the Congressional frank addressed to 'Occupant' if the Post Office Department extended the privilege to it. Proponents of the provision said the privilege sought already was available for mailings on rural routes, that the necessity of sorting urban mail addressed to individuals caused more expense in handling and that the privilege would not be a change in law but only an "indication" to the Postmaster General of Congressional sentiments. Opponents held that the privilege of Congressional frank already was abused and the provision would place the Postmaster General in an "impossible" situation. The House finally yielded to the Senate and the provision was eliminated.

(In a related development, President Eisenhower March 11 asked Congress to raise postal rates in order to increase annual Post Office revenues by $550 million a year and thereby reduce the $600 million annual postal deficit. Congress took no action. See story p. 628)

PROVISIONS -- The breakdown of funds in HR 10569, as signed by the President:

TREASURY

Office of the Secretary	$ 3,385,000
Bureau of Accounts	26,890,000
Bureau of the Public Debt	46,850,000
Office of the Treasurer	16,700,000
Bureau of Customs	55,500,000
Internal Revenue Service	388,000,000
Bureau of Narcotics	4,100,000
U.S. Secret Service	5,524,000
Bureau of the Mint	4,900,000
U.S. Coast Guard	281,000,000
Subtotal	$ 832,849,000

POST OFFICE

Administration	$ 73,300,000
Operations	3,117,500,000
Transportation	548,700,000
Facilities	168,000,000
Postal Modernization	100,000,000
Subtotal	$4,007,500,000
U.S. Tax Court	$ 1,565,000
TOTAL	$4,841,914,000

BACKGROUND -- The President's budget requests for fiscal 1961 for the two departments and the Tax Court totaled $4,897,853,000. He asked $843,270,000 for the Treasury, $4,053,000,000 for the Post Office and $1,583,000 for the Tax Court.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Feb. 19 reported HR 10569 (H Rept 1281), recommending $102,439,000 less than the President requested. The Committee cut $82 million from Post Office requests -- the largest postal cut ever made -- and $20,421,000 from Treasury requests. Tax Court requests were cut by $18,000. The Committee said the recommended funds would provide for approximately 16,000 of the 25,500 new employees requested by the Administration. The Post Office was denied 7,000 new employees and the Treasury more than 2,000. The Committee urged the Post Office Department "to weigh with the utmost care its program for bigger and better service," and to hold down its requests for additional personnel.

The Committee inserted language in the bill approving delivery of mail under Congressional frank addressed to "Occupant" if the Post Office Department should extend that privilege to it. Under current Department regulations "Occupant" mail can be delivered only on rural and star routes. The report said extension of the privilege would "facilitate communication with constituencies in consonance with concepts inherent in the granting of the frank."

Under Treasury funds, the largest cut, $15 million, was made in the requests for the Internal Revenue Service. The $378 million provided, however, was $13,750,000 more than IRS received in fiscal 1960. Recommended employee increases would average about 900 compared to the 2,900 requested for IRS.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 23 passed HR 10569, amended, by voice vote following all the recommendations of its Appropriations Committee. An attempt to strike out the franking provision by floor amendment was rejected.

Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield Feb. 22 said that if Congress upheld the Committee's "meat axe" approach there would have to be drastic curtailment of postal services. House Democrats in Feb. 23 floor debate replied that Summerfield was using "pusillanimous tactics" and had failed to mention not only that his request was the biggest in history but also that the appropriation was the largest in history and $104.6 million more than the fiscal 1960 grant.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 10569 appropriated:

Treasury Department	$ 822,849,000
Post Office Department	3,971,000,000
U.S. Tax Court	1,565,000
TOTAL	$4,795,414,000
Indefinite appropriations	($9,625,421,245)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Feb. 23 -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Stipulate that no funds in the bill could be used to propagandize Congress for the support or defeat of legislation. Voice vote.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

Feb. 23 -- Marguerite Stitt Church (R Ill.) -- Eliminate provision authorizing Congressmen to use their franking privilege to send mail to "Occupant." Standing, 26-80.

DEBATE -- Feb. 23 -- J. Vaughan Gary (D Va.) -- The Postmaster General wanted to surround his Department "with a halo of sanctity far removed from the desecrating hands of Congress."

Gordon Canfield (R N.J.) -- Congress' annual review of postal requests is "cursory" and generally necessitates supplemental requests which "we usually accept."

Mrs. Church -- Extending their franking privilege was "a luxury Members of Congress might very well sacrifice."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Reported HR 10569 April 21 (S Rept 1282), recommending $20,839,000 less than Administration requests. The Committee approved a $114.8 million allotment for Post Office modernization and improvements, which was a $26 million increase over House-voted funds. For postal operations, the Committee voted $3,125,000,000, a $25 million increase over House-approved funds. The report said the increase would provide for employment of approximately 13,527 additional employees, instead of the 15,437 workers requested.

The report took note of the House provision on use of the Congressional frank and said it did not consider that the language in the bill was in itself any extension of the franking privilege.

The report also noted protests against sending mail by air on a space-available basis and said it had been assured postal revenues for railroads would increase in fiscal 1961.

In restoring the $15 million for the Internal Revenue Service, the Committee said testimony indicated the funds would result in collection of additional revenue "at least seven times the amount of the increases". It said provision of the full amount of the budget request would make possible a program of career advancement by grade reallocations; inauguration, on a pilot test basis, of automatic data processing plans for mechanization of processing functions; and substantial strengthening of enforcement.

Floor Action

The Senate April 25 passed HR 10569, amended, by a 75-0 roll-call vote, following the recommendations of its Appropriations Committee and providing $4,877,014,000. The total was $81.6 million more than voted by the House. (For voting, see chart p. 489)

The Senate increased House-voted funds for the Post Office by $66.6 million and those for the Treasury by $15 million. The postal increase was mainly for additional employees and building modernization. All of the Treasury increase went to the Internal Revenue Service and restored the full budget estimate of $393 million for employment, enforcement and processing programs.

The Senate adopted an amendment by Sen. John J. Williams (R Del.) to eliminate the House provision on Congressional mail he said was designed to permit Congressmen to "flood their states with political propaganda at the taxpayers' expense". The Senate also approved an amendment to permit parcel post, instead of first-class, mailing rates on medicines with prescriptions written on them.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 10569 appropriated:

Treasury Department	$ 837,849,000
Post Office Deparment	4,037,600,000
U.S. Tax Court	1,565,000

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

April 25 -- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Eliminate language respecting "delivery to postal patrons of mail matter under Congressional frank". Voice vote.

Carl T. Curtis (R Neb.) -- Allow written directions to be included in parcels of medicines in third- and fourth-class mail. Voice.

DEBATE -- April 25 -- A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- Increases in funds were approved because "loss of essential services would outweigh the value of the attempted saving, or would merely amount to deferring action...."

Joseph S. Clark (D Pa.) -- Adding the $15 million in Internal Revenue funds would provide for 3,000 new employees, increase auditing of tax returns and raise revenues by "many hundreds of millions of dollars".

Conference

House-Senate conferees, in their May 26 report, allotted to the Treasury $10 million more than the House voted Feb. 23 and $5 million less than the Senate voted April 25. It represented a compromise in Internal Revenue Service funds, permitting the hiring of 2,000 additional tax enforcement employees, which was 839 less than the number provided for in the Senate bill. The total IRS appropriation was $388 million. Under Post Office appropriations, conferees reached compromise figures on all items, for a total that was $36.5 million more than the House voted and $30.1 million less than the Senate approved.

Conferees agreed to eliminate a Senate provision to allow written directions to be included in parcels of medicines in third-and fourth-class mail.

House conferees in the report reiterated earlier warnings against extending airlift services of first-class (4-cent) mail by "administrative determination alone". The airlift had drawn protests from railroad groups.

The House June 1 agreed by voice vote to the conference report (H Rept 1665) but insisted on retaining the Congressional mail provision, which had been reported in disagreement by the conferees. The Senate June 6 agreed to the report but refused to yield to the House on the mail provision, rejecting a motion that it do so by a 25-49 roll call, and asking for a second conference. (For voting, see chart p. 498)

During June 6 debate, Senators held that the House provision placed undue pressure on the Postmaster General and said Senate agreement to the provision would bring "great moral force...on him because we pass on his funds." The House June 9, still insisting on its provision, agreed to a second conference.

HOUSE DEBATE -- June 1 -- J. Vaughan Gary (D Va.) -- The Postmaster General "surreptitiously" issued on April 1 an order for extension of first-class mail airlifts despite authorization only for an experimental program.

Glenn Cunningham (R Neb.) -- Congress must "discontinue allowing the people in the administrative branch to dictate" things such as the airlift.

June 23 -- Otto E. Passman (D La.) -- The mail provision was "just indicating to Mr. Summerfield that the Congress should have a word in this matter".

Marguerite Stitt Church (R Ill.) -- The provision sought an "exclusive and expensive" privilege for Congressmen; "the public not only sees the discrimination but actually questions our integrity."

SENATE DEBATE -- June 6 -- A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- Proposed accepting the mail provision because it was "not a law, only a pious hope" and the Postmaster General had said a statement in the report that he was under no compulsion to change delivery methods would leave him free of any legal obligation to take action.

John J. Williams (R Del.) -- The Postmaster General said he did not know how a successor would interpret the provision and warned that "under no circumstances" should the franking privilege be turned into a vehicle for free door-to-door delivery of election campaign material.

Final Action

Congress June 23 completed action on HR 10569 when the House agreed by a 235-164 roll-call vote to a motion to accept the Senate amendment eliminating the mail provision. The motion first was rejected by a 90-112 standing vote. (For voting, see chart p. 458)

The final total voted was $4,841,914,000, or $55,939,000 less than Administration requests.

PL 86-651 -- Signed into law July 14. Final total: $138,293,740.

Without a formal conference, House and Senate representatives met late July 2, only hours before Congress adjourned for the political conventions, and worked out a compromise version of the First Supplemental appropriations bill (HR 12740), fiscal 1961.

As signed into law (PL 86-651), the bill carried $138,293,740 in supplemental funds for fiscal 1960 and 1961.

The final appropriation, though $31,034,100 short of the Administration's request, included $73,666,700 for the Treasury Department for the initial payment on the U.S. subscription to the International Development Assn. U.S. participation in the IDA was authorized in a bill (HR 11001) cleared by Congress June 29 and signed into law (PL 86-565) by the President June 30. (See p. 221)

Also included in the First Supplemental was $5,225,000 for the U.S.-Mexico Boundary and Water Commission.

PROVISIONS -- As signed into law, HR 12740 appropriated:

Agriculture Department	$11,420,000
Commerce Department	425,000
District of Columbia	25,200,000
Department of Health, Education and Welfare	1,816,000
Independent Offices	9,026,700
Interior Department	3,353,000
Department of Justice	200,000
Legislative Branch	5,491,340
Department of State	5,225,000
Treasury Department	76,136,700

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 20 reported HR 12740 (H Rept 1923), recommending $49,215,700 -- a cut of $85.6 million from the $134,822,200 in Administration requests considered by the Committee. (The Administration later sent additional requests to the Senate Appropriations Committee that brought the final request for the bill to $169,327,840. See below.)

Nearly the entire cut consisted of the request for $73,666,700 for the IDA payment. The Committee said it could not grant this request because the bill (HR 11001) authorizing U.S. participation in the IDA had not yet been considered by the House.

The Committee also turned down a request from the President for direct appropriations totaling $4,158,000 to finance a stepped-up Government program for promoting export trade. The President had requested the appropriations -- $986,800 for the President's Special International Program on trade fairs and missions, $330,000 for the Foreign Agricultural Service in the Department of Agriculture (plus an additional $170,000 in transferred funds), $1,800,000 for the Department of Commerce and $1,042,000 for the Department of State -- in a message to Congress May 26. He had first announced a program for increasing U.S. export trade in a message to Congress March 17. (For separate story on export program and funds provided for it, see Investigations Section.)

The Committee rejected a request for an additional $7 million federal payment to the District of Columbia but provided $25.2 million for a sewer line from Dulles International Airport and $1,816,000 for federal grants for sewage plant construction.

Floor Action

The House June 23, by voice vote, passed HR 12740 with amendments increasing the funds in the bill to $49,738,200.

There was considerable controversy during floor debate on a $5 million appropriation, not requested by the Administration but included in the bill by the Appropriations Committee, for purchase of two square blocks in the Capitol Hill area of Washington, D.C., to be used for new facilities for the Legislative Branch. (Located within the two-block area was a building housing a private club for leading GOP figures and Republican Members of Congress, the Capitol Hill Club, which had only recently been redecorated. The building, along with other structures in the area, would have to be razed to make way for any new Congressional buildings.)

The proposed purchase was strongly endorsed by House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas). The House beat back two attempts to remove the expansion provision from the bill, first by rejecting by voice vote an amendment to delete the $5 million appropriation and then by rejecting by a 141-252 roll-call vote a motion by John F. Baldwin (R Calif.) to send the bill back to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to report back with the expansion provision deleted. (For voting, see chart p. 458)

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 12740 appropriated:

Agriculture Department	$ 2,000,000
Commerce Department	425,000
District of Columbia	25,200,000
Department of Health, Education and Welfare	1,816,000
Independent Offices	9,026,700
Interior Department	3,353,000
Justice Department	200,000
Legislative Branch	5,022,500
State Department	225,000
Treasury Department	2,470,000
TOTAL	$49,738,200

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

June 24 -- D.R. Matthews (D Fla.) -- Increase funds for the Department of Agriculture by $500,000 to provide for the construction of an entomology laboratory in Orlando, Fla. Voice vote.

Albert Thomas (D Texas) -- Prohibit use of funds appropriated to the Housing and Home Finance Agency to pay contributions to local public agencies for expenditures "which are not consistent with economical operating policies as required by law". Voice.

Thomas -- Provide payment of $22,500 to the widow of the late Rep. Douglas H. Elliott (R Pa.). Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Delete the appropriation of $2,953,000 for the construction of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial in St. Louis. Voice.

Charles Raper Jonas (R N.C.) -- Delete the appropriation of $5 million for the purchase of two square blocks of privately owned land on Capitol Hill. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- July 1 reported an amended version of HR 12740 (S Rept 1832), recommending $161,068,740. New Administration requests sent to the Senate after House action on the bill made the total Administration request for funds $169,327,840. The chief of the new requests were for $30 million for forest highways and $3 million for public lands highways.

In addition to recommending the appropriation of $73,666,700 to the Treasury for IDA, the Committee called for these major increases over the House bill:

- For construction of facilities for the Agricultural Research Service, $5.2 million, a $4.7 million increase over the House figure; there was no budget request for the item.
- For watershed protection and flood prevention, $3,370,000; the House bill and budget proposals provided no money for this item.
- For the Agricultural Marketing Service, $1,350,000; the House provided no funds for this budget-approved item.
- For the Bureau of Public Roads, forest and public land highways $33 million.

The Committee recommended one significant cut in the funds voted by the House. It deleted the appropriation of $5 million to purchase the two square blocks of privately owned land on Capitol Hill. It also deleted $225,000 the House had voted for the U.S.-Mexico International Boundary and Water Commission.

Floor Action

The Senate July 1 passed HR 12740 by a 90-2 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 510) Before passage, the Senate agreed by voice vote to a floor amendment increasing the funds in the bill by $5,256,000 over the amount recommended by the Committee. Over-all, the bill as passed by the Senate carried $166,324,740.

Only one other change was made in the Appropriations Committee's recommendations. The Senate by voice vote agreed to an amendment permitting federal agencies to use funds already appropriated to them to pay wage increases authorized in the federal and postal workers' pay-raise bill (HR 9883 -- PL 86-568), which became law July 1. (See p. 240)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

July 1 -- Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) -- Appropriate $5 million to the International Boundary and Water Commission for the construction of the Amistad Dam on the Rio Grande River and $256,000 for sewage treatment in San Diego, Calif. Voice vote.

Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) -- Permit federal agencies to use funds already appropriated to them to pay their employees at the higher rates authorized by enactment of PL 86-568 and to make requests for supplemental appropriations in 1961 to make up deficits. Voice.

Final Action

There was no formal House-Senate conference on the bill. After Senate passage, HR 12740 was returned to the House, which agreed to several of the Senate amendments but rejected several others. Appropriations Committee members from each chamber then met informally and worked out a compromise. The House then agreed to several more of the Senate amendments, in accord with the compromise, and returned the bill to the Senate, which, in its turn, dropped the rest of its amendments and agreed to one House amendment to a Senate amendment. That cleared the bill for the President July 2. Details of this process:

HOUSE

House consideration of the Senate version of HR 12740 began July 2. By a 291-79 roll call vote, 44 more than the required two-thirds majority, the House agreed to consider a resolution reported by the Rules Committee that day (H Res 596 -- H Rept 2085) which in turn would permit the House to consider the Senate amendments to the bill. The resolution was adopted by a 257-109 roll-call vote. (For voting, see chart p. 464)

Much of the debate that followed centered on the $73,666,700 appropriation for IDA. Albert Thomas (D Texas), floor manager of the bill, moved that the House concur in the IDA appropriation, but the motion was opposed by several Republicans on the Appropriations Committee, including the ranking GOP member, John Taber (N.Y.), who denounced the IDA fund as a "giveaway". The motion to accept the Senate amendment was agreed to on a 127-100 standing vote.

The House, by a 165-30 standing vote, refused to agree to the Senate amendment that had deleted from the bill the $5 million voted by the House for purchase of the two square blocks of land on Capitol Hill.

The House also refused to accept the Senate amendments that (1) provided $33 million for the Bureau of Public Roads, (2) increased the appropriation for the Agricultural Research Service from the House figure of $500,000 to $5.2 million and (3) provided $1,350,000 to the Agricultural Marketing Service for poultry inspection.

A short time later, Thomas reported to the House that the Senate insisted on retaining in the final version of the bill the amendments providing funds for the Agricultural Research and Marketing Services. If the House would accept those amendments, Thomas said, the Senate in turn would agree to the House position on other amendments, including $5 million for land purchase.

After Thomas' report, the House agreed by voice votes to accept the Senate language on agricultural research and marketing funds and sent the bill back to the Senate.

SENATE

The Senate cleared the bill for the President just before midnight July 2 by agreeing to one House amendment to a Senate amendment and dropping those of its remaining amendments to which the House objected.

The final version of the bill carried $138,293,740, including the $73,666,700 for the IDA; the $5,200,000 for the Agricultural Research Service; the $1,350,000 for the Agricultural Marketing Service; the $5 million for the purchase of land on Capitol Hill; and $5,225,000 for the U.S.-Mexico Commission.

Dropped from the final version were the $33 million in highway funds for forest and public lands roads and the Senate amendment on postal and federal pay raises.

The $33 million in highway money, which had been dropped from the Commerce Department funds bill (HR 10234 -- PL 86-451) as well as the First Supplemental, was eventually appropriated (in part) in the Second Supplemental Appropriations Bill for fiscal 1961 (HR 13161 -- PL 86-722).

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL, 1960

HR 10743 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1292) Feb. 26, 1960. Recommended appropriations: $229,175,864.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote Feb. 29. Voted: $237,505,864. (For roll-call vote, see p. 426)
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1161) March 11. Recommended: $979,908,103.
- Passed by the Senate, amended, by a 79-2 roll-call vote March 24. (See p. 484) Voted: $995,491,103.
- Conference report (H Rept 1452) agreed to by voice votes of House April 6 and Senate April 7.

PL 86-424 -- Signed into law April 13. Final total: $955,370,003.

HR 10743, which provided supplementary funds for fiscal 1960 for various Government departments, appropriated $63,134,885 less than Administration requests. The bill's most controversial item was a $675 million request by the Administration to give the Commodity Credit Corp. a greater margin for its price-support program. The sum was disallowed by the House, but restored by the Senate and retained in the final bill by House-Senate conferees.

BACKGROUND -- The House Appropriations Committee considered budget requests of $1,008,398,264; the Senate Committee considered requests of $1,017,784,888. After the Senate reported the bill, President Eisenhower sent additional requests for $500,000 for the Immigration and Naturalization Service and $220,000 for the U.S.-Mexico International Boundary and Water Commission, bringing total requests to $1,018,504,888, including $75,000 in indefinite appropriations.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Feb. 26 reported HR 10743 (H Rept 1292) and recommended appropriation of $229,125,864 in definite appropriations and $50,000 in indefinite appropriations. The Committee disallowed $675 million requested by the Administration for the Commodity Credit Corp. for the price-support program, declaring the Agriculture Department "has presented no real need for additional funds at this time." It also urged the agency to sell its surplus commodities at competitive prices, both to provide additional capital and reduce warehousing costs. The report said the cost of warehousing, transportation and interest for surplus commodities in 1960 alone was estimated at $1,262,000,000 and for fiscal 1959 it was $827,500,000. The report said "denial of these funds will in no way hurt the farmer," and that "surely no one can claim that these tremendous warehouse expenditures help either farmer or consumer."

In denying the Housing and Home Finance Agency its request for $50 million to liquidate obligations for urban renewal-slum clearance grants the Committee said that although it favored the programs, "Congress has abdicated its annual control over this vast expenditure of public funds" in favor of the "back-door approach to the Treasury." The Committee also cut $16 million from a $32 million Commerce Department request for payment of operating-differential subsidies in maritime activities. The Air Force was cut $19 million below the $25 million request for personnel funds.

Floor Action

The House Feb. 29 passed HR 10743, amended, by voice vote. The bill provided $237,455,864 definite appropriations and $50,000 indefinite appropriations for various Government agencies for the year ending June 30 -- a grand total of $237,505,864. The total was $770,892,400 less than Administration requests and $8,330,000 more than the Appropriations Committee approved -- with the entire addition voted for payments to school districts in federally impacted areas.

The House rejected, by a 158-187 roll-call vote, an amendment by Rep. Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) to restore to the bill $50 million for the urban renewal and slum clearance program which had been denied by the Committee. The amendment was approved earlier by two standing votes. President Eisenhower had requested the money in a Feb. 8 message. (For voting, see chart p. 370)

Proponents held that the funds were authorized to pay off contracts for slum clearance grants, were a Government obligation and were already committed in many cities. Opponents agreed with the Committee's objection to financing the program by a "back-door approach to the Treasury". The Committee conceded that funds to meet obligations would have to be appropriated "at some time in the future".

The additional $8.3 million in school payments, not requested by the President, won strong bipartisan support on the floor. Congressmen stressed their areas' needs, said the Government to date had met only 95 percent of its obligations and blamed the fund shortage on "an incorrect estimate" by the Budget Bureau in the fiscal 1960 budget.

Debate centered on the largest cut in the bill -- denial of $675 million for the CCC. Opponents said the funds would serve only as "an additional cushion" since the agency itself estimated it would have a year-end surplus of $441 million. Those supporting the request said that if the funds were not included in the bill they would have to be added to fiscal 1961 appropriations, forcing Congress into "the ridiculous position of exceeding the budget because of the action taken here today".

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Feb. 29 -- Edward P. Boland (D Mass.) -- Add $8,330,000 to Health, Education and Welfare funds for payments for maintenance and operation of school districts in federally impacted areas. Voice vote.

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Prohibit spending any of $2,660,000 in Interior Department funds allotted for parking areas at a District of Columbia stadium until stadium bonds were sold and a construction contract let. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

Feb. 29 -- Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- Add $50 million to Housing and Home Finance Agency funds to liquidate obligations for urban renewal-slum clearance grants. Accepted, standing vote, 66-65; teller vote, 92-89. Rejected, roll-call vote, 158-187.

Gross -- Cut from Interior Department funds $2,660,000 allotted for work at D.C. stadium. Voice.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 11 reported HR 10743 (S Rept 1161). The Committee considered requests for $1,017,784,888 and recommended $979,908,103 definite and indefinite funds. The Committee restored the $675 million budget request to permit the CCC to replenish capital losses sustained during fiscal 1959.

The Committee restored three other House cuts when it approved: $35 million for the Housing and Home Finance Agency for capital grants for slum clearance and urban renewal; an additional $16 million for merchant marine operating subsidies; and $3 million for the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization to match state and local civil defense funds. In reviving a 1959 dispute with the House, the Senate Committee said it agreed with President Eisenhower that the funds were necessary to "strengthen civil defense at state and local levels". (1959 Almanac p. 326)

The Committee also voted a $7,362,000 addition to HEW funds for fiscal 1959 maintenance and operation payments to federally impacted school areas -- bringing that year's total to $157,362,000.

Floor Action

The Senate March 24, by a 79-2 roll-call vote, passed HR 10743, amended, providing $955,441,103 definite and $50,000 indefinite appropriations -- $995,491,103 in all. The total was $757,985,239 more than the House had voted. (For voting, see chart p. 484)

The Senate first adopted en bloc amendments of the Senate Appropriations Committee amounting to $742,402,239 and then approved five floor amendments, each by voice vote. The first two, offered by Sen. Carl Hayden (D Ariz.) on behalf of the Committee, provided an additional $500,000 for the Immigration and Naturalization Service to help prevent illegal flights and sailings from the United States to Cuba and $220,000 to the U.S.-Mexican International Boundary and Water Commission for the treatment of sewage pollution in the Tijuana-San Diego border area. These two sums were requested by the Administration after the Committee reported the bill.

The Senate agreed, without opposition, to an amendment raising from $8,330,000 to $22,343,000 the House-voted funds for federal payments for school operations in federally impacted areas. The total represented the latest estimates by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare of the sum needed to cover in full the payments to school districts authorized in the law (PL 81-874). The Administration, which had tried for several years to cut back the authorization, did not request the funds. Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R Mass.) said it was "the feeling of the Bureau of the Budget that these payments (in full) are not obligatory". The amendment brought the entire fiscal 1960 appropriation for the program to $186,300,000.

The Senate also voted $100,000 for the U.S. Information Agency to buy commercial radio or television time for Spanish-language broadcasts to Cuba explaining U.S. policies toward that country. The final amendment adopted by the Senate reinstated $750,000 which the House had cut from a Treasury request for administering the public debt.

The bill was passed over little opposition, with Sens. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.) and Stephen M. Young (D Ohio) casting the only dissenting votes. Douglas said he voted against the bill because he was tired of the Administration requesting more supplemental appropriations while at the same time calling Democrats "budget busters". He said either the full amount should be requested in the original appropriation or the public should be told the extra funds were not "initiated by Congress, but asked for, then begged for, by the Administration and the Budget Bureau".

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

March 24 -- Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.) -- Appropriate $100,000 to U.S.I.A. to purchase commercial time for Spanish-language broadcasts to Cuba. Voice vote.

Thomas H. Kuchel (R Calif.) -- Add $14,013,000 to HEW funds for fiscal 1960 aid to federally impacted school areas. Voice.

A. Willis Robertson (D Va.) -- Add $750,000 to Treasury funds to help administer the national debt. Voice.

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee April 5 reported HR 10743 (H Rept 1452), recommending $955,320,003 definite funds and $50,000 indefinite for various Government agencies for fiscal 1960.

Conferees retained in the bill the Senate's largest single addition to the House-passed measure -- $675 million for the CCC. Conferees also approved $17.5 million for urban renewal and slum clearance grants. For federal payments to school districts in federally impacted areas, for which the Administration had made no request, conferees agreed on the Senate-voted $22,-343,000, which was $14,013,000 more than the House had voted.

The conferees agreed to eliminate a Senate-passed proposal to give the U.S. Information Agency $100,000 for Spanish-language radio broadcasts "to cultivate friendship with the people of Cuba". The conferees said, however, that the proposal should receive "careful consideration" by the Executive Branch, and if it was approved the program could be implemented with unobligated funds under regular appropriations for salaries and expenses. Conferees allowed $300,000 for the Immigration and Naturalization Service to help prevent illegal flights and sailings to Cuba. They deleted the $220,000 added by the Senate for the U.S.-Mexico Boundary and Water Commission.

Conferees disallowed $3 million asked by the Administration and voted by the Senate to initiate a program authorized in 1958 for federal contributions to states and localities for civil defense. They also eliminated $7,362,000 voted by the Senate to pay in full fiscal 1959 entitlements for federally impacted school districts. Under Department of Commerce maritime activities, conferees agreed on $24 million for operating-differential subsidies instead of the $32 million requested by the Administration and voted by the Senate and the $16 million voted by the House. Conferees agreed to the Senate-voted $4 million in grants to states for public assistance under the Social Security Administration, instead of the $9.5 million voted by the House and the $10 million in budget requests.

ACTION -- The House April 6 and the Senate April 7 approved the conference report by voice votes.

Of the $3,994,097,600 appropriated in HR 12117, $1,323,963,600 was for the regular activities of the Department of Agriculture and $2,670,134,000 was for the Commodity Credit Corporation. The amount appropriated was $141,165,590 less than requested by the Administration, with the major cut -- $98.5 million -- coming from funds requested to restore CCC capital expended for price support programs.

Congress also cut $31,783,000 from the President's $361,783,000 request for the Conservation Reserve Program (soil bank). No advance authorization for the CRP for crop year 1961 was included, however, since CRP authority for new contracts was due to expire Dec. 31, 1960, and Congress did not vote extension.

In addition to the direct appropriations carried in the bill, HR 12117 provided $577 million in low-interest Treasury loans to be administered by the Rural Electrification Administration and the Farmers Home Administration. Included in the sums authorized to REA and FHA were two contingency funds, $120 million for REA and $40 million for the Farmers Home Administration. The contingency funds were set aside for the two agencies for use if regular loan funds were exhausted. Loans made from the contingency funds must be approved by the Bureau of the Budget.

Limited to $50,000 the total amount of CCC price-support loans and purchases that could be made to any one person on the 1961 production of any surplus agricultural commodity, unless such person agreed either to (1) reduce the following year's production up to 20 percent, as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, or (2) repay any loan in excess of $50,000 within 12 months, or later, as determined by the Secretary; exempted cooperative marketing organizations from the limitaton; directed the Secretary to issue regulations necessary to carry out the program.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 6 reported HR 12117 (H Rept 1592), recommending $3,964,781,500 in appropriations, a cut of $170,481,690 from the Administration request.

The major part of the cut was from CCC funds -- $98.5 million -- and was made, according to the report, because savings equal to that amount would be realized if the CCC went through with its plans to pay lower rates to commercial warehouses and elevators for storing government-owned grain. The CCC proposed the lower rate schedule March 16, 1960. (For grain storage hearings, see Investigations Section.)

Another major cut was in funds for the Conservation Reserve Program (soil bank). The Administration asked for $361,783,000; the Committee recommended $310,000,000, saying that a balance of $30 million in unexpended appropriations from prior years would be available in fiscal 1961 and that funds requested for the Commodity Stabilization Service operating expenses at national, state and county levels appeared to be overstated. The Committee recommended advance authorizations of $250 million for the Agricultural Conservation Program -- $100 million over the Administration request.

The Committee said these facts were evident:

- Past attempts to control production had not worked; CCC surplus, for which almost $26 billion had been spent, have continued to pile up.
- Even with sales to the Government, farmers' income had dropped to a point where a further loss of farm purchasing power must be averted.
- Any future farm program must insure that farm income should come from the market place instead of the Government; production must be limited to crops necessary to domestic and foreign markets.
- Overproduction could be cut back without injury to farm income or further cost to the taxpayer by returning Government-held surpluses to farmers.

Once adjustment of production is accomplished, the Committee said, a commission should be appointed to prepare and submit to Congress a farm plan based on protecting farm income at the market place and keeping production in line with market needs.

The Committee criticized what it called excessive storage costs for surplus commodities and failure of the CCC to sell surpluses competitively in world markets. It directed that in the future the officers of the CCC should be full-time employees instead of Agriculture Department officials with other activities.

Floor Action

The House May 11, by voice vote, passed HR 12117 and sent it to the Senate with amendments. As passed by the House, the bill made appropriations of $3,937,943,500, or $197,319,690 less than the amount requested by the Administration.

The bill also was $26,838,000 under the amount recommended by the House Appropriations Committee, the entire cut coming when the Presiding Officer upheld a point of order against a section providing funds for the Agricultural Marketing Service.

The point of order arose as follows: in the 1957 Poultry Products Inspection Act, the Agriculture Department was permitted to exempt from federal inspection plants processing certain types of poultry meats. The exemption power expired June 30, 1960. The Administration in 1960 asked Congress to extend the exemption authority, but the bill to do this (HR 11050) appeared headed for defeat in the House Agriculture Committee (see below).

Consequently, the House Appropriations Committee inserted into the Agriculture funds bill, HR 12117, a legislative provision continuing the exemption. However, on the House floor, first John D. Dingell (D Mich.) and then Fred Marshall (D Minn.) objected to the provision as legislation in an appropriations bill, not permitted by House rules. Marshall's objection, which was upheld, struck an entire section on marketing service funds, including the $26,838,000 as well as the legislative language appended.

The bill also made loan authorizations of $290 million for the REA (this included $100 million set aside for contingencies only) and $267 million for the Farmers Home Administration (including $40 million for contingencies.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

May 11 -- Harold D. Cooley (D N.C.) -- Delete a section prohibiting the use of CCC funds for the reclassing, or regrading, of cotton after the cotton had been sold. Standing vote, 85-65; teller vote, 116-67.

Sidney R. Yates (D Ill.) -- Require the CCC to make maximum use of Government warehouses for storing surplus commodities. Voice.

Paul Brown (D Ga.) -- Delete the section prohibiting employees of the Agriculture Department from also serving on the Board or as officers of the CCC. Voice.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 11 -- Albert H. Quie (R Minn.) -- Delete the county-by-county transfer of 5 percent of ACP funds to the Soil Conservation Service so that the SCS could carry out its program without depending on the county-by-county limitation. Voice.

Glenard P. Lipscomb (R Calif.) -- Provide that at least $800,000 of funds appropriated to the Foreign Agricultural Service be used to purchase foreign currencies owned by the Treasury. Standing, 22-52.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 20 reported HR 12117 (S Rept 1404) with funds exceeding the amount appropriated by the House by $62,279,183. The Senate Committee recommended appropriations of $4,000,222,683; it did not reduce any of the House-approved provisions. Major increases approved were in funds for the Conservation Reserve Program, $335 million compared to $310 million in the House bill, and for marketing services, $26,579,900, compared to nothing in the House bill.

The Senate Committee struck from the bill the House amendment that required maximum use of Government-owned facilities for storage of surplus crops.

The Committee also increased the REA contingency fund by $20 million.

Floor Action

The Senate May 24, by a 74-1 roll-call vote, passed HR 12117, amended. As passed by the Senate, the bill made appropriations of $4,005,222,683. (For voting, see chart p. 496)

The lone vote against passage of HR 12117 was cast by Prescott Bush (R Conn.), who called it a "protest against the refusal of this and other Democratic-controlled Congresses to cooperate with President Eisenhower and Secretary of Agriculture Benson."

With the exception of an amendment offered by Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) and adopted by voice vote, the measure conformed to the recommendations of the Senate Appropriations Committee. The Kerr amendment increased from $32 million to $37 million the federal funds provided for watershed protection projects.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

March 24 -- Robert S. Kerr (D Okla.) -- Increase federal money for watershed protection from $32 million to $37 million. Voice vote.

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

May 24 -- John J. Williams (R Del.) -- Strike from the bill a provision authorizing to the defunct Federal Farm Mortgage Corp. enough money to complete the liquidation of its assets (estimated at $600). Voice.

Williams and Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) -- Reduce from $250 million to $100 million the calendar 1961 authorization for the Agricultural Conservation Program. Voice.

Hubert H. Humphrey (D Minn.) -- Increase funds for eradication of brucellosis from $19 million to $22 million. Voice.

Humphrey -- Increase from $83,132,000 to $83,882,000 the appropriation for the technical assistance program of the Soil Conservation Service. Voice.

Humphrey -- Increase from $110 million to $135 million funds for the school lunch program. Voice.

Conference

The House and Senate June 15, by voice votes, agreed to the conference report (H Rept 1863) on the bill. The final version carried $3,994,097,600, including $335 million for the Conservation Reserve Program, $35 million for watershed protection and $26,579,900 for marketing services. The conferees deleted the House provision requiring maximum use of Government-owned storage facilities for storing surpluses and instead recommended that commercial warehouses continue to be used for most surplus stocks unless it were shown that Government-owned bins were more economical.

Poultry Inspection Bill

The House Agriculture Committee June 16 tabled the Administration-backed bill (HR 11050) to extend the Agriculture Department's existing authority to exempt from inspection certain secondary poultry operations. The 1957 Poultry Products Inspection Act required all poultry products processed for interstate commerce to be prepared under federal inspection, but permitted, up to June 30, 1960, exemption for plants processing food products containing poultry meat, such as frozen chicken pies and canned chicken soups. (1957 Almanac p. 665)

In a one-day hearing June 13 O.V. Wells, administrator of the Agriculture Department's marketing service, supported the bill and said the voluntary inspection system, under which the Government inspects processing plants willing to pay for the service, had worked so well there was "serious doubt" of the need for the Government to undertake the added $1,350,000 cost for complete inspection.

The bill was opposed by spokesmen for the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America (AFL-CIO), the American Veterinary Medical Assn., the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the Institute of American Poultry Industries. They said the Government risked exposing consumers to contaminated products if the exemptions were continued.

Since HR 11050, by being tabled, was killed, and since the attempt to extend the exemption authority by a legislative provision in the Agriculture Department funds bill (HR 12117) was thwarted by a point of order in the House (see above), the exemption authority expired June 30, 1960, as scheduled.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES

HR 11776 -- Reported April 14, 1960 (H Rept 1519) by the House Appropriations Committee. Recommended appropriation: $8,146,167,400.

- Passed House, amended, by voice vote April 20. (For roll-call vote on amendment, see p. 434) Voted: $8,182,067,400.
- Reported June 17 (S Rept 1611) by Senate Appropriations Committee. Recommended: $8,414,412,900.
- Passed Senate, amended, by 75-8 roll-call vote June 22. (See p. 507) Voted: $8,459,412,900.
- Conference report (H Rept 2063) agreed to by voice votes of Senate and House July 1.

PL 86-626 -- Signed into law July 12. Final total: $8,311,893,400.

HR 11776 made direct appropriations of $8,307,964,900 and indefinite appropriations of $3,928,500 in fiscal 1961 for 17 federal agencies and the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization.

The grand total in the bill, $8,311,893,400, was $147,519,500 less than provided in the initial Senate version of the bill and $105,503,600 less than the Administration request for funds, but $129,826,000 more than originally voted by the House and $1,145,987,700 more than appropriated to the 17 agencies and the OCDM the previous year in various regular and supplemental bills.

More than half of the funds carried in the legislation were earmarked for the Veterans Administration, which received $5,363,302,000. The VA had requested $3,840,000,000 for pension and compensation payments to veterans and their survivors, but Congress cut that by $40 million. It increased the budget figure for medical research by $4.5 million.

In addition to cutting $40 million from the VA pension and compensation request, the bill cut requests for OCDM by about $16 million, for the National Science Foundation by about $16 million and for the General Services Administration about $20 million. Although there was no Administration request for them, the bill provided funds of $20 million for initiation of a revolving loan fund for housing for the elderly, the first appropriation ever made for the fund, which was set up in the 1959 omnibus housing bill (PL 86-372 -- 1959 Almanac p. 245).

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration received $915 million for fiscal 1961, exactly what the President had requested. The initial budget request of $802 million was supplemented Feb. 1 by an additional Presidential request for $113 million for the Saturn booster rocket, making a $915 million total request.

SPACE SUPPLEMENTAL

In a related development on space funds President Eisenhower April 14 signed into law a measure (H J Res 621 -- PL 86-425) appropriating supplemental funds of $23 million for the NASA in fiscal 1960. H J Res 621 also carried $79,000 for a Joint Atomic Energy Committee study on the atoms-for-peace program.

H J Res 621 was reported (H Rept 1280) Feb. 19 by the House Appropriations Committee, carrying only the $23 million for the space agency -- $19 million of it for the Project Mercury man-in-space program and $4 million for modifications at the Atlantic Missile Range for advanced launch vehicles. Of 250 new supergrade positions planned by NASA, the Committee reported favorably on only 175, saying the agency was getting too "topheavy". The House passed H J Res 621 Feb. 23 by voice vote.

H J Res 621 was reported (S Rept 1140) Feb. 26 by the Senate Appropriations Committee, which supported the NASA decision to create 250 supergrade posts, because of the agency's "enormously expanded programs of the immediate future."

The Senate March 24 passed H J Res 621, by an 82-0 roll-call vote. (For voting, see p. 484) The only change from the House version was addition of the $79,000 for the atoms-for-peace study. The House, by voice vote April 11, agreed to the Senate amendment, clearing the bill for the President. The supplemental brought fiscal 1960 funds for NASA to $523,575,000.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- April 14 reported HR 11776 (H Rept 1519) recommending $8,146,167,400, which was about $270 million below the revised budget request.

The Committee bill provided $876,015,000 for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, a cut of $38,985,000 from the $915,000,000 requested. It provided the full amount requested for the development of new rockets -- $277,608,000 -- but made reductions in funds requested for research and development, construction and personnel. The bill also cut the proposed budget for the National Science Foundation by 15 percent -- from $191.6 million to $160 million.

Other major cuts made by the Committee and the corresponding requests:

Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization: requested $76,350,000; the Committee cut this by $24,450,000, disallowing $12 million requested to implement a program authorized in 1958 for federal contributions to states and communities for civil defense.

Civil Aeronautics Board: requested $76,584,000; the Committee cut this by $9,299,000, most of it coming from the money for subsidies to local airlines.

Federal Aviation Agency: requested $713 million; the Committee cut this by $41,075,000. The money approved included $152.5 million for air navigation facilities ($21.5 million less than requested) and $80 million for grants to states and communities for airport construction (the full amount requested).

General Services Administration: requested $503,992,000; the Committee cut this by $41,454,500. The Committee reduced the request of $185,000,000 for the construction and acquisition of public buildings by providing separate funds of $144,836,000 for construction and $25 million for the sites and expenses of new projects.

Veterans Administration: requested $5,397,291,000; the Committee cut this by $74,389,000, more than half ($40 million) coming from the $3,840,000,000 requested for compensation and pensions.

Floor Action

The House April 20 passed by voice vote and sent to the Senate an amended bill (HR 11776) appropriating $8,182,067,400 in fiscal 1961 for 17 independent federal agencies and the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization, which is under the Executive Office of the President. The total was $235 million below Administration requests and $35,900,000 more than the Appropriations Committee recommended -- all of the increase going to the Veterans Administration.

On a 218-155 roll-call vote April 20, the House voted to increase funds for VA hospitals from $39.1 million to $75 million. The $35.9 million increase would be used to build new VA hospitals in Washington, D.C. and Martinez, Calif., and to make alterations on existing hospitals. (For voting, see chart p. 434)

The vote to increase the hospital funds represented a victory for the Eisenhower Administration. The President had requested $75 million for the hospital projects in his fiscal 1961 budget, but the Independent Offices Appropriations Subcommittee reduced the figure to $39.1 million, expressing doubts about the proposed location of the California hospital and the need for the Washington one.

An effort to add another $45 million to the bill failed April 19. By a 4-72 standing vote, the House rejected an amendment by Rep. Roman C. Pucinski (D Ill.) to increase the Government's contribution to the fund for housing for the elderly from $5 million to $50 million. Pucinski argued that the Housing Act of 1959 (PL 86-372) authorized $50 million as the Government's contribution to a revolving loan fund for elderly persons. Chairman Albert Thomas (D Texas) of the Appropriations Subcommittee said the Administration had made no request for such a program, that the Subcommittee had recommended an initial appropriation of $5 million to encourage the Administration to set up test projects.

Rep. H.R. Gross (R Iowa) succeeded in removing from the measure a section authorizing $64,732,600 for the construction of three Government buildings in Washington, D.C. Gross made the point of order that the projects had not been approved by the Senate and House Public Works Committees, as was required by the Public Buildings Act of 1959 (PL 86-249). The point of order was sustained.

PROVISIONS -- As sent to the Senate, HR 11776 appropriated:

AMENDMENTS REJECTED

April 19 -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Delete $5,000 earmarked for entertainment expenses of the Federal Aviation Agency. Voice.

Roman C. Pucinski (D Ill.) -- Increase from $5 million to $50 million the federal payment to a new revolving loan fund to provide housing for the elderly. Standing, 4-72.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- June 17 reported HR 11776 (S Rept 1611) with a total recommendation of $8,414,412,900. This sum was only $2,984,100 short of the Administration request; it was $232,345,500 higher than in the House version.

The Committee agreed with the House in providing $5 million for direct loans for housing for the elderly -- a program opposed by the Administration. In addition, the Committee exceeded budget requests by sums of $10,531,000 for medical research by the Veterans Administration and $50 million for National Aeronautics and Space Administration research and development. (Congress May 24 had authorized the $50 million in the NASA authorization bill (HR 10809 -- PL 86-481) for fiscal 1961.

In other actions affecting NASA appropriations, the Committee restored House cuts of $4,260,000 for salaries and expenses; $19,213,000 for research and development (as well as adding the $50 million); and $15,512,000 for construction and equipment which brought all three items up to the budget requests.

The House Appropriations Committee had cut the OCDM request of $76,350,000 by $24,450,000, including $12 million requested to implement a program authorized in 1958 for federal contributions for personnel and administration of state civil defense programs. The Senate Committee, as it had in previous years, restored the $12 million, raising the total for the OCDM matching grants program to $22 million.

The Committee also recommended $200,000 for a new and separate Complaints and Compliance Division in the Broadcast Bureau of the Federal Communications Commission. The Committee frowned on the proposed monitoring program and directed that in "no way are such funds to be utilized in any function remotely approaching censorship."

Other actions of the Committee included:

- Restoration of authority for the construction of three Government office buildings in Washington, D.C. Authority to spend on the three buildings was removed from the House bill on a point of order because the projects had not been approved by the Senate and House Public Works Committees as required by the Public Buildings Act of 1959. (1959 Almanac p. 283) Following the House action, the buildings had been approved by the Senate Committee April 29 and the House Committee May 17.
- Addition of $31,600,000 to the funds appropriated by the House for salaries and expenses of the National Science Foundation and for its purchase of foreign currencies. That brought the total to the $191,600,000 requested by the President.

The Senate Committee reduced House-approved items as follows: $5,500,000 from the GSA for public building projects; and $40,000 for the National Capital Housing Authority, deleting the agency from the bill with instructions that it operate with a budget approved by the Public Housing Administration.

Floor Action

The Senate June 22 passed, by a 75-8 roll-call vote, an amended bill (HR 11776) appropriating $8,459,412,900 in fiscal 1961 for 16 independent federal agencies and the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization, which is under the Executive Office of the President. The total was $42,015,900 more than the President requested and $277,345,500 more than the House voted. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration was given $50 million more than the President requested.

On a 58-29 roll call the Senate agreed to a motion by Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.) to table an amendment by Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) prohibiting the use of funds for the construction of airport terminal buildings which would contain segregated facilities. Magnuson opposed the amendment on the grounds that properly it should be applied to the Federal Airport Act and that appropriations in the bill were for contracts which were already in effect. (For voting, see chart p. 507)

The Senate adopted by voice vote two amendments relating to housing for the elderly. The first, offered by Karl E. Mundt (R S.D.), earmarked $150,000 for loans to build housing for elderly Indians on reservations. The provisions, which did not appropriate specific funds, was designed as a pilot project to help finance rest homes.

The second amendment, offered by Harrison A. Williams Jr. (D N.J.), raised from $5 million to $50 million funds for housing for the elderly.

Ruled out of order as constituting legislation on an appropriation bill was an amendment by Frank J. Lausche (D Ohio) which would have prohibited the use of funds in the bill for the construction of any airport facility, unless the contract prohibited the sale of obscene, lewd, or lascivious printed matter within the facility.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 11776 appropriated:

Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization	$ 68,850,000

The Senate and House July 1, by voice votes, agreed to the conference report (H Rept 2063) on the bill. The conference version carried funds of $8,311,893,400, including $20 million for the revolving fund for housing for the elderly, $6 million for the disputed federal contributions to state civil defense programs, and $915 million for NASA. Funds of $40,000 were restored to the National Capital Housing Authority.

BACKGROUND -- The President requested fiscal 1961 appropriations of $1,188,000,000, part of which had been authorized in previous years. The fiscal 1961 authorization bill carried $1,185,320,000. (See story p. 266)

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- May 13 reported HR 12231 (H Rept 1606), with amendments, recommending $876,145,000. The Committee said, "There is a real need for better analysis and comparison of projects between the several services." The Committee directed the Defense Department to file with the Committee by Jan. 15, 1961, a report on general and specific improvements in military construction program planning.

The Committee said the armed services were not getting the most out of their facilities because of a failure to exchange information on curtailment of facilities.

The Committee denied funds for all overseas housing programs until a "more strict policy on controlling dependents going overseas" to critical areas could be formulated by the Defense Department. The Committee also denied funds for service commissaries, which it said were operating inefficiently.

Funds to the Navy and Air Force for testing of missile inertial guidance equipment were denied by the Committee pending a study looking toward integration of the proposed facilities.

The Committee said that over 40 percent of the Air Force fiscal 1961 requests were directly related to the Air Force missile programs, for which $300 million was appropriated.

Floor Action

The House June 9 passed HR 12231 by voice vote after agreeing to the committee amendments.

AMENDMENT REJECTED

June 9 -- Clare E. Hoffman (R Mich.) -- Prohibit funds from being spent on military construction contracts in danger of being unfulfilled because of labor union strikes, slow-downs or work-stoppages. Voice.

DEBATE -- June 9 -- Hoffman -- "...usually the ink is not dry on the contract for construction before there is a demand for higher wages...(which) increase costs."

Harry R. Sheppard (D Calif.) -- "There has been more fiscal legerdemain concerned with these budget estimates than I have seen in my period of service on the Committee on Appropriations. There has been so much confusion in the air defense program, for example, that those concerned with the program who recommended changes are still studying the effects of their recommendations...."

Robert L.F. Sikes (D Fla.) -- The Defense Department should make greater effort to use existing facilities instead of constructing new ones. "It creates havoc in the economy of an area where a base is closed."

H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Praised the Committee for "cutting spending almost a half-billion dollars below last year."

Senate

The Senate Appropriations Committee June 24 reported (S Rept 1684) HR 12231, with amendments, recommending $1,067,227,000. The Committee concurred in House cuts in funds requested for Bomarc missile facilities, Super Sage early warning system facilities, and overseas housing programs and commissaries, but restored funds for various scientific laboratories. The Committee raised appropriations for 107 projects of the Army National Guard armory construction program from the $8 million recommended by the Administration to $17,540,000, and raised the Air National Guard and Army Reserve budget requests by $6,850,000 and $4,038,000.

The Senate June 27, by an 81-0 roll-call vote, passed the Committee version of the bill without changes. (For voting see chart p. 528)

Conference

Both chambers July 1, by voice votes, agreed to the conference report (H Rept 2062), recommending $994,855,000. The final version retained the Senate increases for laboratories and for the Army Reserve, Army National Guard and Air National Guard, and appropriated $70 million for Titan facilities.

HR 10401 made direct appropriations of $545,850,600 and indefinite appropriations of $11,817,000 for the Interior Department and related agencies in fiscal 1961.

The total, $557,667,600, was $31,545,025 less than the Senate had voted in its initial action on the bill, but $7,337,300 more than the Administration request, $14,292,000 over the amount originally voted by the House and $22,054,347 greater than appropriated the previous year.

The largest single appropriation in the bill, $153,576,500, was for the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture and was nearly $5 million over the Administration request. Funds for Interior Department reclamation projects were not included in HR 10401, as such projects are financed separately in a public works appropriations bill.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Feb. 12 reported HR 10401 (H Rept 1264), recommending $543,375,600, a reduction of the President's budget requests by $6,954,700. The Committee noted that appropriations for the Forest Service had grown from $85 million in fiscal 1955 to a projected $149 million in fiscal 1961, and said that the six-year increase of about 75 percent "represents the maximum justified under present fiscal conditions."

Floor Action

After brief debate concentrating largely on a Committee cut of $230,000 in the $1,180,000 request for the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission, the House Feb. 16 by voice vote passed HR 10401 carrying $543,375,600, the amount recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

Feb. 16 -- H.R. Gross (R Iowa) -- Stipulate that no funds in the bill could be used to propagandize Congress for the support or defeat of legislation. Voice vote.

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- March 25 reported HR 10401 (S Rept 1203), recommending $586,259,500 -- about $42.8 million more than voted by the House. Part of the difference came from an increase of nearly $20 million over the $149 million budget and House figure for the Forest Service. The Committee said population pressure necessitated intensified management and research programs to provide timber, water, forage and recreation for an estimated 325 million people by the year 2000.

The Committee also made these increases over budget requests for Interior agencies: $4 million for land management, almost $6 million for Indian affairs, $1.7 million for the Geological Survey, $3.8 million for the Bureau of Mines and $2.9 million for fish and wildlife.

Floor Action

The Senate March 29, by a 78-0 roll-call vote, passed and sent to conference an amended bill (HR 10401) making total appropriations of $589,212,625 to run the Interior Department and related agencies during fiscal 1961. Prior to passage, the Senate voted 47-37 to accept an amendment by Missouri's Sens. Stuart Symington (D) and Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D) to increase the federal contribution to the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial project in St. Louis by $2,953,125. The two Missourians contended the figure requested by the Administration and approved by the House -- $1,650,000 -- would cause wasteful delays in the project. They said the Government had committed itself, through Congressional authorizations, to contributions totaling $17,250,000 but had appropriated only $2,640,000. (For voting, see chart p. 484-85)

AMENDMENT ACCEPTED

March 29 -- Symington and Hennings -- Increase construction funds for the National Park Service from $18,460,000 to $21,413,125, of which $4,603,125 was earmarked for the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial project in St. Louis. Roll-call vote, 47-37.

CONFERENCE -- Following a House-Senate conference, the conference report (H Rept 1571) was agreed to May 5 by voice votes in both chambers. The final version of the bill appropriated $557,667,600.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL, 1961

HR 13161 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 2166) Aug. 26, 1960. Recommended appropriations: $90,587,481.

- Passed by the House, amended, by voice vote Aug. 26. Voted: $91,085,481.
- Reported, amended, by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1925) Aug. 27. Recommended: $305,042,731.
- Passed by the Senate by a 67-21 roll-call vote Aug. 29. (See p. 517) Voted: $305,042,731.
- Conference report (H Rept 2211) agreed to by voice votes of House and Senate Aug. 31. (For House roll calls see p. 470)

PL 86-722 -- Signed into law Sept. 8. Final total: $162,186,981.

HR 13161, the Second Supplemental Appropriations bill for fiscal 1961, was the subject of heated debate in the last days of the August session of Congress. The bill originally was a non-controversial catch-all measure. Administration appeals led the Senate to add to it $190 million for the Mutual Security Program to offset some of the cuts made in the regular fiscal 1961 mutual security appropriations bill (HR 12619). (See p. 179) In final House action on the HR 13161 conference report, only $65 million of the $190 million was approved for mutual security, and then only by a close roll-call vote that involved last-minute vote switching. (See below) The $65 million was for defense support.

As enacted, HR 13161 provided $162,186,981 for various Government programs and agencies. The bill's total was $71,101,500 more than House-approved funds, and $142,855,750 less than the Senate originally had voted.

PROVISIONS -- The funds in HR 13161 as it became law:

In addition, HR 13161:

Amended the Independent Offices Appropriation Act of 1961 (HR 11776) to authorize the Administrator of General Services to use savings realized in construction of public buildings to convert and remodel existing Government-owned facilities for other public use or for disposition as surplus property.

Increased the annual salary of the Commissioner of the Reclamation Bureau from $17,500 to $19,000 for as long as the job was held by the current commissioner, Floyd E. Dominy.

Authorized the lease of Indian lands in New Mexico for the site of a seismological laboratory.

BACKGROUND -- The House Appropriations Committee formally considered budget requests of $67,285,031. However, the Committee also inserted in the bill funds to cover $50.9 million in requests refused in earlier bills for the Bureau of Public Roads and the Office of Education. Similarly, the Senate Appropriations Committee considered formal requests of $81,932,731 but added $190 million for the Mutual Security Program after a last-minute appeal Aug. 26 from Under Secretary of State C. Douglas Dillon. Dillon said funds cut from the regular mutual security appropriations bill (HR 12619) jeopardized national security.

House

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Aug. 26 reported HR 13161 (H Rept 2166), recommending $90,587,481. Of the $50.9 million requested for the Bureau of Public Roads and Office of Education, the Committee granted $44.1 million -- $27 million of the $30 million requested for forest highways, $2.7 million of the $3 million requested or public lands highways and $14,430,000 of the $17.9 million requested for student loans under the National Defense Education Act of 1958.

The Committee disallowed $7,289,000 requested for the General Services Administration for construction of fallout shelters in federal buildings and also denied a $1 million request to establish a planning and auditing staff for donations of overseas surplus agricultural goods by private relief groups.

Floor Action

The House Aug. 26 passed HR 13161, amended, by voice vote, carrying $91,085,481. Before passage, the House by floor amendments added $300,000 for a reclamation project, $190,000 for Members' travel allowances because of the August session of Congress and $8,000 for House Clerk's expenses.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the House, HR 13161, the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act for fiscal 1961, appropriated:

Agriculture Department	$ 1,200,000
Commerce Department	38,265,000
Department of Health, Education and Welfare	18,135,000
Independent Offices	6,857,000
Interior Department	5,700,000
Justice Department	400,000
Legislative Branch	206,200
Claims for damages and judgments	20,322,281
TOTAL	$91,085,481

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED

Aug. 26 -- Albert Thomas (D Texas) -- Provide an additional $300,000 for advance planning on the Canadian River Project, Texas. Voice vote.

Olin E. Teague (D Texas) -- Provide $190,000 for House Members' travel allowances for extra session of Congress. Voice.

John J. Rooney (D N.Y.) -- Provide $8,000 for House Clerk to prepare report on Congressional travel expenses as required by PL 86-628 (fiscal 1961 legislative appropriations bill, HR 12232). Voice.

DEBATE -- Aug. 26 -- Daniel K. Inouye (D Hawaii) -- Hawaii had been granted only $2,225,000 of the authorized $6 million for land-grant college aid; he hoped in the next Congress "mismanagement of funds by others" would not be used "to penalize us from that to which we are fully entitled."

Ben F. Jensen (R Iowa) -- The supplemental bills were "far too numerous and far too great in amount."

Senate

COMMITTEE -- Appropriations.

ACTION -- Aug. 27 reported HR 13161 (S Rept 1925), recommending total appropriations of $305,042,731, which were $213,957,250 more than House-voted funds.

The Committee, in adding to the bill $190 million for the Mutual Security Program, restored in full most of the cuts in the nonmilitary-aid portions of the mutual security bill (HR 12619) except that in the Development Loan Fund. For the Fund, the Committee restored $75 million -- one-half of the cut. (Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Texas) Aug. 29 told the Senate although Dillon had requested restoring the entire $150 million cut from the DLF, he said its appropriation could be delayed until January 1961 if necessary.)

The Committee also added: $1.3 million for foreign currency purchases to enable U.S. participation in the Indian Industries Fair in 1961; $1 million, denied by the House, to purchase foreign currencies under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act (PL 480) for use by the International Cooperation Administration in supervision of private food commodity donation programs, and $986,800, denied by the House, for two trade exhibits and seven added trade missions.

In its recommendations for the various Government agencies, the Committee recommended: the full $6 million authorization for land-grant college aid for Hawaii, an increase of $3,775,000 over House-voted funds; $7,289,000 for construction and testing of fallout shelters in federal buildings, denied by the House, and $3,070,000 for Public Health Service grants to schools.

The Committee also recommended repealing a provision of the fiscal 1961 mutual security funds bill (HR 12619 -- PL 86-704) that required all new technical cooperation projects to be "justified" to the House and Senate before mutual security funds were spent on them. In place of the earlier provision, the Committee inserted in the Second Supplemental bill language requiring new technical cooperation projects merely to be "reported" to the House and Senate Appropriations Committees.

The Administration had argued that the earlier language in HR 12619, instead of permitting American foreign-aid administrators familiar with technical project details to make speedy judgments and commitments, would require any project, however small, to await lengthy and time-consuming examination by the U.S. Congress, and in effect would block initiation of new projects and make the whole technical assistance program unworkable.

Another provision added by the Committee increased the salary of the Commissioner of Reclamation from $17,500 to $19,000.

Floor Action

The Senate Aug. 29 passed HR 13161, amended, by a 67-21 roll-call vote, making supplemental appropriations of $305,042,731 for fiscal 1961. The committee amendments providing $190 million in mutual security funds were approved en bloc by a 56-31 roll-call vote. Voting for restoration of the funds were 31 Democrats and 25 Republicans, while 13 Southern Democrats joined 10 other Democrats and eight Republicans in opposing the action. (For voting, see chart p. 517)

The other appropriations in the bill, for various Government agencies and several special foreign programs, represented an increase of $23,957,250 over House-voted funds. Appropriations Committee amendments providing these increases were approved by voice vote.

PROVISIONS -- As passed by the Senate, HR 13161 appropriated:

Mutual Security Program
Defense support	$ 65,000,000
Technical cooperation	22,000,000
Special assistance	26,000,000
General administrative expenses	2,000,000
Development Loan Fund	75,000,000
President's special international programs	2,286,800

Special foreign currency programs	1,000,000
Agriculture Department	1,575,000
Commerce Department	40,258,000
Department of Health, Education and Welfare	25,508,000
Independent Offices	14,844,650
Interior Department	8,100,000
Justice Department	400,000
Legislative Branch	198,000
State Department	550,000
Claims for damages and judgments	20,322,281
TOTAL	$305,042,731

The bill also:

Stipulated that whenever any project in the technical cooperation program was financed from fiscal 1961 funds without an estimate having been submitted, the project must be reported to House and Senate Appropriations Committees.

Increased, from the $1.2 million limit provided in the mutual security bill to the full budget request for $1,762,000, the total limitation on funds for the Office of Inspector General and Comptroller.

Authorized the Secretary of Commerce to lease from the Isleta Indian Tribe 750 acres in New Mexico, for a minimum of 25 years, for a seismological laboratory at a maximum annual rental of $1,200.

Increased the salary of the Commissioner of Reclamation.

DEBATE -- Aug. 29 -- Ernest Gruening (D Alaska) -- Changing the provision which required justification of projects in the mutual security technical cooperation program, to require only reporting of them, represented "almost total nullification of the power of Congress to oppose projects of which it does not approve."

Jacob K. Javits (R N.Y.) -- Congratulated other Senators who were "devoted advocates of mutual security" but had voted "nay" on the mutual security conference report because "it indicates that when we protest and have a case something does happen."

Richard B. Russell (D Ga.) -- Asked to be excused from conference committee on bill because he had served as conferee on mutual security bill and "I do not feel I could now represent the Senate's new viewpoint."

Conference

REPORT -- A Senate-House conference committee Aug. 30 reported HR 13161 (H Rept 2211) with compromise figures on most agency appropriations, but the Senate amendments adding $190 million for the Mutual Security Program still were in disagreement.

For the Health, Education and Welfare Department, conferees agreed to the House-voted $2,225,000 for land-grant college aid for Hawaii, instead of the $6 million voted by the Senate, and to the Senate-voted $3,070,000 for Public Health Service grants to schools, for which no provision was made in the House bill. Conferees agreed to eliminate $7,289,000 in Senate-voted funds for construction of fallout shelters in federal buildings. Under funds appropriated to the President, conferees eliminated both $1 million voted by the Senate for foreign currency programs related to agricultural surplus programs and $986,000 in Senate-voted funds for overseas trade exhibits and missions; they also cut from $1.3 million to $650,000 Senate-approved funds for foreign currency purchases for U.S. participation in the Indian industries fair.

ACTION -- The House and Senate Aug. 31 agreed to the conference report by voice votes. Of the Senate's Mutual Security Program amendments, the House, by a 203-193 roll-call vote, agreed to accept only one -- to provide $65 million for defense support. The House rejected, by a 176-216 roll-call vote, a Senate amendment providing $26 million for the Program's special assistance funds, and rejected the other foreign aid appropriations by voice votes. The Senate then concurred in the House action on the mutual security funds. (For voting, see chart p. 470)

In the close House vote approving the $65 million in mutual security funds, eight Members -- five Democrats and three Republicans -- who first voted against the appropriation switched their votes in favor of it at the request of House leaders. They were: Democratic Reps. Thomas J. Lane (Mass.), Ross Bass (Tenn.), Francis E. Walter (Pa.), Joe M. Kilgore (Texas) and Elmer J. Holland (Pa.): GOP Reps. William E. Minshall (Ohio), Albert H. Bosch (N.Y.) and Alvin E. O'Konski (Wis.). One member, Rep. James H. Morrison (D La.), changed his vote from "yea" to "nay".

In its other votes rejecting mutual security funds the House refused to accept the Senate amendment on technical cooperation projects; it also eliminated a Senate provision increasing by $562,000 funds for use by the Office of Inspector General and Comptroller in connection with mutual security. The House agreed to a Senate amendment increasing the salary of the Commissioner of the Reclamation Bureau.

The final appropriation agreed to by both the House and Senate was $162,186,981.

HOUSE DEBATE -- Aug. 30 -- J. Vaughan Gary (D Va.) -- In view of the final action on the mutual security bill and the Senate's subsequent action in the supplemental bill, "the integrity of the entire Committee system is involved, and if the House yields one inch in this matter (to permit appropriation of mutual security increases in the supplemental bill) it will be disastrous to our entire Congressional system of procedure."

Albert Thomas (D Texas) -- House conferees would demand "a very complete and a very adequate answer from the other body as to why they marched up the hill one day and marched down the hill the next day."

Aug. 31 -- Gerald R. Ford Jr. (R Mich.) -- Believed that agreeing to $65 million item for defense support would provide "vitally essential funds for those countries on the borders of the Soviet Union and Red China...countries who cannot provide the soldiers and the equipment unless they are able to maintain stability and strength in their economy."

Ben F. Jensen (R Iowa) -- It was "not proper legislative procedure" to have to reconsider the foreign aid funds and "I contend it is a pretty black blot on the intelligence of the House."

John W. McCormack (D Mass.) -- Supported the amendment for $65 million in defense support, had been authorized to say Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) concurred in his position, and in the Senate "the Democratic nominees for the Presidency as well as the Vice Presidency were instrumental in this...."

SENATE -- Aug. 31 -- J.W. Fulbright (D Ark.) -- "House conferees are very difficult," and "I only regret that the Senate conferees have faced an impossible situation...it seems to me that if this practice continues it will put an end to our foreign relations altogether."

TRAVEL REGULATIONS, LEGISLATIVE FUNDS

HR 12232 -- Reported by House Appropriations Committee (H Rept 1607) May 13, 1960.
- Passed by the House by voice vote May 19.
- Reported by Senate Appropriations Committee (S Rept 1606) June 16.
- Passed, amended, by the Senate on an 81-0 roll-call vote June 20. (See p. 507)
- Conference report (H Rept 2075) agreed to by voice votes of the House and Senate July 1.

PL 86-628 -- Signed into law July 12.

Congress in 1960 used the legislative appropriations act (HR 12232 -- PL 86-628) as the vehicle for achieving more stringent regulations governing the accounting of Government funds used for domestic and overseas travel by Members of Congress and committee staff members. This action turned the relatively non-controversial annual appropriation bill into a major piece of legislation and realized the goal of Senators and Representatives who had long sought such reforms.

As signed into law July 12, HR 12232 appropriated $129,470,410 for Congress and related agencies in fiscal 1961. The House May 19 passed the bill, providing $100,317,660 for the House of Representatives and related agencies, and sent it to the Senate for the addition of that chamber's appropriation. On June 20 the Senate passed HR 12232 with amendments adding $29,552,750 to the House version for a total of $129,870,410. Also attached was an amendment requiring Congressional committees to file annual public reports listing both dollar and foreign currency funds spent by individual Members of Congress and committee staff members for overseas travel.

The House June 27 agreed to most of the Senate amendments to HR 12232 and added its own restrictions on domestic travel, which the Senate accepted June 29. Both chambers agreed by voice votes July 1 to a conference report (H Rept 2075) cutting out $400,000 that the Senate had earmarked for restoration of the old Supreme Court and Senate chambers in the Capitol to their historic conditions.

PROVISIONS -- As signed by the President, HR 12232 appropriated:

Senate	$ 26,643,940
House of Representatives	42,492,485
Capitol Police, pages, misc.	214,875
Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures	24,910
Penalty Mail	3,269,000
Architect of the Capitol	25,493,700
Botanic Garden	352,300
Library of Congress	15,230,000
Government Printing Office	15,749,200
TOTAL	$129,470,410

In addition, HR 12232:

Required Congressional committees to file annual public reports listing both dollar and foreign currency funds spent by individual Members of Congress and committee staff members for domestic and overseas travel.

Restricted the travel of Members of Congress at Government expense between Washington and their home states or districts to trips specifically authorized for mileage or transportation expense or for official participation in the funeral services of deceased Members and official trips originating in the Members' states or districts when Congress was not in session.

Travel Funds

The drive for tighter regulations governing the accounting of travel funds was spearheaded by Sen. John J. Williams (R Del.), a long-time proponent of stricter accounting procedures, but copyrighted articles in Knight Newspapers and Life magazine June 1 played a large part in the Members' eventual decision to accept the reforms.

Roughly, this was the situation on travel expenses up to 1960 (for details, see box on next page):

Senators were under fairly stern restrictions on the spending of dollar funds for domestic and foreign travel; there were practically no restrictions on their use of counterpart funds, and individual spending of these funds was not reported.

Representatives usually were reimbursed for dollar expenses upon the presentation of vouchers, but could receive a flat $12 per diem instead. They enjoyed the same unrestricted use of counterpart funds as did Senators.

The efforts of Sen. Williams were directed principally at requiring public accounting of individual Members' spending of counterpart and other funds abroad.

The Knight-Life articles by reporters Don Oberdorfer and Walter Pincus focused attention on unaudited travel vouchers submitted by Members of the House.

Newspaper Reports

The articles by Oberdorfer and Pincus said numerous expense account bills of House Members had been altered or amended in recent years and that records of the House disbursing officer showed that "Congressmen spent tax dollars on trips to resort areas, on night clubbing and tipping aboard luxury liners."

Oberdorfer and Pincus said they had studied 25,329 contingent fund vouchers submitted by House Members between July 1957 and June 1959. "They show that the public purse is being abused almost casually," they said, and added: "Ironically, many of the unusual expense account practices are committed by members of House committees who are industriously studying the spending of others." The reporters said the previously open House records were closed to public investigation when House officials learned of press interest in the vouchers. (Speaker Sam Rayburn (D Texas) June 2 ordered the vouchers reopened to public inspection but directed that the records might not be removed from their files or photographed.)

Some examples cited in the articles of instances of spending by House Members:

In December 1957 six members of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee stopped at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu enroute to the U.S. after a study of International Geophysical Year activities in Antarctica. The stopover resulted in $851.51 in charges to the Government. The hotel bills indicated considerable expense had been incurred in bars or from bar service delivered to the members' rooms, although the word "food" was marked in pencil beside the notations. Reporters were told that it was an "iron-clad rule" that no liquor bills were to be paid by the Government and that the bar expenses probably were for hors d'oeuvres or wine served with dinner.

Rep. Oren Harris (D Ark.), chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and head of the group that visited Hawaii, said of the Oberdorfer-Pincus articles, "All this innuendo, in my opinion, can be characterized as nothing but a smear."

The articles said that Rep. Omar Burleson (D Texas), chairman of the House Administration Committee which receives and must approve all House committee contingent fund expenses before they can be paid from the U.S. Treasury, during a Nov. 15, 1957 shopping expedition in Abilene, Texas, bought a $30 thermos carafe, a $30 Shaeffer pen set, a $19.50 calendar pad and a $6.95 door sign which he had delivered to his district office. All the items, the articles said, were charged to the contingent fund, although every Member receives an annual $1,200 stationery allowance.

Burleson collected $12 per diem for Committee work 84 of the 88 days from Oct. 1 to Dec. 27, 1958, including investigative work performed Saturdays, Sundays, Thanksgiving and Christmas Days. The total cost of Burleson's investigative activities during the period: $1,357.29.

Asked by the reporters about the 84 days per diem, Burleson said "virtually all" of this time was spent on "an investigation of Government printing. I visited printing plants from Buffalo, N.Y. to the Midwest and West Coast." When told that the per diem vouchers listed his various jobs as "election" studies, studies of the Hatch Act and foreign affairs, Burleson recalled several

Summary of Regulations on Congressmen's Travel Expenses

Summarized below are House and Senate regulations on travel expenses of their Members, with the changes voted in 1960.

Travel by Representatives

DOMESTIC TRAVEL: Before 1960 -- Representatives and House employees traveling on committee business could receive either a flat $12 per diem plus transportation costs or be reimbursed for actual expenses after showing itemized receipts. Vouchers were submitted to committee chairmen and sent by them for approval to the House Administration Committee, which forwarded them to the Sergeant-at-Arms for payment from the contingency fund. Representatives, in addition, were paid for one round-trip between their home District and Washington, D.C., during each session.

Expense reports were not published.

1960 Changes -- The House Administration Committee July 1 put into effect these regulations: Representatives and House employees were limited to the $12 per diem allowance plus transportation costs unless they sought permission from their committee chairman and the chairman of the House Administration Committee to exceed the limit. If they received such permission they could be paid up to $25 per day, plus transportation costs.

Publication of the annual report of the Clerk of the House, containing details on individual expenditures for domestic travel, was required.

Travel by Members of Congress at Government expense between their home Districts or states and Washington was limited to the annual authorized round trips, attendance at deceased Members' funerals and official trips to Washington when Congress was not in session. (Legislative Appropriations Act -- PL 86-628)

OVERSEAS TRAVEL: Before 1960 -- The amount of counterpart funds spent by Committee members and employees was consolidated into one report by each committee chairman and published annually in the Congressional Record, as required by the 1958 Mutual Security Act.

1960 Changes -- Spending of both dollars and counterpart funds must be reported by committee chairmen and the published reports must show itemized expenditures by each individual concerned. The reports cover committee members and employees and members of Congressional delegations to international meetings. (Mutual Security Act of 1960 -- PL 86-472)

Travel by Senators

DOMESTIC TRAVEL: Before 1960 -- Senators and Senate employees when traveling on official business were limited by statute to $12 per day plus transportation costs. Vouchers were submitted to the committee chairmen who in turn submitted them to the Rules and Administration Committee, which had to approve them before they could be paid by the Senate disbursing officer from the contingency fund. Under unusual circumstances, the Rules Committee could authorize payment of actual expenses up to $25 per day, provided the authorization were made in advance. Senators were paid for three round-trips per year between their home states and Washington.

In recent years the annual report by the Secretary of the Senate, which showed individual expenditures for domestic travel, was published although that was not required by statute.

1960 Change -- Publishing of the Secretary of the Senate's report was required by PL 86-628.

OVERSEAS TRAVEL: Before 1960 -- When on official business and spending dollars, Senators and Senate employees were limited to a per diem rate, established by the Budget Bureau, which varied from country to country. Counterpart fund reporting regulations were the same as those applying to the House. (See above)

1960 Changes -- Under the two 1960 laws (see above), dollar and counterpart fund expenditures would be reported in detail for each individual and published.

studies on these subjects and said, "When you go back over a year, you can't remember details."

In subsequent articles examples of free use of counterpart funds were cited which, in the case of Rep. Robert B. Chiperfield (R Ill.), ran as high as $1,358; he later was unable to account for the expenditures.

Other disclosures included: unexplained expenditures by Congressional delegations to international meetings such as the NATO Parliamentarians Conference; numerous trips by Rep. Wayne L. Hays (D Ohio), chairman of the House delegation to the NATO conference, to his home area to speak on behalf of NATO; the inaccessibility of House records containing reports on domestic contingent fund expenditures (a fund Congress provides for itself for various unpredictable expenses); and free or cutrate travel aboard Government-subsidized steamship lines by Members or their wives.

The conclusion generally drawn from the articles was that there was little supervision, by committee chairmen and the House Administration Committee, of Members' expense vouchers. The House Administration Committee July 1 placed restrictions on Representatives' travel expenditures which limited them to $12 per day unless they received special permission to spend more, in which case the limit was $25 per day.

Counterpart Funds

The Mutual Security Act, which sets down the regulations for the administration of the U.S. foreign aid program and authorizes the funds to carry it out, was the vehicle for the reform measures proposed by Sen. Williams. Much of the funds used for overseas travel by Members of Congress have derived from the operation of this program. Members of Congress spent over $400,000 in counterpart funds for 1959 travel. (See chart that follows.)

The funds are collected in this manner: Nations receiving certain types of aid are required to deposit an equivalent amount of their own currency in local accounts. Ninety percent of the deposited money, called counterpart funds, is reserved for the use of the depositing nation and the remaining 10 percent for the U.S. Travel money for Members of Congress and committee staff members is drawn from this 10 percent.

The mutual security law required that committees using the foreign currencies report on the total amount spent to either the House Administration Committee or the Senate Appropriations Committee, whichever was appropriate.

In 1958 the Act was amended (PL 85-477) to require that consolidated reports show total itemized expenditures of each committee and subcommittee and that they be published annually in the Congressional Record. (1958 Almanac p. 183)

Because of House opposition, the 1958 amendment fell short of requiring a published report of spending by individuals. What it did require was the publication of reports which showed how much of the counterpart funds were spent by members of each committee as a whole and for what general purposes.

1960 Action

When the Senate April 27 began debate on the Mutual Security Act of 1960, Williams offered an amendment requiring the publication of itemized individual statements on dollar as well as counterpart funds spent on overseas travel. Significantly, the spending reports were not limited to those funds acquired through the foreign aid program.

AMENDMENT WATERED-DOWN

The Senate adopted the amendment on a 68-0 roll-call vote, but when the bill went to conference May 2 the amendment was opposed by the House conferees. They argued that the Senate should not tell the House how to handle its own affairs. A watered-down provision was agreed upon by both houses that dropped the requirement for published individual reports. Only the provision requiring a consolidated committee report on dollar expenditures overseas was retained in the bill as it became law (PL 86-472).

SECOND ATTEMPT

Williams again offered his amendment June 20, this time to HR 12232, the legislative appropriation bill for fiscal 1961. It was an expanded version that required the printing of the reports of the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House which show itemized expenditures of contingent funds for domestic travel; amended the Mutual Security Act to require individual reports on both dollar and counterpart expenditures by Members or staff employees traveling overseas on committee business, and required similar reports from Members using Government funds when traveling to the NATO Parliamentarians or other interparliamentary conferences.

The amendment was co-sponsored by Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine).

In presenting his proposal to the Senate, Williams said the amendment did not change the rules of either the House or the Senate since it was an amendment to the Mutual Security Act and other laws. If applied only to the Senate, Williams said, it would be unfair because in the case of joint committees only Senators would be required to report. The public was entitled to a full report on the expenditures of these funds, he said.

HOUSE COOLNESS

Although favoring the principle of the Williams amendment, several veteran Senators were reluctant to adopt it because of anticipated House protests. Instead, they co-sponsored an amendment, offered by Sen. John Stennis (D Miss.), requiring that only Senators and Senate staff members file itemized accounts for expenses over their per diem allowance. The allowance would correspond to that received by Executive Branch officials.

Their arguments that the House still was opposed to the provisions of the Williams amendment were bolstered by the House rejection June 17 of a similar amendment to the Mutual Security Appropriation bill for fiscal 1961 (HR 12619) offered by Rep. Harris B. McDowell Jr. (D Del.).

The Senate June 20 adopted the Williams amendment on a 56-23 roll-call vote as a substitute for the Stennis amendment. (For voting, see chart p. 516)

but also added provisions of its own restricting the domestic travel of Members of Congress at Government expense.

As sent to the President, HR 12232 represented a complete victory for Williams. It required the publication of itemized reports showing individual Members' use of any Government funds for travel on committee or conference business at home or overseas.

The additional provision added by the House restricted Members' travel at Government expense between their home states or Districts and Washington, D.C., to trips specifically authorized for mileage or transportation, official participation in the funeral services of deceased Members and official trips originating in the Members' states or Districts when Congress was not in session. House Members are paid for mileage or transportation on one round-trip between their home District and Washington in each session; Senators are paid for three round-trips per session.

Expense Limitations

Prior to House action on the Williams amendment Rep. Burleson June 23, for the House Administration Committee, had announced additional restrictions covering traveling expenses of Representatives.

The regulations, which took effect July 1, limited Members of the House to the prevailing federal allowance of $12 per day for domestic travel while on official business unless they sought permission of their committee chairman and the Administration Committee chairman to exceed this limit. (Before July 1, a Representative could be reimbursed for itemized expenses rather than accept the per diem rate.) A maximum of $25 was set for the amount that could be spent with official permission. (This brought House regulations in line with those for Senators.) The new regulations also provided that the General Accounting Office audit vouchers before expenses over the $12 per diem could be reimbursed.

The Senate June 30 passed a bill (HR 5196) increasing from $12 to $15 per day the maximum per diem allowance for Government employees traveling on official business in the continental United States. The bill also provided for the establishment of country-by-country per diem rates under which employees traveling overseas could, in "unusual circumstances", collect up to an extra $10 per day. The House, however, did not act on the Senate version and the proposal died when Congress adjourned Sept. 1.

Ship Junkets

Another victory in Sen. Williams' campaign to prevent misuse of privileges by Members of Congress was won June 24 with final adoption of his "anti-junketing" amendment for sea travel. The provision was attached to a bill (HR 10644) authorizing an increase in the Government subsidy-rate for domestic merchant marine shipbuilding. As signed into law (PL 86-607), it prohibited U.S. shipping companies from giving free or reduced-rate transportation to Government officials and employees, or any member of their families, unless the Government contracted for their transportation. The articles by Oberdorfer and Pincus had brought out that wives of Congressmen traveling on official business often received reduced-rate or free transportation on U.S. steamships. (See Shipbuilding Subsidies, p. 268)

Proposed 1960 Changes

Mounting pressure for fuller reporting on the use of Government funds for travel and publication of the June newspaper-magazine articles led a number of Representatives and Senators to introduce legislation calling for greater public information on spending for travel. Among these bills were:

- S 1332 -- A 1959 bill by Sens. Clifford P. Case (R N.J.) and Richard L. Neuberger (D Ore.) to require filing and publication in the Congressional Record of itemized accounts for all travel expenses by all Congressmen and committee staff members.
- HR 12594 -- Introduced June 9, 1960 by Rep. William S. Broomfield (R Mich.) to require detailed reports by House Members for expenditures of more than the standard $12 per diem, disclosure of the amount and use of counterpart funds spent, and an auditing of such expenses by the General Accounting Office.
- HR 12656 -- Introduced June 15, 1960 by Rep. Thomas B. Curtis (R Mo.) to require detailed reports by Members of Congress on their use of U.S. or counterpart funds in travel, and reports on the number and identity of persons accompanying the Member in travel and whether and why any of their expenses were paid from Treasury or counterpart funds. The bill also required an audit every six months by the General Accounting Office, of all disbursements from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives.

1959 Counterpart Fund Junkets

Reform measures aimed at tightening regulations governing the use of Government funds for travel were aimed, in large part, at the use of counterpart funds, which pay for much of the overseas travel of Members of Congress. In 1959, Representatives and Senators traveling abroad on committee assignments spent $403,859.10 in counterpart funds -- U.S.-owned foreign currency.

According to reports published in the Congressional Record, members of Senate committees spent the equivalent of $145,831.05 in counterpart funds between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31, 1959. Members of House committees reported spending $258,028.05. (See chart, next page)

Counterpart funds are made available by the State Department to any Member of Congress traveling overseas with his committee chairman's authorization. Before members of a committee leave the U.S., the chairman notifies the Department how much foreign currency will be needed and upon arrival in a foreign country, the individual Member signs receipts for the currency. These expenditures are not audited, but the Members file vouchers with their committees. Under the system prevailing before the 1960 revisions, the committee staff totaled the vouchers and the chairman reported the totals to the Senate Rules and Administration Committee or the House Administration Committee. The report stated the names of committeemen and staff members who spent counterpart funds, the country where the money was spent, the length of stay, the amount of currency received, the amount spent and the purposes of the expenditures, such as lodging, transportation and administrative costs. No provision was made for the use of counterpart funds for personal purposes.

190 CONGRESSMEN TRAVELED OUTSIDE U.S. IN 1959

In 1959, as in earlier years, Congressional junkets took many Members of Congress to distant parts of the world on official or semi-official business. A check of Congressional committees and Members' offices by Congressional Quarterly showed that at least 190 Members traveled outside the continental United States during 1959. That compared with 159 in 1958. (1959 Almanac p. 822) The travelers and their journeys are listed on page 414. They are summarized below:

Junket Highlights

● INTERPARLIAMENTARY UNION -- The biggest gathering of U.S. lawmakers outside of Washington during 1959 was for the September meeting of the Interparliamentary Union in Warsaw. The annual meeting of this organization, composed of legislators from all nations of the world, drew 17 U.S. Congressmen -- four Senators and 13 Representatives -- most of whom went by special military aircraft.

● ITALIAN HOSPITALITY -- Nine Representatives of Italian extraction visited Italy for two weeks at the invitation of the Italian government. The combined business-and-pleasure trip, which included an audience with Pope John XXIII, was paid for by the host country.

● ATLANTIC CONGRESS -- A group of 17 lawmakers -- five Senators and 12 Representatives -- participated in the first Atlantic Congress in London in June 1959.

Criticism of Junkets

Junketing always has been a controversial activity. Its defenders contend it enables Congressmen to develop first-hand information needed for intelligent legislation, to spread good will and to overcome prejudice and provincialism.

Critics condemn junketing as a waste of time and money that permits some Congressmen to see the world at the taxpayers' expense, makes unreasonable demands on Government personnel abroad, damages U.S. prestige through tactlessness and confuses foreign officials, who think Congressional comments reflect official policy.

Congressional Quarterly makes no attempt to assess the value of a particular trip or to determine whether it was frivolous or useful. As used in this story, junket simply means any travel by a Congressman outside the continental United States.

The junket system has been criticized because there was no way of estimating the total cost of Congressional travel at Government expense. The only solid figures available gave the amount of foreign currency (counterpart funds), but not U.S. dollars, spent. However, the new accounting regulations inaugurated by Congress in 1960 (see preceding story) were expected to make available to the public more detailed information on the cost of junketing.

These are the sources of funds to pay for Congressmen's travel abroad:

● COUNTERPART FUNDS -- Counterpart money is a result of U.S. foreign aid expenditures. Nations receiving mutual security aid are required (PL 84-138) to deposit an equivalent amount of their own currency. Ninety percent of the currency is reserved for economic and military development of the depositing nation. The other 10 percent is reserved for use by the U.S. Travel money for Congressmen is drawn from this 10 percent share. It is made available by the State Department to any Congressman traveling with his committee chairman's authorization.

● APPROPRIATED FUNDS -- Some overseas travel is financed by appropriated funds allocated to committees for routine and special investigations. Congressmen file overseas travel expense vouchers with their committee chairmen. The chairmen pass the vouchers on to the House Administration Committee or the Senate Rules and Administration Committee, which transmit them to the disbursing office for payment from contingent funds.

● STATE DEPARTMENT FUNDS -- Diplomatic missions abroad are allocated funds for entertainment. Some of these funds are used to care for the needs of visiting Congressmen, but no information is available on how much. Ambassadors and other State Department officials overseas also spend some of their own money to entertain visitors.

● MISCELLANEOUS FUNDS -- Departmental -- Departments and agencies are required by law (31 USC 22a) to pay expenses of committee members investigating their appropriation estimates and use of funds. Money is appropriated specifically to cover such expenses, which may include entertainment, housing and transportation. Departments and agencies probably care for the needs of visiting Congressmen whether or not they are specifically studying appropriations. Details of expenditures are not published.

Military Transportation -- Congressmen often travel without charge on ships of the Military Sea Transportation Service and planes of the Military Air Transport Service. When their mission is investigation of Defense Department activities, costs of transportation are charged against Defense Department appropriations. When Congressmen investigate other departments, it is not clear if military transportation costs are charged to the investigated department -- as is the case when they travel by commercial transportation -- or if the bill is paid by the Defense Department.

International Conferences -- Congressmen are appointed to U.S. delegations to attend international conferences. Authorizations generally provide for paying their expenses from State Department appropriations.

Foreign Governments -- Delegations of Congressmen sometimes are invited to attend proceedings of foreign parliaments at the expense of the inviting government.

Personal -- Some Congressmen pay all or most of their travel expenses from their own pockets. A Congressman's obligation to pay expenses of family members traveling with him is not clear.

CONGRESSMEN WHO TRAVELED IN 1959 AND WHERE THEY WENT

Which Members of Congress traveled abroad in 1959 and which stayed home? Whose trips were paid for by the Government; who traveled on his own expense? Where did they go and what did they do?

Following is a list compiled by Congressional Quarterly of Members of Congress and their foreign trips in 1959. Since figures on the cost of individual trips were kept secret, this information was not included. CQ was able to determine, in most cases, the type of transportation (either commercial or military), whether the cost was borne by the Government or the individual and the length of time spent outside the United States. A Washington travel agency estimated for CQ that it costs one person an average of $50.00 a day to travel first class outside the United States.

Some Members of Congress filed reports on their trips, others did not. Sources for the information were, in most instances, the Members of Congress or their offices.

President's Veto of Water Pollution Bill is Sustained; House Approves City Tax Withholding, Rejects Slum Grants

4. HR 3151. Authorize the Federal Government to withhold city payroll taxes from salaries of federal employees in cities of 50,000 or more population that levy such taxes. (The Administration-supported bill would cover about 20 cities in five states -- Ala., Ky., Mo., Ohio and Pa.) Passed 222-160 (D 172-73; R 50-87), Feb. 17, 1960. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 262)

5. HR 3610. Amend the 1948 Water Pollution Control Act by raising to $90 million annually the federal contributions for sewage plant construction. Passage of the bill over the President's veto (two-thirds majority required). Failed to pass 249-157 (D 234-27; R 15-130), Feb. 25, 1960 (271 "yeas" were required to override the veto). A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 250)

6. HR 10743. Second Supplemental Appropriation Bill for fiscal 1960. Yates (D Ill.) amendment to appropriate $50 million, as proposed in the budget but refused by the Appropriations Committee, to liquidate obligations already made for urban-renewal and slum-clearance grants. Rejected 158-187 (D 139-77; R 19-110), Feb. 29, 1960. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 395)

CQ House Votes 7 through 11.

(Corresponding to Congressional Record Roll-Call Vote Nos. 11, 13, 17, 18, 20.)

House Authorizes Funds for NASA and Military Construction, Votes to Debate Civil Rights, Foreign Investments Bills

7. H Res 467. An open rule for debate on HR 10777, military construction authorizations. (See RC 10 below) Agreed to 313-1 (D 202-0; R 111-1), March 7,1960. The President did not take a position on the rule. (See story p. 266)

8. H Res 468. Closed rule for debate on HR 5, the Foreign Investment Incentive Tax Act. Motion to order the previous question on adoption of the rule. Agreed to 236-127 (D 162-69; R 74-58), March 8, 1960. Approval of the motion brought the rule to an immediate vote. Had the motion been defeated, Rep. Thomson (R Wyo.) would have offered a substitute rule to permit House consideration of a bill (HR 4918) which in effect would make Tariff Commission recommendations binding upon the President. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 336 and RCs 43,44)

9. HR 10809. Authorize appropriation of $915 million for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for fiscal 1961. Passed 398-11 (D 256-6; R 142-5), March 9, 1960. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p. 255)

10. HR 10777. Authorize appropriation of $1,103,823,000 for military construction in fiscal 1961. Passed 407-4 (D 263-3; R 144-1), March 9, 1960. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 266)

11. H Res 359. An open rule providing 15 hours of House debate on HR 8601, the Civil Rights Act. Agreed to 314-93 (D 177-84; R 137-9), March 10, 1960. A "yea" was a vote supporting the President's position. (See story p.185) and next chart)

CQ House Votes 66 through 71.

House Votes on Treasury-Post Office, Supplemental Funds; Approves World Health, Lead-Zinc, Alaska, District Bills

66. HR 10569. Treasury-Post Office appropriations, fiscal 1961. Hoffman (R Mich.) motion that the House agree to a Senate amendment eliminating a provision urging the Post Office Department to authorize delivery of mail under Congressional frank addressed to "Occupant" in urban areas. Accepted 235-164 (D 91-163; R 144-1), June 23, 1960. The President did not take a position on the motion. (See story p. 390)

67. HR 12740. Fiscal 1961 supplemental appropriations. Baldwin (R Calif.) motion to recommit the bill with instructions to delete $5 million for purchase of land for Congressional use. Rejected 141-252 (D 28-224; R 113-28), June 23, 1960. The President did not take a position on the motion. (See story p. 393)

68. S 1508. An Administration-opposed bill to place the federally owned Alaska Railroad (operated by the Interior Department) under the regulatory jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission for interstate shipments and under the state of Alaska's jurisdiction for intrastate shipments. The Budget Bureau said enactment of the bill "would not be in accord with the program of the President." Passed under suspension of the rules (two-thirds majority required) 268-101 (D 237-2; R 31-99), June 24, 1960 (246 "yeas" were necessary for passage). A "nay" was a vote supporting the President's position.

69. H J Res 649. International Health and Medical Research Act. Passed 259-114 (D 214-24; R 45-90), June 24, 1960. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 321)

70. HR 8860. Authorize subsidies for lead and zinc. Passed 197-192 (D 173-70; R 24-122); June 27, 1960. The President did not take a position on the bill. (See story p. 253)

71. HR 8697. Amend the D.C. Redevelopment Act to clarify authority for urban renewal and prohibit designation of any new redevelopment area until 50 percent of improvements in the Southwest part of the District are completed (a provision opponents feared might set a precedent for other cities). Passed 348-35 (D 209-32; R 139-3), June 27, 1960. The President did not take a position on the bill.

Within each category and subcategory are Senate bills in numerical order, followed by House bills.

Bills Introduced give the bill number, brief description of provisions, sponsor's name, date of introduction and committee to which each bill was assigned.

Bills sponsored by more than one Senator are listed under the first sponsor, with additional sponsors also listed.

In the House identical bills are sponsored by several Members, but each bill has only one sponsor and one number. In most cases only the first bill introduced -- that with the lowest bill number -- is described in full. Later bills that are identical in nature usually are cited back to the earliest bill.

Bills Acted On include action taken by committees and on the floor of either house, the Public Law number and date of the President's signature, where applicable.

The pieces of public legislation described are of four kinds -- bills and joint resolutions, which can become public law; concurrent resolutions, needing approval by both House and Senate; and simple resolutions, concerning only one chamber. Concurrent and simple resolutions do not become law.

Bills Acted On -- Agriculture

Agriculture bills and resolutions which were reported by committees to the floor of either house are listed below. Those that became public laws are listed first -- under ACTION COMPLETED -- and are followed by those on which Congress did not complete action -- listed under UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Bills are listed first, followed by joint resolutions, concurrent resolutions, and simple resolutions. Senate measures appear before House measures. All are listed in numerical order.

The summary of each measure gives a brief description, the nature and date of action taken.

For all Bills introduced in this Agriculture category, including bills that received no action, see p. 542.

STATE OF THE UNION MESSAGE STRESSES PEACE AND PROSPERITY THEME

Following is the complete, official version of President Eisenhower's State of the Union message transmitted to Congress Jan. 7. In reading the message, the President interpolated several remarks. The major one is footnoted.

MR. PRESIDENT, MR. SPEAKER,
MEMBERS OF THE 86th CONGRESS, MY FELLOW CITIZENS:

Seven years ago I entered my present office with one long-held resolve overriding all others. I was then, and remain now, determined that the United States shall become an ever more potent resource for the cause of peace -- realizing that peace cannot be for ourselves alone, but for peoples everywhere. This determination is shared by the entire Congress -- indeed, by all Americans.

My purpose today is to discuss some features of America's position, both at home and in her relations to others.

First, I point out that for us, annual self-examination is made a definite necessity by the fact that we now live in a divided world of uneasy equilibrium, with our side committed to its own protection and against aggression by the other.

With both sides of this divided world in possession of unbelievably destructive weapons, mankind approaches a state where mutual annihilation becomes a possibility. No other fact of today's world equals this in importance -- it colors everything we say, plan, and do.

There is demanded of us vigilance, determination and the dedication of whatever portion of our resources that will provide adequate security, especially a real deterrent to aggression. These things we are doing. All these facts emphasize the importance of striving incessantly for a just peace.

Only through the strengthening of the spiritual, intellectual, economic and defensive resources of the free world can we, in confidence, make progress toward this goal.

Second, we note that recent Soviet deportment and pronouncements suggest the possible opening of a somewhat less strained period in the relationships between the Soviet Union and the free world. If these pronouncements be genuine, there is brighter hope of diminishing the intensity of past rivalry and eventually of substituting persuasion for coercion. Whether this is to become an era of lasting promise remains to be tested by actions.

Third, we now stand in the vestibule of a vast new technological age -- one that, despite its capacity for human destruction, has an equal capacity to make poverty and human misery obsolete. If our efforts are wisely directed -- and if our unremitting efforts for dependable peace begin to attain some success -- we can surely become participants in creating an age characterized by justice and rising levels of human well-being.

NEGOTIATIONS

Over the past year the Soviet Union has expressed an interest in measures to reduce the common peril of war. While neither we nor any other free world nation can permit ourselves to be misled by pleasant promises until they are tested by performance, yet we approach this apparently new opportunity with the utmost seriousness. We must strive to break the calamitous cycle of frustrations and crises which, if unchecked, could spiral into nuclear disaster -- the ultimate insanity.

Though the need for dependable agreements to assure against resort to force in settling disputes is apparent to both sides, yet as in other issues dividing men and nations, we cannot expect sudden and revolutionary results. But we must find some place to begin.

One obvious road on which to make a useful start is in the widening of communication between our two peoples. In this field there are, both sides willing, countless opportunities -- most of them well known to us all -- for developing mutual understanding, the true foundation of peace.

Another avenue may be through the reopening, on January 12, of negotiations looking to a controlled ban on the testing of nuclear weapons. Unfortunately, the closing statement from the Soviet scientists who met with our scientists at Geneva in an unsuccessful effort to develop an agreed basis for a test ban, gives the clear impression that their conclusions have been politically guided. Those of the British and American scientific representatives are their own freely formed, individual and collective opinions. I am hopeful that as new negotiations begin, truth -- not political opportunism -- will be the guiding light of the deliberations.

Still another avenue may be found in the field of disarmament, in which the Soviets have professed a readiness to negotiate seriously. They have not, however, made clear the plans they may have, if any, for mutual inspection and verification -- the essential condition for any extensive measure of disarmament.

UNDERDEVELOPED NATIONS

There is one instance where our initiative for peace has recently been successful. A multilateral treaty signed last month provides for the exclusively peaceful use of Antarctica, assured by a system of inspection. It provides for free and cooperative scientific research in that continent, and prohibits nuclear explosions there pending general international agreement on the subject. The treaty is a significant contribution toward peace, international cooperation, and the advancement of science. I shall transmit its text to the Senate for consideration and approval in the near future.

The United States is always ready to participate with the Soviet Union in serious discussion of these or any other subjects that may lead to peace with justice. Certainly it is not necessary to repeat that the United States has no intention of interfering in the internal affairs of any nation; likewise we reject any attempt to impose its system on us or on other peoples by force or subversion.

This concern for the freedom of other peoples is the intellectual and spiritual cement which has allied us with more than 40 other nations in a common defense effort. Not for a moment do we forget that our own fate is firmly fastened to that of these countries; we will not act in any way which would jeopardize our solemn commitments to them. These peoples, desperately hoping to lift themselves to decent levels of living must not, by our neglect, be forced to seek help from, and finally become virtual satellites of, those who proclaim their hostility to freedom.

We and our friends are, of course, concerned with self-defense. Growing out of this concern is the realization that all people of the free world have a great stake in the progress, in freedom, of the uncommitted and newly emerging nations.

Their natural desire for a better life must not be frustrated by withholding from them necessary technical and investment assistance. This is a problem to be solved not by America alone, but also by every nation cherishing the same ideals and in position to provide help.

In recent years America's partners and friends in Western Europe and Japan have made great economic progress. Their newly found economic strength is eloquent testimony to the striking success of the policies of economic cooperation which we and they have pursued.

The international economy of 1960 is markedly different from that of the early postwar years. No longer is the United States the only major industrial country capable of providing substantial amounts of the resources so urgently needed in the newly developing countries.

To remain secure and prosperous themselves, wealthy nations must extend the kind of cooperation to the less fortunate members that will inspire hope, confidence and progress. A rich nation can for a time, without noticeable damage to itself, pursue a course of self-indulgence, making its single goal the material ease and comfort of its own citizens -- thus repudiating its own spiritual and material stake in a peaceful and prosperous society of nations. But the enmities it will incur, the isolation into which it will descend, and the internal moral and physical softness that will be engendered, will, in the long term, bring it to disaster.

America did not become great through softness and self-indulgence. Her miraculous progress and achievements flow from other qualities far more worthy and substantial --

- Adherence to principles and methods consonant with our religious philosophy.
- A satisfaction in hard work.
- The readiness to sacrifice for worthwhile causes.
- The courage to meet every challenge to her progress.
- The intellectual honesty and capacity to recognize the true path of her own best interests.

To us and to every nation of the free world, rich or poor, these qualities are necessary today as never before if we are to march together to greater security, prosperity and peace. I believe the industrial countries are ready to participate actively in supplementing the efforts of the developing countries to achieve progress.

The immediate need for this kind of cooperation is underscored by the strain in our international balance of payments. Our surplus from foreign business transactions has in recent years fallen substantially short of the expenditures we make abroad to maintain our military establishments overseas, to finance private investment, and to provide assistance to the less developed nations. In 1959 our deficit in balance of payments approached $4 billion.

Continuing deficits of anything like this magnitude would, over time, impair our own economic growth and check the forward progress of the free world.

We must meet this situation by promoting a rising volume of exports and world trade. Further, we must induce all industrialized nations of the free world to work together in a new cooperative endeavor to help lift the scourge of poverty from less fortunate nations. This will provide for better sharing of this burden and for still further profitable trade.

New nations, and others struggling with the problems of development, will progress only if they demonstrate faith in their own destiny and possess the will and use their own resources to fulfill it. Moreover, progress in a national transformation can be only gradually earned; there is no easy and quick way to follow from the ox cart to the jet plane. But, just as we drew on Europe for assistance in our earlier years, so now do those new and emerging nations that have this faith and determination deserve help.

Over the last 15 years, 20 nations have gained political independence. Others are doing so each year. Most of them are woefully lacking in technical capacity and in investment capital; without free world support in these matters they cannot effectively progress in freedom.

Respecting their need, one of the major focal points of our concern is the South Asian region. Here, in two nations alone, are almost 500 million people, all working, and working hard, to raise their standards, and in doing so, to make of themselves a strong bulwark against the spread of an ideology that would destroy liberty.

I cannot express to you the depth of my conviction that, in our own and free world interests, we must cooperate with others to help these people achieve their legitimate ambitions, as expressed in their different multi-year plans. Through the World Bank and other instrumentalities, as well as through individual action by every nation in position to help, we must squarely face this titanic challenge.

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

All of us must realize, of course, that development in freedom by the newly emerging nations, is no mere matter of obtaining outside financial assistance. An indispensable element in this process is a strong and continuing determination on the part of these nations to exercise the national discipline necessary for any sustained development period. These qualities of determination are particularly essential because of the fact that the process of improvement will necessarily be gradual and laborious rather than revolutionary. Moreover, everyone should be aware that the development process is no short-term phenomenon. Many years are required for even the most favorably situated countries.

I shall continue to urge the American people, in the interests of their own security, prosperity and peace, to make sure that their own part of this great project be amply and cheerfully supported. Free world decisions in this matter may spell the difference between world disaster and world progress in freedom.

Other countries, some of which I visited last month, have similar needs. A common meeting ground is desirable for those nations which are prepared to assist in the development effort. During the past year I have discussed this matter with the leaders of several Western nations.

Because of its wealth of experience, the Organization for European Economic Cooperation could help with initial studies. The goal is to enlist all available economic resources in the industrialized free world -- especially private investment capital. But I repeat that this help, no matter how great, can be lastingly effective only if it is used as a supplement to the strength of spirit and will of the people of the newly developing nations.

If we grasp this opportunity to build an age of productive partnership between the less fortunate nations and those that have already achieved a high state of economic advancement, we will make brighter the outlook for a world order based upon security, freedom and peace. Otherwise, the outlook could be dark indeed. We face what may be a turning point in history, and we must act decisively.

By extending this help we hope to make possible the enthusiastic enrollment of these nations under freedom's banner. No more startling contrast to a system of sullen satellites could be imagined.

DEFENSE ADEQUATE

As a Nation we can successfully pursue these objectives only from a position of broadly based strength.

No matter how earnest is our quest for guaranteed peace, we must maintain a high degree of military effectiveness at the same time we are engaged in negotiating the issue of arms reduction. Until tangible and mutually-enforceable arms reduction measures are worked out, we will not weaken the means of defending our institutions.

America possesses an enormous defense power. It is my studied conviction that no nation will ever risk general war against us unless we should be so foolish as to neglect the defense forces we now so powerfully support. It is worldwide knowledge that any nation which might be tempted today to attack the United States, even though our country might sustain great losses, would itself promptly suffer a terrible destruction. But I once again assure all peoples and all nations that the United States, except in defense, will never turn loose this destructive power.

During the past year, our long-range striking power, unmatched today in manned bombers, has taken on new strength as the Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile has entered the operational inventory. In 14 recent test launchings, at ranges of over 5,000 miles, Atlas has been striking on an average within two miles of the target. This is less than the length of a jet runway -- well within the circle of total destruction. Such performance is a great tribute to American scientists and engineers, who in the past five years have had to telescope time and technology to develop these long-range ballistic missiles, where America had none before.

This year, moreover, growing numbers of nuclear-powered submarines will enter our active forces, some to be armed with Polaris missiles. These remarkable ships and weapons, ranging the oceans, will be capable of accurate fire on targets virtually anywhere on earth. Impossible to destroy by surprise attack, they will beome one of our most effective sentinels for peace.

To meet situations of less than general nuclear war, we continue to maintain our carrier forces, our many service units abroad, our always ready Army strategic forces and Marine Corps divisions, and the civilian components. The continuing modernization of these forces is a costly but necessary process, and is scheduled to go forward at a rate which will steadily add to our strength.

The deployment of a portion of these forces beyond our shores, on land and sea, is persuasive demonstration of our determination to stand shoulder to shoulder with our allies for collective security. Moreover, I have directed that steps be taken to program our military assistance to these allies on a longer range basis. This is necessary for a sounder collective defense system.

Next I refer to our effort in space exploration, which is often mistakenly supposed to be an integral part of defense research and development.

First, America has made great contributions in the past two years to the world's fund of knowledge of astrophysics and space science. These discoveries are of present interest chiefly to the scientific community; but they are important foundation stones for more extensive exploration of outer space for the ultimate benefit of all mankind.

Second, our military missile program, going forward so successfully, does not suffer from our present lack of very large rocket engines, which are so necessary in distant space exploration. I am assured by experts that the thrust of our present missiles is fully adequate for defense requirements.

Third, the United States is pressing forward in the development of large rocket engines to place much heavier vehicles into space for exploration purposes.

Fourth, in the meantime, it is necessary to remember that we have only begun to probe the environment immediately surrounding the earth. Using launch systems presently available, we are developing satellites to scout the world's weather; satellite relay stations to facilitate and extend communications over the globe; for navigation aids to give accurate bearings to ships and aircraft; and for perfecting instruments to collect and transmit the data we seek. This is the area holding the most promise for early and useful applications of space technology.

Fifth, we have just completed a year's experience with our new space law. I believe it deficient in certain particulars and suggested improvements will be submitted shortly.

The accomplishment of the many tasks I have alluded to requires the continuous strengthening of the spiritual, intellectual, and economic sinews of American life. The steady purpose of our society is to assure justice, before God, for every individual. We must be ever alert that freedom does not wither through the careless amassing of restrictive controls or the lack of courage to deal boldly with the giant issues of the day.

A year ago, when I met with you, the Nation was emerging from an economic downturn, even though the signs of resurgent prosperity were not then sufficiently convincing to the doubtful. Today our surging strength is apparent to everyone. 1960 promises to be the most prosperous year in our history.

Yet we continue to be afflicted by nagging disorders.

Among current problems that require solution are:

- The need to protect the public interest in situations of prolonged labor-management stalemate.
- The persistent refusal to come to grips with a critical problem in one sector of American agriculture.
- The continuing threat of inflation, together with the persisting tendency toward fiscal irresponsibility.
- In certain instances the denial to some of our citizens of equal protection of the law.

Every American was disturbed by the prolonged dispute in the steel industry and the protracted delay in reaching a settlement.

We are all relieved that a settlement has at last been achieved in that industry. Percentagewise, by this settlement the increase to the steel companies in employment costs is lower than in any prior wage settlement since World War II. It is also gratifying to note that despite the increase in wages and benefits several of the major steel producers have announced that there will be no increase in steel prices at this time. The national interest demands that in the period of industrial peace which has been assured by the new contract, both management and labor make every possible effort to increase efficiency and productivity in the manufacture of steel so that price increases can be avoided.

DOMESTIC PROBLEMS

One of the lessons of this story is that the potential danger to the entire Nation of longer and greater strikes must be met. To insure against such possibilities we must of course depend primarily upon the good common sense of the responsible individuals. It is my intention to encourage regular discussions between management and labor outside the bargaining table, to consider the interest of the public as well as their mutual interest in the maintenance of industrial peace, price stability and economic growth.

To me, it seems almost absurd for the United States to recognize the need, and so earnestly to seek, for cooperation among the nations unless we can achieve voluntary, dependable, abiding cooperation among the important segments of our own free society.

Failure to face up to basic issues in areas other than those of labor-management can cause serious strains on the firm freedom supports of our society.

I refer to agriculture as one of these areas. Our basic farm laws were written 27 years ago, in an emergency effort to redress hardship caused by a world-wide depression. They were continued -- and their economic distortions intensified -- during World War II in order to provide incentives for production of food needed to sustain a war-torn free world.

Today our farm problem is totally different. It is that of effectively adjusting to the changes caused by a scientific revolution. When the original farm laws were written, an hour's farm labor produced only one-fourth as much wheat as at present. Farm legislation is woefully out of date, ineffective and expensive.

For years we have gone on with an outmoded system which not only has failed to protect farm income, but also has produced soaring, threatening surpluses. Our farms have been left producing for war while America has long been at peace.

Once again I urge Congress to enact legislation that will gear production more closely to markets, make costly surpluses more manageable, provide greater freedom in farm operations and steadily achieve increased net farm incomes.

INFLATION THREAT

Another issue that we must meet squarely is that of living within our means. This requires restraint in expenditure, constant reassessment of priorities, and the maintenance of stable prices.

We must prevent inflation. Here is an opponent of so many guises that it is sometimes difficult to recognize. But our clear need is to stop continuous and general price rises -- a need that all of us can see and feel.

To prevent steadily rising costs and prices calls for stern self-discipline by every citizen. No person, city, state, or organized group can afford to evade the obligation to resist inflation, for every American pays its crippling tax.

Inflation's ravages do not end at the water's edge. Increases in prices of the goods we sell abroad threaten to drive us out of markets that once were securely ours. Whether domestic prices, so high as to be non-competitive, result from demands for too-high profit margins or from increased labor costs that outrun growth in productivity, the final result is seriously damaging to the Nation.

We must fight inflation as we would a fire that imperils our home. Only by so doing can we prevent it from destroying our salaries, savings, pensions and insurance, and from gnawing away the very roots of a free, healthy economy and the Nation's security.

One major method by which the Federal Government can counter inflation and rising prices is to insure that its expenditures are below its revenues. The debt with which we are now confronted is about $290 billion. With interest charges alone now costing taxpayers about $9-1/2 billion, it is clear that this debt growth must stop. You will be glad to know that despite the unsettling influences of the recent steel strike, we estimate that our accounts will show, on June 30, this year, a favorable balance of approximately $200 million.

I shall present to the Congress for 1961 a balanced budget. In the area of defense, expenditures continue at the record peacetime levels of the last several years. With a single exception, expenditures in every major category of health, education and welfare will be equal or greater than last year. In space expenditures the amounts are practically doubled. But the over-all guiding goal of this budget is national need -- not response to specific group, local or political insistence.

Expenditure increases, other than those I have indicated, are largely accounted for by the increased cost of legislation previously enacted.*

This budget will help ease pressures in our credit and capital markets. It will enhance the confidence of people all over the world in the strength of our economy and our currency and in our individual and collective ability to be fiscally responsible.

In the management of the huge public debt the Treasury is unfortunately not free of artificial barriers. Its ability to deal with the difficult problems in this field has been weakened greatly by the unwillingness of the Congress to remove archaic restrictions. The need for a freer hand in debt management is even more urgent today because the costs of the undesirable financing practices which the Treasury has been forced into are mounting. Removal of this roadblock has high priority in my legislative recommendations.

Still another issue relates to civil rights. In all our hopes and plans for a better world we all recognize that provincial and racial prejudices must be combatted. In the long perspective of history, the right to vote has been one of the strongest pillars of a free society. Our first duty is to protect this right against all encroachment. In spite of constitutional guarantees, and notwithstanding

*Interpolated announcement of $4.2 billion budget surplus to be applied against the national debt, saving the taxpayers $200 million in interest costs annually. "Once we have established such payments as normal practices we can profitably make improvements in our tax structure and thereby truly reduce the heavy burdens of taxation."

much progress of recent years, bias still deprives some persons in this country of equal protection of the laws.

Early in your last session, I recommended legislation which would help eliminate several practices discriminating against the basic rights of Americans. The Civil Rights Commission has developed additional constructive recommendations. I hope that these will be among the matters to be seriously considered in the current session. I trust that Congress will thus signal to the world that our Government is striving for equality under law for all our people.

Each year and in many ways our Nation continues to undergo profound change and growth. In the past 18 months, we have hailed the entry of two more states of the Union -- Alaska and Hawaii. We salute these two western stars proudly.

Our vigorous expansion, which we all welcome as a sign of health and vitality, is many-sided. We are, for example, witnessing explosive growth in metropolitan areas.

By 1975 the metropolitan areas of the United States will occupy twice the territory they do today. The roster of urban problems with which they must cope is staggering. They involve water supply, cleaning the air, adjusting local tax systems, providing for essential educational, cultural and social services, and destroying those conditions which breed delinquency and crime.

In meeting these, we must, if we value our historic freedoms, keep within the traditional framework of our Federal system with powers divided between the national and state governments. The uniqueness of this system may confound the casual observer, but it has worked effectively for nearly 200 years.

I do not doubt that our urban and other perplexing problems can be solved in the traditional American method. In doing so we must realize that nothing is really solved and ruinous tendencies are set in motion by yielding to the deceptive bait of the "easy" Federal tax dollar.

Our educational system provides a ready example. All recognize the vital necessity of having modern school plants, well-qualified and adequately compensated teachers, and of using the best possible teaching techniques and curricula. We cannot be complacent about educating our youth.

But the route to better-trained minds is not through the swift administration of a Federal hypodermic or sustained financial transfusion. The educational process, essentially a local and personal responsibility, cannot be made to leap ahead by crash, centralized governmental action.

The Administration has proposed a carefully reasoned program for helping eliminate current deficiencies. It is designed to stimulate classroom construction, not by substitution of Federal dollars for state and local funds, but by incentives to extend and encourage state and local efforts. This approach rejects the notion of Federal domination or control. It is workable, and should appeal to every American interested in advancement of our educational system in the traditional American way. I urge the Congress to take action upon it.

INTERNATIONAL RULE OF LAW

There is one other subject concerning which I renew a recommendation I made in my State of the Union Message last January. I then advised the Congress of my purpose to intensify our efforts to replace force with a rule of law among nations. From many discussions abroad, I am convinced that purpose is widely and deeply shared by other peoples and nations of the world.

In the same message, I stated that our efforts would include a reexamination of our own relations to the International Court of Justice. The Court was established by the United Nations to decide international legal disputes between nations. In 1946 we accepted the Court's jurisdiction, but subject to a reservation of the right to determine unilaterally whether a matter lies essentially within domestic jurisdiction. There is pending before the Senate a resolution which would repeal our present self-judging reservation. I support that resolution and urge its prompt passage. If this is done, I intend to urge similar acceptance of the Court's jurisdiction by every member of the United Nations.

Here perhaps it is not amiss for me to say to the Members of the Congress, in this my final year of office, a word about the institutions we respectively represent and the meaning which the relationships between our two branches has for the days ahead.

I am not unique as a President in having worked with a Congress controlled by the opposition party -- except that no other President ever did it for quite so long! Yet in both personal and official relationships we have weathered the storms of the past five years. For this I am grateful.

My deep concern in the next 12 months, before my successor takes office, is with our joint Congressional-Executive duty to our own and to other nations. Acting upon the beliefs I have expressed here today, I shall devote my full energies to the tasks at hand, whether these involve travel for promoting greater world understanding, negotiations to reduce international discord, or constant discussions and communications with the Congress and the American people on issues both domestic and foreign.

RELATIONS WITH CONGRESS

In pursuit of these objectives, I look forward to, and shall dedicate myself to, a close and constructive association with the Congress.

Every minute spent in irrelevant inter-branch wrangling is precious time taken from the intelligent initiation and adoption of coherent policies for our national survival and progress.

We seek a common goal -- brighter opportunity for our own citizens and a world peace with justice for all.

Before us and our friends is the challenge of an ideology which, for more than four decades, has trumpeted abroad its purpose of gaining ultimate victory over all forms of government at variance with its own.

We realize that however much we repudiate the tenets of imperialistic communism, it represents a gigantic enterprise, grimly pursued by leaders who compel its subjects to subordinate their freedom of action and spirit and personal desires for some hoped-for advantage in the future.

The Communists can present an array of material accomplishments over the past 15 years that lends a false persuasiveness to many of their glittering promises to the uncommitted peoples. The competition they provide is formidable.

But in our scale of values we place freedom first -- our whole national existence and development have been geared to that basic concept and are responsible for the position of free world leadership to which we have succeeded. It is the highest prize that any nation can possess; it is one that communism can never offer. And America's record of material accomplishment in freedom is written not only in the unparalleled prosperity of our own nation, but in the many billions we have devoted to the reconstruction of Free World economies wrecked by World War II and in the effective help of many more billions we have given in saving the independence of many others threatened by outside domination. Assuredly we have the capacity for handling the problems in the new era of the world's history we are now entering.

But we must use that capacity intelligently and tirelessly, regardless of personal sacrifice.

The fissure that divides our political planet is deep and wide. We live, moreover, in a sea of semantic disorder in which old labels no longer faithfully describe. Police states are called "people's democracies." Armed conquest of free people is called "liberation."

Such slippery slogans make more difficult the problem of communicating true faith, facts and beliefs.

We must make clear our peaceful intentions, our aspirations for a better world. So doing, we must use language to enlighten the mind, not as the instrument of the studied innuendo and distorter of truth. And we must live by what we say.

On my recent visit to distant lands I found one statesman after another eager to tell me of the elements of their government that had been borrowed from our American Constitution, and from the indestructible ideals set forth in our Declaration of Independence.

As a Nation we take pride that our own constitutional system, and the ideals which sustain it, have been long viewed as a fountainhead of freedom. By our every action we must strive to make ourselves worthy of this trust, ever mindful that an accumulation of seemingly minor encroachments upon freedom gradually could break down the entire fabric of a free society. So persuaded, we shall get on with the task before us. So dedicated, and with faith in the Almighty, humanity shall one day achieve the unity in freedom to which all men have aspired from the dawn of time.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

PRESIDENT'S BUDGET FOR FISCAL 1961 CALLS FOR $4.2 BILLION SURPLUS

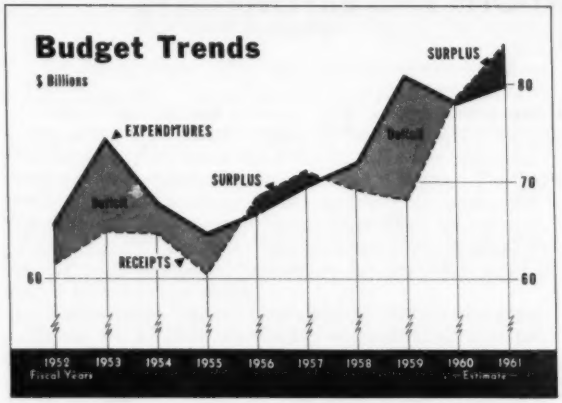
President Eisenhower's budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1961, sent to Congress Jan. 18, 1960, called for expenditures of $79.8 billion and receipts of $84 billion, leaving a surplus of $4.2 billion which the President urged using to cut the public debt to $280 billion. The projections for fiscal 1961 compared with an estimated surplus of $200 million for fiscal 1960, based on expenditures of $78.4 billion and receipts of $78.6 billion. (See résumé below.)

The President's revenue projection showed that he expected a prosperous fiscal 1961 to produce $15.7 billion more for the Treasury than was collected in recession-depressed fiscal 1959. In fiscal 1957, in a comparable situation, budget receipts were $10.6 billion higher than in recession-hit fiscal 1955.

Expenditures

Projected expenditures represented a net increase of $1.4 billion over estimated outlays in the 1960 fiscal year, but $900 million less than was actually spent in fiscal 1959. The net increase shown for fiscal 1961 over 1960 was based on increases in each of eight of the budget's 10 major functional categories, totaling $1.8 billion, offset by decreases in the other two categories amounting to $375 million. Analysis of the more than 50 sub-functions in the budget, however, showed a substantially larger volume of increases in a variety of programs and offsetting cuts in others. (See table on p. 624.)

Following are the more significant spending shifts projected in the budget.



- Major national security -- A net decrease of $82 million is attributable to a $96 million drop in stockpiling expenses. A $50 million increase in Defense Department outlays -- a negligible portion of the $41 billion total -- is offset by a $50 million drop in military assistance.
- International affairs -- Principal reason for a net increase of $176 million in this function is a $150 million increase forecast for economic and technical assistance, of which $125 million will be in loans disbursed by the Development Loan Fund.
- Veterans benefits -- A net increase of $314 million reflects an increase of $433 million for compensation and pension payments (a 13 percent increase) offset by a $130 million drop in estimated outlays for education and training.
- Labor and welfare -- Higher expenditures all along the line account for the net increase of $128 million in this category. Almost one-half of the $4.6 billion total projected will go for public assistance grants to the states.
- Agriculture -- The projected net increase of $510 million -- a flat 10 percent raise for the farmer -- reflects a $450 million increase in Commodity Credit Corp. outlays for price supports.
- Natural resources -- A net increase of $153 million stems almost entirely from increases for three major land and water development agencies: Tennessee Valley Authority, $38 million; Corps of Engineers, $60 million; and Bureau of Reclamation, $64 million.

[1] Includes amounts for proposed legislation.

● Commerce and housing -- The President asks for a net decrease of $293 million, or about 10 percent, in this category of spending. However, the decrease is contingent upon the enactment of higher postal rates which would cut Post Office budget outlays by $554 million. He also counts on Congress to allow the veterans' direct home loan program to expire, for a saving of $240 million. Elsewhere in this broad category there are substantial increases, including $275 million for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, $120 million for the Federal Aviation Agency, and $150 million for the Federal National Mortgage Assn.

● General government -- Most of the $200 million net increase in the cost of general government stems from four sources: $30 million more for the third House office building; $30 million more for the Internal Revenue Service; $35 million for new public buildings; and a $46 million payment to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund.

● Interest -- The Treasury expects to pay $9.5 billion in interest on the public debt during fiscal 1961 -- $200 million more than in fiscal 1960 and $1.9 billion more than in fiscal 1959. Since this estimate is posited on a $4.2 billion reduction in outstanding debt, at a saving the President said would amount to $200 million a year, the true increase in interest costs projected for fiscal 1961 is closer to $400 million.

● Contingencies -- The budget allows $200 million for contingencies, or $125 million more than estimated for unallocated spending during the balance of fiscal 1960.

Revenues

An increase in budgetary receipts from all major sources was forecast for fiscal 1961, as follows:

(Fiscal years, in billions)

	1959	1960 est.	1961 est.
Individual income taxes	$36.7	$40.3	$43.7
Corporation income taxes	17.3	22.2	23.5
Excise taxes	8.5	9.1	9.5
All other receipts	5.8	7.0	7.3
TOTAL	$68.3	$78.6	$84.0

In making these estimates, Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson said, the Treasury assumed that gross national product would increase from about $480 billion in calendar 1959 to $510 billion in calendar 1960. Within this assumption, receipts from individual and corporation income taxes were estimated on the basis of the following income and profit projections, in billions, by calendar year:

	1959	1960
Personal income	$380	$402
Corporate profits	48	51

On both sides of the fiscal 1961 budget -- expenditures and receipts -- the anticipated totals were contingent upon Congressional approval of a series of revenue proposals. Estimated receipts of $84 billion assumed that Congress would agree to:

● Postpone, for the seventh year running, a reduction of 5 percentage points in the 52-percent corporation income tax, as well as reductions in certain excise taxes, that were scheduled to take effect June 30, 1960. The President also asked Congress to reverse its 1959 action repealing the 10 percent excise tax on local telephone service and reducing the 10 percent excise on transportation to 5 percent, both to take effect June 30, 1960. Failure to take these steps would cost the Treasury a total of $2.6 billion in fiscal 1961.

● Revise tax rules for cooperatives and percentage depletion allowances, steps urged by the President but ignored in 1959. It was then estimated these steps would produce $50 million to $100 million in added revenue.

● Revise rules covering taxation of gain from the sale of depreciable personal property, to treat such gain as ordinary income -- a new request that would result in increased revenue.

● Raise the excise tax on aviation gasoline from 2 cents to 4½ cents per gallon, levy the same tax on jet fuels, and credit the proceeds to the general fund instead of the Highway Trust Fund. These recommendations were made originally in the fiscal 1960 budget.

The major revenue proposal which, if not approved by Congress, would increase estimated fiscal 1961 expenditures of $79.8 billion, was an increase in postage rates amounting to $554 million. That amount of additional income would permit the Post Office to operate at a cost to the budget of only $49 million, since Post Office receipts are not credited to budget receipts. This request, likewise made in 1959, was also ignored.

Another revenue proposal whose effects would show up on the expenditure side of the budget related to highway financing. In 1959 the President asked Congress to raise the gas tax from 3 cents to 4½ cents per gallon for five years, to rescue the faltering Highway Trust Fund. Congress agreed to a 1-cent increase through fiscal 1961, after which it directed that certain other revenues be transferred from the general fund to the trust fund. The President's new budget requests that his original proposal be enacted, and estimates that its full annual effect (subsequent to fiscal 1961) would be to reduce budgetary expenditures by $850 million. These "savings to the general taxpayers," as the President's message describes them, are largely matters of bookkeeping. Higher expenditures for highways and postal operations are anticipated, whether they show up in the budget or not.

Budget Trends

Excluding fiscal 1959, when anti-recession spending and a unique payment of $1.4 billion to the International Monetary Fund helped to push total budgetary expenditures above $80 billion, spending has increased every year since fiscal 1955 when the Eisenhower Administration achieved its lowest total of $64.6 billion. The gap of $15.2 billion between the fiscal 1955 figure and estimated fiscal 1961 expenditures represents an increase of 23.6 percent. (Actual expenditures have increased by substantially more, since outlays for highways are no longer shown in the budget.)

Examined in terms of functions, the budgets for fiscal 1955 and fiscal 1961 show that whereas total spending has increased by almost 24 percent, outlays for "major national security" (principally military defense) have risen by only 12 percent. When defense spending is excluded, the two budgets show an increase in non-defense spending from $23.9 to $34.2 billion, or 43 percent.

Even this figure obscures the fact that some areas of non-defense spending show far sharper increases than do others. An increase of $1 billion in the cost of veterans services and benefits, for example, amounts to 23 percent. But the increase of $2 billion in outlays for various labor and welfare programs amounts to 77 percent. Public health expenditures alone have risen from $275 million to $904 million, or 230 percent.

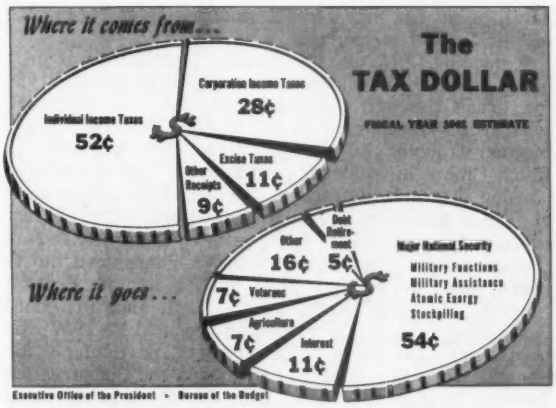
Again, the rise of $1.2 billion in Federal expenditures for agriculture adds up to less than 30 percent. By contrast, gross outlays for commerce and housing, which have also increased by $1.2 billion, show a rise of 80 percent, exclusive of highway spending no longer carried in the budget. Between fiscal 1955 and 1961, spending for "promotion of aviation" has jumped exactly 300 percent, while outlays for "space exploration and flight technology" show a full 700 percent increase.

In very few budget categories has there been an absolute decrease in spending since fiscal 1955. One of these is foreign "economic and technical development." Outlays for this purpose amounted to just under $2 billion in fiscal 1955; for fiscal 1961 they are expected to be about $1.8 billion.

Further increases in non-defense spending may be anticipated, if recent experience is a reliable guide. The key to expenditures, over the years, is "new obligational authority," consisting chiefly of the appropriations voted by Congress. So long as this authority for future spending exceeds actual expenditures, the spending trend will rise; conversely, when new obligational authority consistently falls short of actual spending, the trend will be down.

In fiscal 1954, 1955, 1956, new obligational authority fell short of expenditures by $5 billion, $7.5 billion, and $3.3 billion respectively. But in fiscal 1957, 1958, 1959, and 1960, new authority exceeded actual spending by amounts ranging from $700 million to $4.4 billion. In his fiscal 1961 budget, as in the 1960 budget, the President asked for new authority amounting to $400 million less than estimated expenditures. Whether the upward trend will in fact be reversed remains to be seen.

Defense Spending



Military expenditures by the Defense Department are estimated at $41 billion in fiscal 1961, or $50 million more than in fiscal 1960. Since military aid expenditures (now to be included in the Defense budget) are expected to drop by $50 million, total defense spending is expected to remain at $42,745,000,000. New obligational authority, however, is estimated at $630 million more than 1960:

(Fiscal years, in millions)

	1959	1960	1961
Department of the Army	$ 9,381	$ 9,679	$ 9,546
Department of the Navy	11,820	11,214	12,013
Department of the Air Force	18,713	18,475	17,737
Office of the Secretary	1,255	1,279	1,281
Military assistance	1,515	1,300	2,000
TOTAL	$42,683	$41,947	$42,577

These figures show that the increase in new obligational authority to be requested of Congress will be for military assistance alone. Within the Defense Department, however, the Navy is to get $800 million more and the Air Force $738 million less than in fiscal 1960. Essentially, then, the President's budget contemplates no major change in the total amount of defense spending, while allowing for substantial shifts as between the armed services and particular programs. Points in detail:

- Manpower -- Total uniformed personnel will remain at 2,489,000 through fiscal 1961, divided as follows: Army, 870,000; Navy, 619,000; Marine Corps, 175,000; Air Force, 825,000. In addition, the services will maintain reserve forces totaling 1,002,000.
- Army -- Forces will be organized into 14 divisions and 25 other combat units, an increase of one battle group and one missile command. Seven divisions will remain stationed overseas. Development will continue on the Nike-Zeus anti-missile system, but $137 million voted by Congress in 1959 to start production will not be spent pending the outcome of forthcoming tests.
- Navy -- Funds are provided for 20 new ships, including three additional fleet ballistic missile submarines (nine are under construction), and a Forrestal-class carrier with conventional power. (Congress in 1959 appropriated funds instead to start work on a nuclear-powered carrier, but the money was frozen.)
- Air Force -- Combat wings will drop from 96 to 91 in number. Four wings of B-47 medium bombers (180 aircraft) are to be retired, and one B-52 heavy bomber wing added. "Additional units of the Atlas ICBM and the first few Titan ICBMs will be operational" by the end of 1961. Funds are included "to initiate production of the first operational quantities of the Minuteman," the solid-fueled ICBM slated eventually to replace the Atlas and Titan.

HIGHLIGHTS OF EISENHOWER LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

The forecast of a $4.2 billion surplus in fiscal 1961 was about the only surprise contained in the President's Budget Message. Of the 155 specific legislative requests set forth in the message, in the President's Jan. 20 Economic Report, in two special space messages Jan. 14 and in a treaty ratification request Jan. 14, a total of 84 had been forwarded to Congress in 1959 or earlier. Of the new requests, only one, proposing 42 "new starts" on water projects, could be described as an apparent reversal of recent Administration policy.

Highlights of the Economic Report appear on the next page, followed by the text of the President's letter.

Legislative requests of major interest are summarized below, except for the President's revenue proposals, which were discussed separately. (See p. 623)

● Fiscal affairs -- The President again asked that Congress "immediately act to remove the 42-year-old 4.25 percent limitation on interest rates on Government securities maturing after five years" in order to "make possible prudent and flexible management of the public debt." Later, he said, he would ask for another temporary increase in the debt ceiling (due to revert to $285 billion on June 30) to meet seasonal needs, but "for less than the present $295 billion if the Congress accepts my budgetary proposals."

● Defense Department -- The President again proposed reducing the Army National Guard from 400,000 to 360,000, and the Army Reserve from 300,000 to 270,000, and asked Congress to drop the 400,000 minimum for the guard contained in the 1960 appropriation. He also asked for repeal of a 1951 rider prohibiting certain property transactions which, he said, "violates fundamental constitutional principles," and of another rider limiting competitive bidding by foreign firms on military items.

● Foreign aid -- In addition to asking $2 billion in new spending authority for the military assistance program ($400 million more than he asked in 1959, and $700 million more than was voted), the President asked for almost $2.2 billion for non-military aid, including $700 million for the Development Loan Fund -- the same amount asked for DLF in 1959, but $400 million less than Congress authorized for fiscal 1961. To promote private U.S. investment abroad, he asked for deferral of taxes on income earned in less-developed areas. The President again asked Congress to repeal limitations on aid to Communist satellite nations and the U.S. reservation on acceptance of World Court jurisdiction.

● Housing -- No omnibus housing legislation was proposed since, the President said, authority provided in 1959 for urban renewal, public housing, and FHA mortgage insurance was sufficient to last through 1960. He recommended dropping the veterans' direct-loan program, for which "there is no longer justification," and the college housing direct-loan program. He asked for continuation of FHA's authority to insure home-improvement loans, scheduled to expire Oct. 1; for greater flexibility in setting maximum interest rates on VA-guaranteed mortgages; and for another $150 million for the Federal National Mortgage Assn. special assistance program.

● Agriculture -- The President repeated his 1959 proposals for changes in price supports, particularly for wheat. He asked Congress to extend the Conservation Reserve Program, expiring Dec. 31, for another three years, and to raise the ceiling on annual rental payments from $450 million to $600 million, but he made this request contingent on acceptance of new price supports for wheat. He again asked Congress to raise the 2 percent interest limit on REA borrowing from the Treasury and REA loans.

● Natural resources -- The President requested funds for 42 "new starts" in the "interest of balanced development of water resources." (In 1959 the President opposed any "new starts" and advocated stretching out construction projects already underway.) He again asked Congress to authorize the Fryingpan-Arkansas project in Colorado, and to enact a new formula for cost-sharing on flood protection projects.

● Education -- The President repeated his 1959 request for bond-support programs to assist school districts and colleges in meeting construction costs. He again asked Congress to cut back two special programs of aid for school districts burdened by federal activities. For the first time, he supported repeal of a provision in the National Defense Education Act of 1958 requiring college loan applicants to sign affidavits disclaiming membership in subversive organizations.

● Labor -- The President again proposed that unemployment insurance coverage be extended to 3 million added workers, but left it up to the states to increase the duration and level of benefits. He also proposed extension of minimum wage coverage to "several million" additional workers, but did not recommend any change in the $1-per-hour minimum.

● Health -- The President, who in 1959 objected when Congress raised the appropriation for the National Institutes of Health by one-third to $400 million, agreed to that figure for the next year. But he again asked Congress to cut back grants for sewage plant construction, although he did not repeat his proposal that the Water Pollution Control program be turned over to the states, along with a portion of federal revenues from the excise tax on local telephone service.

● Social security -- The President made no recommendations for improvements in social security benefits, and implied that the entire question should be set aside until after the White House Conference on Aging that was scheduled for January 1961.

● Veterans -- The President said "I oppose the establishment of special educational and loan guarantee programs for peacetime ex-servicemen," a reference to a bill (S 1138) passed by the Senate in 1959 and sent on to the House. He also said "no further extension or liberalization" was needed for the special unemployment compensation program for Korean veterans, ending in 1961.

● General government -- A general pay raise for Federal employees, the President said, would be "unwarranted" and "unfair to the taxpayers," pending action on his previous proposal for developing a comprehensive federal pay policy. The President repeated earlier recommendations for home rule for the District of Columbia, modification of the immigration quota system, civil rights legislation, and new Federal judgeships.

● President's powers -- Mr. Eisenhower again asked for item veto power, citing the fact that 41 state governors enjoyed that authority. He also asked Congress to extend the President's authority under the Reorganization Act of 1949, which Congress allowed to lapse in 1959.

ECONOMIC REPORT: PROBLEMS OF NATIONAL GROWTH

The Economic Report of the President, transmitted to Congress Jan. 20, contained the Eisenhower Administration's first comprehensive, official reply to rising agitation over the failure of the American economy to grow as rapidly as that of the Soviet Union. In a chapter entitled "Economic Growth in a Free Society," the report attempted, in effect, to rebut in advance a forthcoming report by the Joint Economic Committee, which was expected to recommend a substantially different approach to the problem of achieving a higher rate of growth.

In essence, the President's report argued that "our traditional system of sharing responsibility for economic growth and improvement between the private and public spheres of our society" should prove just as successful in the future as it had in the past, and that the Federal Government's principal contribution to a "high and sustainable" growth rate lay in policies designed to even out the peaks and valleys of the business cycle. Specific points stressed were as follows.

● Rates of growth -- Using the 14-year span since passage of the Employment Act of 1946 as a yardstick, the report said growth averaged 3.2 percent per year in real terms, a figure "which corresponds to a doubling every 22 years" and "is roughly equivalent to the long-term average reached in our previous history." Other yardsticks, however, were less optimistic. The staff of the Joint Economic Committee, in a report issued Dec. 29, concluded that "the growth rate of output in the postwar period tapered off substantially after 1953" and that "the blame must fall primarily upon the behavior of the Federal Government."

For the future, the President's report said, "an annual national output close to half again what it is today" was possible by the end of the 1960s, provided new job opportunities were found for the rapidly increasing number of entrants into the labor market, and that productivity increased at the rate of recent decades. This statement implied, in effect, a growth rate of about 4.2 percent, based on a growth of GNP in constant dollars from $500 billion in 1960 to $750 billion in 1969. By contrast, the Joint Committee staff concluded that a 4.5 percent rate of growth was possible, but it would require "that the Government actively pursue growth-facilitating policies, that it continually maintain an adequate level of aggregate demand, and that it promote increased resource mobility and competition."

● Economic stabilization -- "The lessening of fluctuations in our economic development," the President's report said, could "yield a higher annual rate of growth over a period of years." While the Federal Government's responsibility to "counter recessionary tendencies" was widely acknowledged, "it is also important that appropriate measures should be taken to restrain surges in economic activity that might lead to drastic corrections."

The Joint Committee staff agreed that "greater economic stability may well be a basic requirement for a higher rate of economic growth." But its Dec. 29 report argued that the Administration's efforts to "restrain surges in economic activity," in its drive to curb inflation, had served to hold back the economy's rate of growth without any marked influence on prices.

● Controlling inflation -- As in earlier years, the President's Economic Report placed the chief responsibility for controlling prices on consumers, who should buy "carefully for price and quality," and on business and labor leaders in their wage negotiations. "Settlements should not be such as to cause the national average of wage rate increases to exceed sustainable rates of improvement in national productivity." Moreover, price reductions in some areas must be frequent, the report said: "Without such reductions we shall not be able to keep the price level as a whole from advancing."

The Joint Committee staff, analyzing the "creeping inflation" since 1955, concluded that its causes lay in economic instability, the exercise of "market power" by big business and big labor in such fields as steel, and higher prices for services such as medical care. To cope with "market power," the staff suggested a series of increasingly severe steps the Government might take to influence wage-price policies. As for rising service costs, the establishment of national productivity centers was suggested as one means of attack.

● Need for investment -- The President's report acknowledged the Government's contribution to growth, "both directly by increasing the productive capacity of individuals and business firms and indirectly by facilitating and encouraging the greater private investment that enlarges our capacity for future production." But, the report noted, "individuals and business concerns supply the bulk of the Nation's savings, and the major responsibility for directing these savings into private and public investment rests with private institutions."

The need for increased savings was stressed even more forcefully by the Joint Committee staff: "A higher growth rate requires a reduction in real personal consumption relative to real total product and a relative increase in real gross national savings." But it did not follow, the Dec. 29 Joint Committee report said, that the increased savings should always be privately invested. "To the extent that the capital to be accumulated is in the public sector, e.g., schools, roads, research facilities, etc., the surplus must be devoted to financing such investments."

The contrasting treatment of private vs. public savings and investment indicated above assumed immediate interest in the light of the projected budget surplus of $4.2 billion. The President wanted it to be used to retire public debt, leaving the funds to be reinvested privately. Many Democrats, on the other hand, argued the need for greater public investment in schools, research, etc., in the interests of more rapid economic growth.

● Tax incentives -- The Federal tax system, the President's report said, "should give encouragement to productive effort and should facilitate the mobility and efficient use of capital." There was little disagreement with this general statement. The Joint Committee staff, for example, agreed that "if a higher rate of capital formation in the private sectors of the economy is desired, tax burdens may have to be shifted to bear less heavily on investment and saving and more heavily on consumption over the long run." But, the staff concluded, this would require a "reduction in taxes on business income, particularly in the corporate sector, relative to personal income taxes." It is at this point that the effects of tax policy on economic growth become embroiled with questions of equity. The manner in which the tax issue is eventually resolved may shape the pattern of economic growth in the 1960s more than any other federal policy.

ECONOMIC REPORT

President Eisenhower Jan. 20 sent his Economic Report to Congress, accompanied by the following letter of transmittal (see analysis on preceding page):

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I present herewith my Economic Report, as required by, Section 3(a) of the Employment Act of 1946.

The report was prepared with the advice and assistance of the Council of Economic Advisers and of the heads of the executive departments and independent agencies directly concerned with the matters it discusses. It summarizes the economic developments of the year and the steps taken in major areas of economic policy to promote the sound expansion of employment, production, and income. It also puts forward a program for the year 1960 which, in the context of present and prospective economic conditions, would effectively implement the purposes of the Employment Act.

The major conclusions and recommendations of the report are set forth below, in part in the words of the report itself.

By the first quarter of 1959, the recovery that started early in 1958 had already carried production and income to levels higher than ever before attained in the American economy. A considerable further advance was scored during the remainder of 1959, despite the deep effect of the 116-day strike in the steel industry.

The Nation's output of goods and services in the fourth quarter of 1959 was at an annual rate of $482 billion. When adjusted for price changes, this rate of output was 3½ percent higher than the rate attained in the corresponding period in 1958. By December 1959, total employment had reached a record level, 66.2 million, on a seasonally adjusted basis. And personal income payments in December were at an annual rate of $391 billion, $24 billion greater than a year earlier. After adjustment for increases in prices, the rise in total personal income in 1959 represented a gain of nearly 5 percent in the real buying power of our Nation.

As we look ahead, there are good grounds for confidence that this economic advance can be extended through 1960. Furthermore, with appropriate private actions and public policies, it can carry well beyond the present year.

However, as always in periods of rapid economic expansion, we must avoid speculative excesses and actions that would compress gains into so short a period that the rate of growth could not be sustained. We must seek, through both private actions and public policies, to minimize and contain inflationary pressures that could undermine the basis for a high, continuing rate of growth.

Three elements stand out in the Government's program for realizing the objectives of high production, employment, and income set forth in the Employment Act: first, favorable action by the Congress on the recommendations for appropriations and for measures affecting Federal revenues presented in the budget for the fiscal year 1961; second, use of the resulting surplus, now estimated at $4.2 billion, to retire Federal debt; third, action by the Congress to remove the interest rate limitation that currently inhibits the non-inflationary management of the Federal debt. Numerous additional proposals, many of which are described in Chapter 4 of the Economic Report, will be made to supplement the Federal Government's existing economic and financial programs.

Following the budget balance now in prospect for the fiscal year 1960, these three elements of the 1960 program will strengthen and be strengthened by the essential contributions to sustainable economic growth made through the policies of the independent Federal Reserve System. Fiscal and monetary policies, which are powerful instruments for preventing the development of inflationary pressures, can effectively reinforce one another.

But these Government policies must be supplemented by appropriate private actions, especially with respect to profits and wages. In our system of free competitive enterprise and shared responsibility, we do not rely on Government alone for the achievement of inflation-free economic growth. On the contrary, that achievement requires a blending of suitable private actions and public policies. Our success in realizing the opportunities that lie ahead will therefore depend in large part upon the ways in which business management, labor leaders, and consumers perform their own economic functions.

A well-informed and vigilant public opinion is essential in our free society for helping achieve the conditions necessary for price stability and vigorous economic growth. Such public opinion can be an effective safeguard against attempts arbitrarily to establish prices or wages at levels that are inconsistent with the general welfare. Informed public opinion is also necessary to support the laws and regulations that provide the framework for the conduct of our economic affairs.

Further progress is needed in establishing a broad public understanding of the relationships of productivity and rewards to costs and prices. It would be a grave mistake to believe that we can successfully substitute legislation or controls for such understanding. Indeed, the complex relationships involved cannot be fixed by law, and attempts to determine them by restrictive governmental action would jeopardize our freedoms and other conditions essential to sound economic growth.

Our system of free institutions and shared responsibility has served us well in achieving economic growth and improvement. From our past experience, we are confident that our changing and increasing needs in the future can be met within this flexible system, which gains strength from the incentive it provides for individuals, from the scope it affords for individual initiative and action, and from the assurance it gives that government remains responsive to the will of the people.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

POSTAL RATE INCREASE

President Eisenhower March 11 sent a special message to Congress requesting an increase in postal rates. The text follows:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

In the Budget Message I urged the enactment of legislation to increase postal rates in order to eliminate the postal deficit. Several facts indicate the urgency of such action by the Congress.

The Postal Policy Act of 1958 definitely states that postal rates and fees shall be adjusted from time to time as may be required to produce the amount of revenue approximately equal to the total cost of operating the postal establishment, less the amount attributable to the performance of public services. That act directed the Postmaster General to submit to the Senate and House of Representatives no later than April 15 of this year the results of his survey of the need for the adjustment of postal rates and fees in accordance with this policy.

Because of the existing inadequate postal rates, the Post Office Department is losing $2 million every working day. In the 13 years from July 1946 to June 1959 the postal deficits have been approximately as much as the entire cost of running the Federal Government in 1938. The cumulative $6.8 billion postal deficit for these 13 years represents nearly one-half of the total increase in the federal debt during this same 13-year period. Interest charges alone on the debt represented by this cumulative deficit are costing our tapayers some $200 million each year.

These huge postal deficits are phenomena of the years since World War II. In the years from 1900 to 1940 the losses of the Post Office Department averaged only $33 million a year. Since that time -- excluding the war years -- these losses have increased astronomically. The tremendous losses incurred since World War II have been due to the increases in cost of everything the Department uses or buys, and to the failure of the Congress to enact postal rate increases to pay for the added costs. For example, since the increase in the first-class letter rate in 1932 from 2 cents to 3 cents, costs have more than doubled, but the first-class-letter rate has been increased only one-third. The annual losses on second and third-class mail, now in the hundreds of millions of dollars, are likewise growing.

It is imperative that Congress implement the policy it wisely established in 1958 of providing that the Post Office Department shall operate on a self-supporting basis. The Postmaster General is transmitting to the Congress the administration proposals for increases in postage rates on first, second and third-class mail to yield an estimated $550 million of new postal revenues in the 1961 fiscal year. Responsibility in the handling of our public affairs demands prompt action, in this session, to restore the Post Office Department to its traditional posture of budgetary good sense.

COOPERATION TO SOLVE FARM PROBLEMS URGED

Following the the complete text of President Eisenhower's farm message, delivered to Congress Feb. 9:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I urgently call attention, once again, to a most vexing domestic problem -- the low net income of many of our farmers and excessive production of certain farm products, largely due to economic distortions induced by years of federal interference.

We are most fortunate that our problem in agriculture is over-abundance rather than a shortage of food. But it defies common sense to continue to encourage, at the cost of many millions of tax dollars, the building of ever larger excess supplies of products that, as they accumulate, depress farm prices and endanger the future of our farmers.

The wheat situation is particularly acute. Federal funds tied up in wheat approximate $3.5 billion. Although this means that well over 30 percent of the total funds invested in inventories and loans of the Commodity Credit Corp. goes for wheat, this crop provides only 6 percent of the cash receipts from sales of farm products. The Government sustains a net cost of more than $1,000 a minute -- $1,500,000 every day -- the year around to stabilize wheat prices and income.

Day by day this program further distorts wheat markets and supplies. Its only future is ever higher cost. Inexorably it generates ever larger surpluses which must be expensively stored. Ultimately, if our Government does not act quickly and constructively, the danger is very real that this entire program will collapse under the pressure of public indignation, and thousands of our farming people will be hurt.

I think the American people have every right to expect the Congress to move promptly to solve situations of this kind. Sound legislation is imperatively needed. We must quickly and sensibly revise the present program to avoid visiting havoc upon the very people this program is intended to help. Every additional day of delay makes a sound solution more difficult.

GUIDELINES OFFERED

I have repeatedly expressed my preference for programs that will ultimately free the farmer rather than subject him to increasing governmental restraints. I am convinced that most farmers hold the same view. But whatever the legislative approach, whether toward greater freedom or more regimentation, it must be sensible and economically sound and not a political poultice. And it must be enacted promptly. I will approve any constructive solution that the Congress wishes to develop, by "constructive" meaning this:

First, that price support levels be realistically related to whatever policy the Congress chooses in respect to production control, it being recognized that the higher the support the more regimented must be the farmer.

Second, that price support levels not be so high so as to stimulate still more excessive production, reduce domestic markets and increase the subsidies required to hold world outlets.

Third, for reasons long expressed by the Administration, that we avoid direct subsidy payment programs for crops in surplus; likewise, we must avoid programs which would invite harmful counter measures by our friends abroad, or which, while seeking to assist one group of farmers, would badly hurt other farmers.

Within these three guidelines, I am constantly ready to approve any one or a combination of constructive proposals. I will approve legislation which will eliminate production controls, or make them really effective, or allow the farmers themselves to choose between realistic alternatives. I am willing to gear supports to market prices of previous years, or to establish supports in accordance with general rather than specific provisions of law, or to relate price supports to parity.

I recognize that these observations are general in nature. They are intentionally so in order to leave the Congress room for alternative constructive approaches to this problem. If the Congress should so act, I urge an orderly expansion of the Conservation Reserve Program up to 60 million acres, with authority granted the Secretary of Agriculture to direct the major expansion of this program to areas of greatest need.

In connection with the expansion of the Conservation Reserve, the Department of Agriculture stands ready to assist, if desired with the development of sound legislative criteria governing the administration of this program in the light of its experience gained through its operations of the past four years.

As part of the Conservation Reserve Program, I would be willing to accept an authorization, with proper safeguards, to the Secretary of Agriculture to make payments in kind in whole or in part for the reduction of acreage devoted to crops in surplus and retirement of this acreage from cultivation, provided measures are included to keep production below total consumption while the payment-in-kind procedure is being used. Lacking such safeguards, a payment-in-kind procedure would overload the free market and thereby depress prices.

My views as regards the price support program for wheat are clear. I prefer the following approach:

Acreage allotments and marketing quotas for wheat should be eliminated beginning with the 1961 crop -- thus freeing the wheat farmers -- and thereupon price-support levels should be set as a percentage of the average price of wheat during the three preceding calendar years. The Secretary of Agriculture will furnish the Congress the details of this approach.

Here I wish to comment somewhat more specifically on corn, a crop tremendously important to many thousands of our farmers.

Just over a year ago, by a referendum margin of almost three to one, our corn farmers decided upon a new program that liberalizes corn acreage and adjusts corn price supports. This program is still new, and I believe it would be wise to give it a chance to demonstrate what it can do. In order to help the producers adjust to this new program, it is intended to use the expanded Conservation Reserve Program to provide a voluntary means of removing substantial acreage of corn and other feed grains from production.

On the administrative side, I want briefly to mention three programs highly important to agriculture.

The food-for-peace program, initiated pursuant to my recommendations of last year, has been vigorously advanced. On my recent trip abroad, I saw many constructive results from these efforts and the need and opportunity for even greater use of this humanitarian program. Clearly we should continue to do our utmost to use our abundance constructively in the world-wide battle against hunger. The law we enacted in 1954, known as Public Law 480 of the 83rd Congress, has been especially helpful to us in waging this battle.

Next, an aggressive utilization research program is under way to develop new markets and new uses for farm products. The 1961 budget now before Congress recommends additional appropriations for utilization research, and additional local currencies being acquired under Public Law 480 transactions will be devoted to this purpose.

A coordinator for utilization research will shortly be named by the Secretary of Agriculture with the sole mission of concentrating on finding and promoting productive new uses for farm products.

The Rural Development Program, to assist rural people in low income areas to achieve a better living, is also being accelerated.

This program, initiated in my 1954 message, is now well beyond the demonstration stage and is going steadily forward in 30 states and Puerto Rico. Other states are now starting this important work. I have also recommended more funds for this program in the pending budget.

Finally, I repeat my conviction that the public, and farmers particularly, are entitled to sound legislative action on the problems I have mentioned. The Congress can act within a broad latitude of proposals and still comply with the recommendations I have made.

If the Congress wishes to propose a plan as an alternative to the course here recommended, so long as that plan is constructive, as I have indicated herein, I will approve it. The Department of Agriculture will cooperate fully with Congressional committees and with individual Members of Congress in helping to prepare such alternative programs as they may wish to have considered.

The important thing for farmers, and for all other Americans, is for us to act sensibly and to act swiftly.

I urge the Congress so to act in order that the farmers and public generally may plan accordingly.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ASSN.; IMMIGRATION

President Eisenhower Feb. 18 sent the following message to Congress in transmitting articles of agreement for establishment of the International Development Association:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I herewith submit to the Congress the articles of agreement for the establishment of the International Development Assn. I recommend legislation authorizing United States membership in the Association and providing for payment of the subscription obligations prescribed in the articles of agreement.

The Association is designed to assist the less-developed countries of the free world by increasing the flow of development capital on flexible terms. The advisability of such an institution was proposed by Senate Resolution 264 of 1958. Following this resolution, the National Advisory Council on International Monetary and Financial Problems undertook a study of the question. The Council's conclusions and the favorable response of representatives of other governments who were consulted during the course of the study have resulted in the articles of agreement which satisfy the objectives of that resolution and which I am submitting herewith. The accompanying special report of the Council describes the articles in detail.

We all know that every country needs capital for growth but that the needs are greatest where income and savings are low. The less-developed countries need to secure from abroad large amounts of capital equipment to help in their development. Some part of this they can purchase with their current savings, some part they can borrow on conventional terms, and some part is provided by private foreign investors. But in many less-developed countries, the need for capital imports exceeds the amounts they can reasonably hope to secure through normal channels. The Association is a multilateral institution designed to provide a margin of finance that will allow them to go forward with sound projects that do not fully qualify for conventional loans.

In many messages to the Congress, I have emphasized the clear interest of the United States in the economic growth of the less-developed countries. Because of this fundamental truth the people of our country are attempting in a number of ways to promote such growth. Technical and economic aid is supplied under the Mutual Security Program. In addition, many projects are assisted by loans from the Export-Import Bank, and we also participate with other free world countries in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development which is doing so much to channel funds, mainly from private sources, to the less-developed areas. While we have joined with the other American Republics in the Inter-American Development Bank, there is no wide international institution which, like our Development Loan Fund, can help finance sound projects requiring a broad flexibility in repayment terms, including repayment in the borrower's currency.

Conceived to meet this need, the International Development Assn. represents a joint determination by the economically advanced countries to help accelerate progress in the less-developed countries. It is highly gratifying that so many other free world countries are now ready to join with us in this objective.

COOPERATIVE VENTURE

The Association is a cooperative venture, to be financed by the member governments of the International Bank. It is to have initial subscriptions totaling one billion dollars, of which the subscription of the United States would be $320.29 million and the subscriptions of the other economically-strong countries would be $442.78 million. The funds made available by these countries would be freely convertible. The developing countries would subscribe $236.93 million, of which 10 percent would be freely convertible. Members would pay their subscriptions over a five-year period and would periodically reexamine the adequacy of the Association's resources.

The International Development Assn. thus establishes a mechanism whereby other nations can join in the task of providing capital to the less-developed areas on a flexible basis. Contribution by the less-developed countries themselves, moreover, is a desirable element of this new institution. In addition, the Association may accept supplementary resources provided by one member in the currency of another member. Thus, some part of the foreign currencies acquired by the United States primarily from its sales of surplus agricultural commodities may be made available to the Association when desirable and agreed to by the member whose currency is involved.

The articles of agreement give the Association considerable scope in its lending operations so that it can respond to the varied needs of its members. And because it is to be an affiliate of the International Bank, it will benefit from the long and successful lending experience of the Bank. By combining the Bank's high standards with flexible repayment terms, it can help finance sound projects that cannot be undertaken by existing sources. With a framework that safeguards existing institutions and traditional forms of finance, the Association can both supplement and facilitate private investment. It will provide an extra margin of capital that can give further momentum to growth in the developing countries on terms that will not overburden their economies and their repayment capacities.

The peoples of the world will grow in freedom, toleration and respect for human dignity as they achieve reasonable economic and social progress under a free system. The further advance of the less-developed areas is of major importance to the nations of the free world, and the Association provides an international institution through which we may all effectively cooperate toward this end. It will perform a valuable service in promoting the economic growth and cohesion of the free world. I am convinced that participation by the United States is necessary, and I urge the Congress to act promptly to authorize the United States to join with the other free nations in the establishment of the Association.

IMMIGRATION

Following is the complete text of President Eisenhower's March 17 special message to Congress on immigration legislation.

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I again urge the liberalization of some of our existing restrictions upon immigration.

The strength of this Nation may be measured in many ways -- military might, industrial productivity, scientific contributions, its system of justice, its freedom from autocracy, the fertility of its land and the prowess of its people. Yet no analytical study can so dramatically demonstrate its position in the world as the simple truth that here, more than any other place, hundreds of thousands of people each year seek to enter and establish their homes and raise their children.

To the extent possible, without dislocating the lives of those already living here, this flow of immigration to this country must be encouraged. These persons who seek entry to this country seek more than a share in our material prosperity. The contributions of successive waves of immigrants show that they do not bring their families to a strange land and learn a new language and a new way of life simply to indulge themselves with comforts. Their real concern is with their children, and as a result those who have struggled for the right of American citizenship have, in countless ways, shown a deep appreciation of its responsibilities. The names of those who make important contributions in the fields of science, law, and almost every other field of endeavor indicate that there has been no period in which the immigrants to this country have not richly rewarded it for its liberality in receiving them.

In the world of today our immigration law badly needs revision.

Ideally, I believe that this could perhaps be accomplished best by leaving immigration policy subject to flexible standards. While I realize that such a departure from the past is unlikely now, a number of bills have already been introduced which contain the elements of such an idea. The time is ripe for their serious consideration so that the framework of a new pattern may begin to evolve. For immediate action in this session I urge two major acts.

First, we should double the 154,000 quota immigrants that we are presently taking into our country.

Second, we should make special provision for the absorption of many thousands of persons who are refugees without a country as a result of political upheavals and their flight from persecution.

The first proposal would liberalize the quotas for every country and, to an important extent, moderate the features of existing law which operate unfairly in certain areas of the world. In this regard, I recommend the following steps:

1. The removal of the ceiling of 2,000 on quotas within the Asiatic-Pacific triangle;
2. The basing of the over-all limitation on immigration on the 1960 census as soon as it is available in place of that of 1920 which is the present base;
3. The annual acceptance of one-sixth of 1 percent of our total population;
4. Abandonment of the concept of race and ethnic classifications within our population, at least for the purposes of the increases in quotas I have recommended by substituting as the base for computation the number of immigrants actually accepted from each area between 1924 and 1959. In other words the increase in the quota for Italy, for example, would not be based upon a percentage of a so-called Italian ethnic group within our country, but upon a percentage of actual immigration from Italy between 1924 and 1959; and
5. The unused quotas of undersubscribed countries should be distributed among oversubscribed countries. This distribution should be in proportion to the quotas of the oversubscribed countries.

My second major proposal is for authorization for the parole into this country of refugees from oppression. They are persons who have been forced to flee from their homes because of persecution or fear of persecution based upon race, religion or political opinions, or they are victims of world political upheaval or national calamity which makes it impossible for them to return to their former homes.

This year has been designated World Refugee Year. The United States and 68 other nations have joined together in an attempt to seek permanent solutions for the problems of these peoples. Nations who in the past have granted entry to the victims of political or religious persecutions have never had cause to regret extending such asylum. These persons with their intellectual idealism and toughness will become worthwhile citizens and will keep this Nation strong and respected as a contributor of thought and ideals.

I have asked the Attorney General to submit a draft of legislation to implement the recommendations I have made. The Administration stands ready to supply whatever information is necessary to permit appropriate action by the Congress during its present session. If, notwithstanding my specific recommendations, the Congress should enact other or different liberalizations of our immigration law that are constructive, I will be glad to approve them.

PRESIDENT SENDS MUTUAL SECURITY MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Following is the complete text of the President's Feb. 16 message to Congress on the Mutual Security Program:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

A year ago in my message to the Congress on the Mutual Security Program, I described it as both essential to our security and important to our prosperity. Pointing out that our expenditures for mutual security are fully as important to our national defense as expenditures for our own forces, I stated that the Mutual Security Program is not only grounded in our deepest self-interest but springs from the idealism of the American people which is the true foundation of our greatness. It rests upon five fundamental propositions:

(1) that peace is a matter of vital concern to all mankind;
(2) that to keep the peace, the free world must remain defensively strong;
(3) that the achievement of a peace which is just depends upon promoting a rate of world economic progress, particularly among the peoples of the less developed nations, which will inspire hope for fulfillment of their aspirations;
(4) that the maintenance of the defensive strength of the free world, and help to the less developed, but determined and hard working, nations to achieve a reasonable rate of economic growth are a common responsibility of the free world community;
(5) that the United States cannot shirk its responsibility to cooperate with all other free nations in this regard.

It is my firm conviction that there are only a few in the United States who would deny the validity of these propositions. The overwhelming support of the vast majority of our citizens leads us inexorably to mutual security as a fixed national policy.

The Mutual Security Program is a program essential to peace.

The accomplishments of the Mutual Security Program in helping to meet the many challenges in the mid-20th Century place it among the foremost of the great programs of American history. Without them the map of the world would be vastly different today. The Mutual Security Program and its predecessors have been an indispensable contributor to the present fact that Greece, Turkey, Iran, Laos, Vietnam, Korea and Taiwan, and many nations of Western Europe, to mention only part, remain the home of free men.

While over the past year the Soviet Union has expressed an interest in measures to reduce the common peril of war, and while its recent deportment and pronouncements suggest the possible opening of a somewhat less strained period in our relationships, the menace of Communist imperialism nevertheless still remains. The military power of the Soviet Union continues to grow. Increasingly important to free world interests is the rate of growth of both military and economic power in Communist China. Evidence that this enormous power bloc remains dedicated to the extension of Communist control over all peoples everywhere is found in Tibet, the Taiwan Straits, in Laos and along the Indian border.

In the face of this ever-present Communist threat, we must, in our own interest as well as that of the other members of the free world community, continue our program of military assistance through the various mutual security arrangements we have established. Under these arrangements each nation has responsibilities, commensurate with its capabilities, to participate in the development and maintenance of defensive strength. There is also increasing ability of other free world nations to share the burden of this common defense.

Obviously, no one nation alone could bear the cost of defending all the free world. Likewise, it would be impossible for many free nations long to survive if forced to act separately and alone. The crumbling of the weaker ones would obviously and increasingly multiply the threats to those remaining free, even the very strongest.

Collective security is not only sensible -- it is essential.

That just peace which has always been and which remains our primary and common goal can never be obtained through weakness. The best assurance against attack is still the possession and maintenance of free world strength to deter attack.

The nations of Europe are increasingly assuming their share of the common defense task. None of our Nato partners other than Greece, Turkey, and Iceland now requires nor receives any economic assistance. Indeed, in rising volume, these nations are now providing economic assistance to others. Our Nato allies are also meeting their military needs to an increasing degree; several major countries now require no help. Our military programs in Nato countries today are largely designed and executed as joint cost sharing arrangements whereby vital additional defense needs are met through mutual effort.

It is clear that while every possibility to achieve trustworthy agreements which would reduce the peril of war must be explored, it would be most foolish to abandon or to weaken our posture of common deterrent strength which is so essential a prerequisite to the exploration of such possibilities. The need is for steadfast, undramatic, and patient persistence in our efforts to maintain our mutual defenses while working to find solutions for the problems which divide the world and threaten the peace.

The Mutual Security Program is a program essential to world progress in freedom. In addition to its mutual defense aspects, it also is the American part of a cooperative effort on the part of free men to raise the standards of living of millions of human beings from bases which are intolerably low, bases incompatible with human dignity and freedom.

Hundreds of millions of people throughout the world have learned that it is not ordained that they must live in perpetual poverty and illness, on the ragged edge of starvation. Their political leaders press the point home. In a variety of ways this drive is moving forward by fits and starts, often uncertain of its direction. It is sometimes involved in free world struggle against Communism, sometimes not. It is clearly in the interests of the United States that we assist this movement so that these countries may take their places as free, independent, progressing and stable members of the community of nations. It is equally clear that it would be against our interests if this forward movement were stifled or hindered. The result would be to breed frustration and explosive threats to political and economic stability in areas around the world.

Equally with military security, economic development is a common necessity and a common responsibility. An investment in the development of one part of the free world is an investment in the development of it all. Our welfare, and the welfare of all free men, cannot be divided -- we are dependent one on the other. It is for each of us, the strong and the weak, the developed and the less developed, to join in the great effort to bring forth for all men the opportunity for a rewarding existence in freedom and in peace. World economic expansion and increase in trade will bring about increased prosperity for each free world nation.

New challenges, with corresponding opportunities, are now visible before us: the acceleration of the achievement of independence of peoples in Africa; the growing restlessness in the less developed areas; and the increasing potential for partnership and assistance to these areas as a result of the continued growth of the now healthy economies of the industrialized Western European nations and of Japan, Canada and Australia.

Free world cooperation is becoming the watchword of this effort. In the past year the capital of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development was doubled and that of the International Monetary Fund was increased by half. In addition, a United States proposal for an International Development Association to be affiliated with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development has been accepted in principle and a draft charter recently has been submitted to member governments. I expect to transmit to the Congress recommendations on this matter in the near future. The industrialized nations of Europe, together with Japan and Canada, are notably stepping up their participation in cooperative efforts among themselves and with the less developed countries to promote growth. Similar approaches will be discussed at a meeting of representatives of a number of nations, to be held in Washington in March.

In our own Western Hemisphere society of nations, we are now joined in a great new venture, the Inter-American Development Bank. This new institution, formed in partnership with our neighboring nations, should prove of immense value in promoting the more rapid development of the member nations. Our participation in this joint effort is significant of the special interest which we have in the progressive development of our neighbors. Together with the very considerable dimensions of private and government investment taking place in the hemisphere, and the mutually beneficial technical cooperation we have so long enjoyed with our neighbors, it should serve to accelerate progress.

Thus the military and economic resources which we provide through the Mutual Security Program to help create and maintain positions of strength are properly to be regarded as what they are -- investments in the common defense and welfare and thus in our own security and welfare. This is a Mutual Security Program.

Our concepts are sound, our policies of proven value, and our will to meet our responsibilities undiminished and constant.

THE PROPOSALS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1961

The form and general structure of the Mutual Security Program for fiscal year 1961 remains essentially that which has stood the test of experience. In the administration of the various mutual security programs, changes have been instituted in organization, programming, and management controls. It was in part for the purpose of analyzing and making recommendations for improving the administration of the program that I appointed last year a distinguished group of citizens headed by Gen. Draper. Many of the recommendations that they made have already been put into effect. We are constantly seeking additional management improvements to meet the program needs and difficult problems of operating these diverse programs on a worldwide basis. The categories of activity are the same as those with which the Congress is familiar. Adjustments in the nature and dimension of activity are proposed which reflect and are responsible to the changes in the world scene, in the degrees of need and of capability for self-help. These adjustments also are consistent with an analysis of future needs and of future changes and capability for self-help. This forward analysis was, in part, conducted in conformance with the requirement of law that plans of future grant economic assistance be developed and presented to the Congress. The detailed plans and conclusion on future assistance will be submitted to the Congress in the near future.

MILITARY ASSISTANCE

For military assistance I am requesting in the pending Department of Defense budget an appropriation of $2 billion. This is more than was requested, or than was provided for fiscal year 1960. The request for a larger appropriation is not made in order to increase the proportionate share of United States participation in the common defense. Nor does it reflect an intent to embark on a vast expansion of the military assistance program.

The amount requested for military assistance within the Defense budget is in my considered judgment, and in that of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, a need for our defense equally compelling and of equal importance with the needs of our own services provided for elsewhere in the Defense budget.

The amount requested is the result of careful and detailed review of the needs of our allies to enable them to maintain the level of combat effectiveness made possible by previous military assistance and to provide, mostly on a cost sharing basis, for certain essential force improvement projects. Without adequate provision for maintenance, the monies previously spent would be largely wasted. And without force improvement, without the provision of more advanced weapons, the free world forces would inevitably fall behind in their ability to counter modernized aggressor forces.

The fact, if it is a fact, of reductions in Soviet military manpower, does not alter the need for the maintenance of our collective defense. Soviet military power, as Mr. Khrushchev's own statements make clear, remains great. Our plans have never attempted to match Soviet armed manpower; they have been and are designed to deter aggression. Of special importance is the maintenance of a strong and effective deterrent posture in the Nato alliance. As indicated earlier, the improving economic position of Western Europe as a whole makes it possible for Europe to share increasingly in the cost of the common defense, and for certain major European countries to maintain their defense efforts without United States assistance. At the same time, the requirements for modernization and improvement are of such dimension that our participation in joint cost sharing projects with certain European countries over the immediate future is still essential. Provision for such contributions is included in the proposed program.

The amount requested for fiscal 1961 is consistent with the recommendations of the bipartisan committee of distinguished citizens headed by Gen. Draper, which I appointed last year to review our policies and programs. This committee strongly urged the maintenance of a delivery program of approximately $2 billion annually. In recent years, annual deliveries have averaged about $2.2 billion. Deliveries in fiscal year 1960, however, reflecting the reduced appropriations of recent years, will fall back to $1.8 billion or less. Unexpended balances carried over from previous years have now been reduced to a minimum and deliveries in future years will closely approximate the annual appropriation level.

In my considered judgment, an appropriation of $2 billion for fiscal year 1961 is the minimum amount consistent with the maintenance of a firm and adequate collective defense posture. Anything less in effect precludes essential modernization and improvement of forces and limits us to a bare maintenance program.

ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE

Defense Support

For 12 of the nations with whom we are joined in collective or mutual security arrangements, we have for some years been contributing not only military resources required in the common defense but economic resources in the measure needed to permit the maintenance of such defenses without incurring political or economic instability. This category of resource contribution we term defense support -- economic resources to assure a defense posture. These 12 countries maintain forces of over 3 million men, more than the total number in the United States armed forces, and each of these underdeveloped countries, except for Spain, is part of the exposed land and off-shore island belt that forms the immediate southern and eastern boundary of the Sino-Soviet empire. Requirements in this defense support category have decreased somewhat; for fiscal year 1961 I am requesting for these programs $724 million or $111 million less than I asked for last year. This reduced requirement reflects in some measure a gradual but perceptible improvement in the economic situations in these countries. More than half, 56 percent is for the three Far Eastern countries of Korea, Taiwan and Vietnam which have the common characteristics that they are divided countries facing superior Communist forces on their borders, forces which the Communist previously have demonstrated their willingness to use, thereby compelling these frontier nations to support armed forces far in excess of their unaided capacities to maintain. The amounts requested for these purposes represent the least we can contribute and retain confidence that adequate defenses will be maintained.

Special Assistance

Another category of international cooperation in the Mutual Security Program is the provision of economic resources to other nations where such resources are essential to the maintenance of their freedom and stability. This category of cooperation we term special assistance. I am requesting $268 million for these purposes in fiscal year 1961. Such provision will enable us, for example, to continue aid to the young nations of Morocco, Libya and Tunisia, to strengthen the stability of Jordan and the Middle East, to combat the encroachment of Communist influence in Afghanistan, and to undergird the economies in Bolivia and Haiti. Special assistance will also enable our continued participation in such vital programs as the worldwide anti-malaria campaign.

Aid to Development

The achievement of economic progress, of growth, depends on many things. Through collective security arrangements, through defensive measures, by giving military aid and defense support, we and other nations can achieve a measure of security and stability within which the process of development is possible and can be fostered. The primary and essential prerequisite internally is the determination to progress and take the actions needed and to make the sacrifices required. No matter how great the determination, however, there will remain tremendous needs for both technical improvement and capacity and for development capital. If a pace of development is to be achieved which will meet the essential demands of these peoples, outside help is a necessity.

Technical Cooperation

Through our long established program of technical cooperation and by our contributions to the United Nations activities in the technical assistance field, we make a major contribution toward the satisfaction of this thirst and need for growth in knowledge and technical capacity. The Mutual Security Program proposed for fiscal year 1961 continues these vital activities and provides for the enlargement and extension of our technical assistance programs in the newly emerging nations of Africa. For bilateral technical assistance I request $172.5 million; for our participation in United Nations technical assistance programs I ask $33.5 million; and to supplement our much larger bilateral program with our neighbors to the south, I ask $1.5 million for the program of technical assistance which we conduct in cooperation with them through the Organization of American States.

Africa

Of inescapable interest to the United States in the world today is the increasing assumption of self-government by the peoples of the great continent of Africa, especially in the area south of the Sahara. This vast area deserves and commands the full attention and assistance of the free world if it is to develop its institutions and its economy under freedom. While the needs of Africa south of the Sahara for development capital are real and can be expected to grow, there is an imperative and immediate requirement for increased education and training. The request for appropriations for special assistance includes an amount of $20 million for a special program to be instituted for the improvement of education and training in Africa south of the Sahara, with particular emphasis to be given to the meeting of needs which are common to all the countries of the area. It is my belief that this initial effort must grow significantly in the immediate years ahead and complement similar efforts on the part of other free world nations so that the capacity of the new and other developing nations in Africa to manage and direct their development can be strengthened and increased rapidly and effectively. Without such strengthening and development of education and training, the preconditions of vigorous economic growth cannot be established.

Development Loan Fund

In the field of development assistance, the Development Loan Fund is proving to be an increasingly effective instrument for response to those needs which cannot be satisfied from private investment, the World Bank or other like sources. It has assisted in the installation of basic facilities, such as power and transportation, necessary for growth in the less developed areas. Particularly important are the expanded activities of the Development Loan Fund in the field of private enterprise. The Development Loan Fund is opening new opportunities to build an effective partnership with American private enterprise wherein the private resources of the country can make an increased contribution to development in the less developed nations. The history of the Development Loan Fund activity over the past two years indicates that the flow of such loan capital has tended to respond to the degree of need and of capability. In other words, those areas where the determination and the will to progress are greatest and the capacity to use such resource effectively is the greatest, have been the leading recipients of loan assistance from the Development Loan Fund. I request $700 million for the Development Loan Fund for use beginning in fiscal year 1961.

South Asia

Over the past two years a major share of Development Loan Fund loans have been made to the two great nations of South Asia, India and Pakistan, where half a billion people are deeply committed and irrevocably determined to develop and maintain institutions of their own free choice, and to raise their standards of living to levels of decency. The force and drive of this great effort is unmistakable; it warrants the full and warm support of the free world. We have joined with other nations in helping these countries; we envisage the total public and private effort to assist South Asia not only continuing but expanding. An increased amount is expected to be devoted to this great cause from the resources requested for the Development Loan Fund for fiscal year 1961 as these countries increase even further their own self-help efforts.

The Indus Basin Development

A development of major significance in South Asia is the substantial progress being made under the auspices of the World Bank to effect a solution to the complex and difficult problem of the use of the waters of the Indus River basin as between India and Pakistan. Vital interests of both countries are involved; the solution must involve a plan whereby the waters, on which the agriculture, the food supplies, and the economies of the region depend, can be equitably developed and shared. It is anticipated that an agreement on such a development plan may be reached in the near future. Essential to its fruition is the willingness of nations outside South Asia to assist in the development plan, the cost of which cannot be borne by these nations unaided. Under World Bank auspices, plans are being developed whereunder the Bank, British Commonwealth nations, West Germany, and the United States will each contribute to the costs of the development plan and the supervision and management of the enterprise will be undertaken by the Bank. We propose to provide a measure of assistance to this activity through the Mutual Security Program in fiscal year 1961 and in subsequent years as needs arise. To assure that we can effectively participate in this multilateral undertaking, I am asking for authorization to exercise flexibility in the application of regulations normally applied to bilateral undertakings, if and when such exceptional action is required for this great project. The solution of this troublesome international issue should be of great assistance in promoting a peaceful and cooperative resolution of other divisive issues and encourage a maximum concentration on the major goals of peace and prosperity.

Republic of China

The Mutual Security Program can be expected also to be responsive to the needs of other areas and countries as their determination and capacity to employ development capital grows. We have received proposals from the government of the Republic of China for an expanded and accelerated program of economic reform and development to which we are giving close and careful attention. The vigorous and skilled population on Taiwan, the record of growth in investment and output, the very real potential for acceleration, offer a prospect for a convincing demonstration that under free institutions a pace and degree of achievement can eventually be obtained in excess of that resulting under totalitarianism. For this purpose, we envisage the full employment of both grant and loan assistance to hasten the day of ultimate viability and self-sustaining growth.

Contingency Fund and Other Programs

In addition to the major categories of cooperation which I have mentioned, military assistance and defense support, special assistance, technical cooperation and the Development Loan Fund, I am asking also for a contingency fund of $175 million and for $101 million to continue a variety of small but important programs.

The contingency fund is an essential safeguard against the unforeseen or not wholly predictable need. The record of the past several years clearly demonstrates its value as enabling prompt and effective response to the altering course of international events.

The $101 million requested for other programs will permit our continued participation in UNICEF, in refugee programs and in the foreign programs for peaceful uses of atomic energy. It also will provide for administrative costs to administer the economic and technical programs.

For the total Mutual Security Program I ask $4.175 billion. The need for these amounts has been examined and reexamined with great care in the Executive Branch. I am entirely satisfied that the needs for which funds are sought are needs which must be met and that the funds sought are the most reasonable estimates of requirements we can produce. There is no question but that the nation can afford the expenditures involved; I am certain we cannot afford to ignore the needs for which they are required.

CONCLUSION

The United States is a privileged nation. Its citizens enjoy a measure of prosperity and well-being and an extent of liberty under free institutions unequalled in the history of the world. Our ideals and our ideology place upon us a responsibility for leadership and for cooperation with other nations and other peoples which we accept willingly and with pride.

My recent travels impressed upon me even more strongly the fact that free men everywhere look to us, not with envy or malice but with hope and confidence that we will in the future as in the past be in the vanguard of those who believe in and will defend the right of the individual to enjoy the fruits of his labor in peace and in freedom. Together with our fellow men, we shall not fail to meet our responsibilities.

BOND INTEREST RATES

President Eisenhower Jan. 12 sent the following special message to Congress:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

As I said in my State of the Union message, the Treasury is being prevented from taking debt management actions that are fully consistent with the public interest because of the artificial interest rate ceiling on new Treasury medium-term and long-term issues.

In a special message to the Congress on June 8, 1959, I urged the removal of this archaic restriction on flexible debt management. Congressional inaction on that request has resulted in a much more rapid increase in short-term debt than would otherwise have occurred. As a result, short-term Treasury borrowing costs have risen to the highest levels in several decades and the ability of debt management to operate in a manner consistent with sound principles of sustained economic growth has been seriously undermined.

I deem it imperative, therefore, that this restrictive ceiling be removed. I am asking the Secretary of the Treasury to transmit to the Congress proposed legislation designed to attain this objective.

SUGAR MESSAGE

Following is the text of President Eisenhower's message to Congress Aug. 23 on the curtailment of sugar imports from the Dominican Republic:

The meeting of foreign ministers of the American republics at San Jose, Costa Rica, has just completed its deliberations on the charges made against the Dominican Republic by the Government of Venezuela, as well as on the flagrant violation of human rights by the Trujillo regime. The foreign ministers voted unanimously to condemn the Dominican acts of aggression and intervention against Venezuela, culminating in the attempt on the life of the President of that country, and resolved to (1) break diplomatic relations with the Dominican Republic, and (2) interrupt partially economic relations with that country beginning with a suspension of trade in arms and implements of war, with the provision that the Council of the Organization of American States shall study the feasibility and desirability of extending this trade suspension to other articles. The United States joined with the other American republics in approving these measures.

Some 322,000 short tons of the sugar not being purchased from Cuba pursuant to the reduction in the Cuban quota is, under the July amendment to the Sugar Act, to be allocated to the Dominican Republic. This allocation is in addition to the Dominican Republic's 1960 quota amounting to approximately 130,000 tons. Since total imports of sugar from the Dominican Republic in 1959 amounted only to about 84,000 tons, the statutory allocation would give that country a large sugar bonus seriously embarrassing to the United States in the conduct of our foreign relations throughout the hemisphere.

In view of the foregoing considerations, the Government should have discretion to purchase elsewhere the quantity apportioned to the Dominican Republic pursuant to the July amendment to the Sugar Act. I, therefore, request legislation providing that amounts which would be purchased in the Dominican Republic pursuant to the July amendment need not be purchased there, but may be purchased from any foreign countries without regard to allocation.

I would also remind the Congress that the Sugar Act's present termination date of March 31, 1961 -- only three months after the reconvening of Congress next January -- could cause a serious gap in supplies, because it often takes as much as one or two months after purchase for sugar from distant areas to reach our refineries. Thus an extension of the Sugar Act beyond its present termination date is necessary at this session in order to protect consumers in the United States against the possibility of unreasonable prices for sugar next February and March.

I request that the Congress give urgent consideration to and take favorable action on the proposed legislation.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

PRESIDENT PRODS CONGRESS TO ENACT 15-POINT LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

President Eisenhower May 3 sent the following message to Congress:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

Of this, presumably the last Congressional session during my term of office, four months have gone by. Thus far the one major accomplishment is enactment of civil rights legislation. Although Congress rejected certain of my recommendations in this area -- those relating to equality of job opportunity and assistance to states attempting to desegregate their schools -- the new civil rights measure is another important step toward the attainment of the ideal of equal rights before the law for every citizen.

With only two months apparently left in the session, we still have a great deal to get done for America. I stress this now because, first, the time grows short in which to legislate prudently and wisely, without undue haste; and second, too great a preoccupation with the events of an election year could seriously impede constructive effort. With the Congress controlled by one party and the Executive Branch by the other, these difficulties could become severe.

We should jointly resolve that the shortness of time and political rivalries will not be allowed to prevent us from serving the American people effectively. Matters are still pending that are vital to the health of our economy and to the Nation's security and world peace; none of us can afford to electioneer at the expense of these. Nor can we yield to the temptation to neglect projects that we know are essential to good government but possess little popular appeal, and at the same time overemphasize others in the hope of benefit to one party or the other, or individuals therein.

MUTUAL SECURITY

Relating these considerations to a few of the programs still pending, I refer, first, to our vital mutual security effort.

During most of our Nation's history, our growth was strongly influenced by two unique conditions. First, for more than a century and a half two great oceans protected us from the violent struggles of the Old World. Although in recent years we became engaged in two global wars, our relative isolation gave us months in which to assemble, train and equip our forces deliberately and unmolested. Second, from the very beginning, our Nation's rapid expansion was encouraged by commercial and financial assistance from the nations of Europe. These countries provided us with valuable skills and the capital needed to accelerate the development of our resources, industries and commerce.

These conditions have radically changed. America emerged from World War II as the mightiest nation in a free world that, in the main, was exhausted and crippled. Soon thereafter we came to realize that new weapons of great power, speed and range had markedly reduced the value of our ocean shield. Our homeland, in any future major war, would be a prime target, and our warning time against surprise attack would be minutes, not months. Our security cannot now be achieved by methods and a level of effort believed adequate only a few years ago.

In a world, moreover, in which an aggressive ideology drives ceaselessly to destroy human freedom, it is now the United States to which aspiring free peoples, particularly in underdeveloped areas, must look as America once did to others, for the technical knowledge and financial assistance needed to help them strengthen their economies and protect their independence.

Such changes as these gave rise to our Mutual Security Program, one of the most necessary and successful enterprises America has undertaken throughout her history. Started more than a decade ago, the program helped to save Greece, forestalled economic collapse in Turkey and Western Europe, supported the countries of the SEATO alliance, sustained the strength and independence of South Korea and the Republic of China, and made real progress, in underdeveloped nations on five continents, in combatting disease, poverty and suffering, and thus has strengthened the resistance of those areas to Communist penetration, propaganda subversion. Clear it is that the Mutual Security Program provides the surest path by which America can lead to and sustain a durable peace with justice.

Such a program serves the Nation at large rather than any particular locality, section or group. Only with difficulty, therefore, can its great rewards be measured by individual communities and citizens. It inevitably follows that in the annual contests over the public use of tax revenues, there is a tendency to bypass the needs of this vital security program in favor of domestic projects that, urged by special groups, achieve a measure of support far greater than their over-all value to the nation warrants. Understandable this tendency is, but I deem it a great disservice to America to indulge it. The security of our country obviously demands that our Mutual Security Program be carried forward at an adequate level.

I have asked new appropriations of $4.175 billions for this program for the 1961 fiscal year. Nearly half of this -- a sum one-twentieth of our own defense budget -- is to assist the military forces of the free world, comprising 5 million soldiers, 2,200 combatant ships, and 30,000 aircraft. I need not remind the Congress of the low cost at which this force for freedom is sustained as compared to the cost of an aircraft carrier, a squadron of jet bombers, or an Army or Marine Corps division in our own defense structure.

Of the other parts of the program, one-third is for economic assistance required to help sustain these large forces abroad. The remainder consists of loans, technical assistance and grants to help underdeveloped nations. These are the funds that spell the difference between hopeless stagnation and progress for hundreds of millions of people who, with us, believe in freedom.

Congressional approval of these funds for mutual security will profoundly benefit our people. To our allies and to others with whom we discuss the great issues of our times, it will signify that a united America has not wearied in the discharge of its responsibilities, and that we are unshakable in our determination to attain a world order in which men are free to pursue their goals in peace. And I emphasize once again that, as we strive to build the kind of world in which America believes, our adversaries are not all included in the single word "Communism". They are distress and privation as well, and also the desperation of peoples when they realize that, lacking outside help, they struggle in vain to better their lives. Widespread chaos and misery cannot provide a world climate in which our free republic can prosper and remain secure. There is for America no higher purpose or greater need than to measure up to her world leadership responsibilities.

I am keenly aware of the contention that, because of an adverse balance of payments, and because of certain failures in administration, America should curtail these mutual security efforts. We must, and do, strive for greater efficiency. Likewise, we do have a problem with balance of payments but the way to meet this is by positive actions which expand exports. Neither difficulty can be met by withdrawing from our responsibilities for world leadership and from partnership in the protection of freedom. We need -- in our own interests -- greater human progress and economic growth throughout the world. We cannot achieve these by an assault either on mutual security or on liberal trade policies.

I congratulate the Congress for its actions thus far on the funds for mutual security in the authorizing legislation, and I reaffirm the imperative necessity of providing the appropriations that the authorization would allow.

AGRICULTURE

Next is agriculture, a subject on which I have commented repeatedly to the Congress.

In no domestic area do we have a more obvious need for corrective action. We cannot wonder that the patience of our farmers wears thin. By force of law the Government's surplus holdings, especially of wheat, continually increase. These overhang the market, depress prices, and impose an ever more onerous burden upon all citizens, our farmers particularly. I have offered many recommendations for attacking the problem through bipartisan action. Action there has been on occasion but, in respect to wheat especially, far less than needed or of a kind that would make our farmers' present troubles grow worse.

In an effort to break the legislative stalemate I recently advised the Congress that, within broad guidelines which I suggested, I would approve any constructive farm bill that the Congress might enact. There is as yet no agreement on the part of the two Houses of Congress on a constructive approach. (For text of President's farm message, see Weekly Report p. 234)

Meanwhile farmers grow more concerned about their future, and our people generally become increasingly unhappy as their Government expends a thousand of their tax dollars every minute on the self-defeating wheat program. Lately I have noted, with deep concern, a growing disposition in certain Congressional quarters to favor proposals long ago rejected as unworkable, and which would obviously go beyond even the very broad limits I outlined almost three months ago.

I regret also the continuing tendency to rely, in agriculture, upon federal controls, which inevitably create interference with the lives of our farm people. I still believe that America's farmers prefer, as certainly I do, the development of legislation which will promote progress for them toward economic equality and permit them the maximum freedom.

Surely it is time, in the interest of all Americans, for the Congress to face up to the admittedly difficult problems of agriculture. It is constructive results that farmers want and need. Indeed, I believe that all America is looking for this kind of action before this session adjourns.

Also badly needed is extension of the Sugar Act, soon to expire. At stake are an assured and stable supply of sugar for our people at reasonable prices and removal of the uncertainties now facing this industry. A four-year extension of the present program, modified to give the President authority to adjust quotas in order to assure America of an adequate sugar supply, is needed to give farmers and processors the time to plan. Appropriate recommendations are before the Congress. The interests of America require that legislation be enacted before the Congress adjourns.

JUDGESHIPS

I have repeatedly stated the need for legislation in other important areas. Some of these measures are of a kind that, at the expense of responsible government, tend to be shunted aside in an election year.

First is the urgent need of federal courts for enough judges to hear the greatly increased number of cases being filed each year. Regardless of expediency, justice calls for prompt action.

The Judicial Conference of the United States has recommended the creation of approximately 40 new judgships. This recommendation is supported by the Administration and by virtually every important professional organization concerned with the administration of the courts.

We who advocate equal justice under law have a duty to make it effective. In certain districts injured people must wait over four years for justice or compromise their rights; innocent people who are defrauded are made a laughingstock because the delay in the courts deprives them of an effective remedy; justice is denied the weak because they cannot finance the delay necessary to be heard. Further neglect of this need is heartless. For all our people, I most earnestly urge swift action on the pending measure to increase the number of judgeships.

BOND INTEREST RATES

Next I refer to my request of last June to remove the statutory prohibition against the Treasury's paying more than 4-1/4 percent interest on Treasury bonds which are due more than five years after issuance.

The American people have a great deal at stake in this legislation, for failure to remove this interest-rate restriction can have many serious consequences, including the forcing of a new upturn in living costs. The Treasury, under this restriction, continually faces the prospect of having to manage the Government's $290 billion debt in ways that would unavoidably increase the upward pressures on prices and on the interest rate for the consumer credit so important to millions of our citizens. Again, I stress the need for prompt removal of this harmful restriction.

HIGHWAYS, POSTAL RATES

We also owe it to America to provide adequate new revenues for the Highway Trust Fund (as my proposal for a gasoline tax increase would do), so that we may keep our very important highway program on schedule; and fiscal responsibility dictates that we not fail to raise postal rates and thus end the heavy drain on general revenues for postal services which Congress has said by law should be self-sustaining. Our other revenue proposals -- notably, extension of certain excise taxes and an added tax on aviation fuel -- also need to be approved.

IMMIGRATION

Additionally, as I recently emphasized by special message to the Congress, we have compelling reasons to liberalize our immigration law during the course of this session. I remind the Congress, also, that this is World Refugee Year. Our country was one of those sponsoring this move in the United Nations. In harmony with the spirit of this resolution, and in keeping with America's tradition of leadership in humanitarian causes, we should press forward, in this session, with the refugee legislation I have recommended to the Congress.

EXECUTIVE NEEDS

I add two proposals of special importance to future Presidents of the United States. First is provision of Presidential office space. The Congress has met its own space requirements and those of the Supreme Court. Requirements for modern office facilities for the President, his staff and the news media assigned to the White House are no less necessary and urgent. Second, the need to carry forward Presidential powers to reorganize the Executive Branch is acute, in the interests of efficiency and economy in this huge government. Both of these authorizations are clearly essential. I again urge their approval before this session adjourns.

SCHOOLS, DEPRESSED AREAS

I refer now to a number of programs of intense interest to millions of our people -- programs intended to initiate or enlarge benefits for various groups of sections of the Nation. Such projects require objective analysis and a nicety of decision so that on the one hand there will be no neglect of essential federal responsibility and on the other hand no surrender to the election-year temptation to overspend and overreach. Responsibility respecting these will do credit to both parties but, more important, will benefit our people.

A comparison of 1952 and 1961 federal expenditures shows the pace of the federal advance in matters of this kind. Likewise it discloses the pressing need for prudence both as regards the level of these expenditures and the extent of federal involvement in the problems of individual citizens. For labor, welfare and veterans programs, including payments from trust funds, cash payments to individuals were $11.7 billion in 1952. The comparable figure in the 1961 budget is $26.4 billion. Thus there has been a 125 percent increase in these programs during a period in which the population increased by 16 percent. This growth in payments far exceeds any increases required to match the 12 percent rise in living costs during this period.

Among such matters still pending I would mention, first, school construction legislation. Long ago the Administration asked Congress to approve a sound program to help colleges and universities and elementary and secondary schools meet their pressing construction needs. I have stressed that any such federal assistance should be provided only to meet genuine need, and that it must preserve for the states, local communities and educational institutions their traditional responsibilities for education. The Administration's debt service plan for elementary and secondary schools, and its comparable plan for institutions of higher learning, both before the Congress for over a year, conform to these standards.

By these programs we would help to construct 75,000 additional elementary and secondary classrooms at a federal cost, over the next 20 to 30 years, of $2.2 billion, and at a federal cost of $500 million we would help build higher education facilities costing in the aggregate some $2 billion. The financing for the initiation of these programs is included in my 1961 budget.

It will be deeply disappointing if the Congress should fail to authorize such programs, and no less disappointing if, instead, programs that basically conflict with these standards should be passed.

Area redevelopment legislation also needs priority attention. I have long urged legislation authorizing loans and technical assistance to help areas afflicted with long-term, substantial unemployment resulting from technological changes. The purpose is to diversify these economies and thereby create new sources of private employment. With important local efforts to provide new jobs already underway, federal help must be of a kind that strengthens and supplements rather than displaces or discourages those efforts.

I think it is basic that we reject the various schemes that would perpetuate insecurity by making distressed areas dependent upon the uncertainties of continued federal subsidies, or that would pour federal dollars into areas where distress has been temporary and which are competent to meet their problems themselves. Moreover, it will injure, not help the chronically affected areas if funds and loan advantages are indiscriminately broadcast to other areas that do not urgently require such assistance.

The only way this difficult problem can be sensibly solved is through healthy government-community cooperation that creates self-sustaining local economies. It cannot be solved by a dispiriting and misplaced benevolence on the part of the distant central government. The people who need this help are hopefully looking for truly constructive action this session. For this purpose I have recommended a federal program amounting to $53 million, to be expanded for loans and technical assistance.

HEALTH BENEFITS FOR AGED

The Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare will present this week a new program which will enable older people truly in need of help to meet the calamity of catastrophic illness. This program will take full advantage of, and support, the progress that has been made by private effort; it will recognize the traditional federal-state relations in various fields of assistance; and additionally, it will not do violence to the private relationships that must continue to characterize the rendering of health care services.

Behind this program is a meticulous and thoughtful weighing of many alternatives. I believe the Congress will find this proposal of great value to our people most in need of medical protection in their later years. I urge this program in place of compulsory schemes which over a period of years would blight America's unexcelled medical standards and leave unaided large numbers of citizens we are striving to help.

MINIMUM WAGE

The Fair Labor Standards Act likewise needs attention before these next 60 days elapse.

For several years I have urged expansion of coverage under this Act to include approximately three million additional wage earners. This is the most urgently needed change in this law, and I hope that the Congress will not fail to provide it.

The Secretary of Labor recently presented the Congress with information indicating that the minimum wage could be increased moderately without disruptive effects upon the economy. On the other hand we should, as responsible officials, stand firmly against an excessive increase which could cause unemployment and severe repercussions in many industries and areas of our country. It is of great importance to the well-being of the American people that we govern our actions in this area by economic facts rather than by political or social prejudice.

CONSERVATION

Nor, I believe, should we close this session without enacting various long-pending measures, mostly in the field of conservation -- each of them important to all our people, but particularly to our citizens out West.

Among these measures I refer as examples to preservation of our priceless seashore areas, establishment of the Arctic Wildlife Range, permission to western communities to expand into public land areas, research assistance to the coal industry, and the Fryingpan-Arkansas and San Luis projects. Approval of these and similar pending bills will help to round out the program of natural resources development -- now at a record level -- which I presented last January in my Budget Message. We also need a solution of the Indian heirship problem and to give the people of Guam and the Virgin Islands a voice in the Congress.

SPENDING CURBS

As a general but most important consideration, I point again to the need of restraint in new authorizations for federal spending. Our federal accounts should balance with enough left over for a reasonable payment on the public debt, on which we are already paying for interest alone more than $9 billion per year. Proposals now before Congressional committees would, if approved, raise our annual spending by tens of billions of dollars in 1961 and would disrupt federal budgets over the next five years by many scores of billions.

For America's sake, we must resist the temptation, this year or any year, to overspend the taxpayer's hard-earned dollars and over-centralize responsibilities in the Federal Government. If we fail in this, we will weaken our hope of ever controlling federal extravagance and will indefinitely postpone debt retirement and tax relief. At the same time we will debase our currency, invite the resurgence of inflationary forces, undermine local and state responsibility, and thus erode away America's strength at home and in the world. We should avoid preemption of state and local functions and take genuine national need rather than glittering desirability as our guide in federal expenditures.

Most taxpayers, I believe are becoming more and more aware of the results of laws that, though sometimes carrying a surface appeal, far too often add unjustifiably to the tax burdens of the individual.

Finally, I repeat my hope that in the brief span remaining before adjournment the Executive Branch and the 86th Congress can work constructively together in the interest of America and avoid schism and stalemate. The measures I have mentioned, and many others also calling for action this session, must go forward if we are to keep faith with our countrymen. Let us remember, as Congressional deliberations proceed, that both the nation and the world are looking on.

With sound progress as our object, we can accomplish much despite the shortness of time left in this session. Working together responsibly, we shall surely make America a stronger and better nation; and, so working, we shall brighten the cause of freedom and peace everywhere on earth.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

EXPORT EXPANSION

Following is the complete text of President Eisenhower's March 17 special message to Congress on a program for expanding U.S. export trade:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

Because increased exports are important to the United States at this time, the Administration has developed a program to promote the growth of our export trade. While most of the public steps to be taken with this end in view can be accomplished under existing legislative authority, the cooperation and support of the Congress are vital to the success of this program.

Expanded exports can add substantially to the millions of jobs already generated for our people by export trade. At the same time, our export surplus contributed significantly to our capacity to sustain our expenditures abroad for investment, private travel, maintenance of United States military forces and programs of foreign economic cooperation. To support these essential activities, which are reflected in our international balance of payments, we must, as I pointed out in my State of the Union Message promote a rising volume of exports and world trade.

Unlike the sellers' markets of early postwar years when productive capacity abroad was limited, world markets have recently become highly competitive. To expand exports in these circumstances demands a more vigorous effort by both Government and business to improve our capacity for international competition.

Through the trade agreements program we shall continue to work with other countries toward the removal of unnecessary obstacles to international trade and payments. The discriminatory restrictions that other countries imposed at a time when they had serious balance-of-payments difficulties have been especially burdensome to our exports. Economic improvement in many countries has removed the justification for such barriers, and with the assistance of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and the International Monetary Fund, much has been accomplished in eliminating those restrictions. We shall continue to seek the elimination of the discriminatory restrictions that still remain; we shall also continue to seek the general reduction of quantitative controls.

To assist our exporters to meet current international competition in export financing arrangements, the Export-Import Bank will inaugurate a new program of guarantees of noncommercial risks for short-term export credits. The Bank will also expand and improve its existing credit facilities for medium-term export transactions. These steps, which can be taken under existing statutory authority, should improve the ability of our exporters to compete in world markets. These arrangements will be designed and administered to encourage full participation of commercial banks and other private sources of credit and guarantees.

To help our exporters in the development of their foreign sales, we should improve the numerous Government services now available to business firms and especially useful to our smaller producers. These services have been available all along, but we must infuse them with a new purpose and strenthen them with additional resources. Accordingly, I have directed comprehensive steps

- to strengthen the trade promotion services of the Department of Commerce, including its field offices located throughout the United States,
- to expand and give higher priority to the commercial activities of the Foreign Service,
- to expand the agricultural trade promotion activities of the Department of Agriculture,
- to place greater emphasis on the prompt reporting of information useful to American exporters,
- to establish new overseas trade centers,
- to make fuller use of international trade fairs, trade missions, and other promotional means to stimulate the interest of foreign buyers in United States products while continuing to emphasize the basic objectives of the Special Program for International Understanding, and
- to emphasize the promotion of tourist travel to the United States.

The details of this program will be presented during the Congressional hearings soon to be held on the expansion of United States trade and in connection with a forthcoming request for the supplemental appropriations necessary for rapid progress in the export promotion program. Government promotion, however, can be effective only to the extent that it stimulates and encourages private business efforts to expand sales abroad. Government can help enlarge export opportunities, but it is American business that must supply and sell the goods that world markets demand.

To this end I have asked the Secretary of Commerce in cooperation with other department heads to enlist the efforts of the business community. Consultations have already been held in connection with the preparation of this program. In addition, a group of business leaders will be asked to organize an export drive by business, to enlist the active support of existing national and local business groups, to discover the sectors in which better results can be obtained, to assist and encourage businessmen newly entering the export field, to strengthen contacts with business groups abroad, and to develop an organization structure adequate to these purposes.

The individual steps in this export program are modest ones. Their cumulative effect, however, will be substantial if American enterprise will make the necessary effort. With the support of the Congress, this Government can both facilitate and give continued impetus to the expansion of our exports as free world economic progress continues to enlarge the potential for international trade. The rising tide of productivity and prosperity in many nations creates a timely opportunity for mutual benefits from expanding world trade. By pursuing this opportunity, we can promote vigorous economic growth both at home and abroad.

SPACE LEGISLATION

President Eisenhower Jan. 14 sent the following special message to Congress recommending amendments to the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I recommend that the Congress enact certain amendments to the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958 to clarify management responsibilities and to streamline organizational arrangements concerning the national program of space exploration.

Prior to establishment of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Department of Defense has been responsible for all of the Nation's space activities, including those of a non-military nature such as the Vanguard satellite project designed for United States participation in the scientific activities of the International Geophysical Year. When the new agency came into existence, with the duty of carrying out a program of space exploration, it became necessary to transfer the non-military projects, with their supporting facilities and personnel, to the new agency from the Department of Defense. The act empowered the President to make such transfers. I exercised this authority on Oct. 1, 1958 when I transferred to NASA responsibility for Project Vanguard and certain other space-related projects previously under the direction of the Department of Defense. I exercised it for the second time on Dec. 3, 1958 when I directed the transfer to NASA of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory at Pasadena, Calif. And today I am transmitting a report advising the Congress of my intention to transfer to NASA the Development Operations Division of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency. The authority granted to the President has thus been used to center in NASA direction of all of the Nation's non-military space activities, and to provide NASA with the facilities and personnel needed to carry out this task.

The act, however, contains a number of provisions which tend to obscure the responsibility of NASA for planning and directing a national program of space exploration and peaceful space activity. For example, there is inherent in it the concept -- which I believe to be incorrect -- of a single "comprehensive program" of space activities embracing both civilian and military activities, and it implies that a multiplicity of unnamed agencies might have responsibility for portions of such a program.

In an effort to deal with these problems, the act established a scheme of organization of considerable complexity. First, Section 201 (e) of the act imposes upon the President an unusual degree of personal responsibility for developing this "comprehensive" space program and of surveying its operations in detail. Second, the act established the National Aeronautics and Space Council and gave it the sole function of advising the President with respect to the performance of his statutory duties. Third, it made provision for a Civilian-Military Liaison Committee, which was given no other duty than providing a channel of advice and consultation between NASA and the Department of Defense.

I have become convinced by the experience of the 15 months since NASA was established that the act needs to be amended so as to place responsibility directly and unequivocally in one agency, NASA, for planning and managing a national program of non-military space activities. This requires, first of all, elimination of those provisions which reflect the concept of a single program embracing military as well as non-military space activities. In actual practice, a single civil-military program does not exist and is in fact unattainable; and the statutory concept of such a program has caused confusion. The military utilization of space, and the research and development effort directed toward that end, are integral parts of the total defense program of the United States. Space projects in the Department of Defense are undertaken only to meet military requirements. The Department of Defense has ample authority outside the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958 to conduct research and development work on space-related weapons systems and to utilize space for defense purposes; and nothing in the act should derogate from that authority.

I am also convinced that it is no longer desirable to retain in the act those provisions which impose duties of planning and detailed surveying upon the President. We have come to the end of a transitional period during which responsibilities for a broad range of activities were being shifted to NASA from the Department of Defense and NASA's capabilities for discharging those responsibilities were being developed. From now on it should be made clear that NASA, like the Department of Defense in the military field, is responsible in the first instance for the formulation and execution of its own program, subject, of course, to the authority and direction of the President.

With the repeal of the statutory enumeration of Presidential duties, the National Aeronautics and Space Council should be abolished, since its only function is to advise the President in the performance of those duties. The repeal would not, however, affect another provision of the act which provides that the Administrator of NASA and the Secretary of Defense may refer to the President for decision those matters concerning their respective areas of responsibility on which they are unable to reach agreement. This provision should be retained in the law.

The Civilian-Military Liaison Committee should also be eliminated. The statute should go no further than requiring that NASA and the Department of Defense advise, consult, and keep each other fully informed with respect to space activities within their respective jurisdictions; it should not prescribe the specific means of doing so.

Finally, the act should contain safeguards against undesirable duplication by NASA and the Department of Defense in developing the major tools of space exploration. Although a civilian space exploration program is clearly distinguishable from the military utilization of space for defense purposes, both NASA and the Department of Defense may have similar or identical requirements for launch vehicles used to propel and guide spacecraft into orbit about the earth or toward other celestial bodies. I propose that the act be amended to provide that the President shall assign responsibility for the development of each new launch vehicle, regardless of its intended use, to either NASA or the Department of Defense. Responsibility for development of the new vehicle should in no way determine responsibility for its use in space activities.

Amended as I have recommended, the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958 would become the organic act of an independent civilian agency having a well defined statutory responsibility for which it is answerable to both the President and to Congress.

I have requested the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to transmit to the Congress draft legislation incorporating the foregoing recommendations, and I urge that they be enacted by the Congress at the earliest possible date.

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

AUGUST SESSION

Following is the complete text of President Eisenhower's Aug. 8 message to Congress seeking enactment of his legislative program:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

I welcome the return of the Congress. There is much important legislative work still pending that cannot await the selection and assembly of a new Congress and a new Administration. The Executive and Legislative Branches must act together on these pressing needs these next few weeks. I shall do my part. I am sure that the Congress will be similarly disposed.

WORLD SITUATION

First, the world situation, with its great significance to us. Fundamentally, it is as it was. The free world still faces a communist imperialism fixed upon conquest of all the world. Vigilance, therefore, must still be our watchword. Continuing strength, military, economic, spiritual, must remain our reliance. Our basic objective -- to secure a permanent peace -- is yet to be won. Our programs have long been keyed to this situation. They must continue.

During the Congressional recess events have dramatized tensions that still plague the world. We have seen an intensification of Communist truculence. Indeed, the Soviet dictator has talked loosely and irresponsibly about a possible missile attack on the United States. An American aircraft has been attacked over international waters. Our resolution requesting an investigation of this matter has been vetoed by the Soviets in the United Nations Security Council. Surviving crew members are still being held prisoner. The Soviet Delegation has walked out of the Geneva disarmament negotiations.

The Communists continue to exploit situations of unrest, flagrantly striving to turn to their ends the struggles and hopes of peoples for a better world. These Communist efforts have recently reached new extremes in Central Africa.

All of us know about Cuba.

As a result of continuous appraisal of changing Communist tactics and attitudes, I have ordered the military services to take certain practical measures affecting the readiness and posture of our military commands. These include the deployment of additional aircraft carriers to the Sixth and Seventh Fleets. A number of B-57 medium bombers and their accompanying tankers, which had been scheduled to be phased out of our forces, will be retained in service for the time being; and the tempo of operation of the Strategic Air Command will be increased and its deployment further dispersed. The readiness of our ground forces will be further improved by expanding the number and scope of strategic field and airborne exercises.

I have also directed expansion of certain long-range programs. The Strategic Air Command capability to conduct a continuous airborne alert will be further strengthened. More funds will be applied to the modernization of the Army combat equipment and to military airlift. Additional effort will be devoted to the development of the B-70 and the reconnaissance satellite SAMOS.

During the Congressional recess we have made extraordinary progress in testing one of America's most important weapons systems -- the Polaris Ballistic Missile Submarine. It is with great satisfaction that I report to the Congress that the first test firings of the Polaris missile from the submerged nuclear submarine "George Washington" had rifle shot accuracy at great ranges. Never in my long military career has a weapon system of such complexity been brought from its original conception to the operational stage with such sureness and speed -- an achievement that in its entirety has taken less than five years.

The time is now right to increase the scope of the Polaris program and five instead of three more submarines have been started this fiscal year. Furthermore, I have directed the development of a much longer range version of the Polaris missile, which will give America a weapon of even greater versatility, power and invulnerability.

The Defense Department will carry out these defense measures with its available resources insofar as possible. Measures pertaining to weapons systems programs will be carried out by utilizing appropriations already made in this session. Total resources are adequate, although a modest increase in military personnel and in operation and maintenance funds may prove to be necessary to carry out the readiness measures. If such an increase should be required, I shall promptly request the necessary funds.

Incidentally, provision will have to be made after the first of the year to fund the civilian pay increases imposed by Congress a few weeks ago. These will add permanently to our defense costs some $200 million a year.

Once again I assure the Congress that this Nation's military power is second to none and will be kept that way. Our long range strategic bombers and air to ground missiles, our intermediate and long range ballistic missiles, our Polaris submarines, our attack carriers, the tactical air units overseas, the air defense forces, and the atomic and conventional firepower of our ground forces world wide are indeed a retaliatory and defensive force unmatched anywhere.

MUTUAL SECURITY

So much for administrative actions which I have recently taken. Congressional actions, too, are required.

Our national security needs encompass more than excellence and strength in our own military establishment. They include measures to build free world strength everywhere. These require, and I therefore request, appropriations of the full amount authorized by the Congress for the Mutual Security Program. At this point in the legislative process, these appropriations have been cut by well over a half billion dollars. The Nation's security and our inescapable interest in a stable world require that these amounts be restored.

In addition, I request a $100 million increase in the authorization and appropriation for the Mutual Security Contingency Fund. This increase is needed to keep America poised for sudden developments such as those in the Congo where a United States airlift and other efforts were needed suddenly and critically. Happily, in this instance, we were able to respond in a matter of hours. We must maintain ourselves in a position to give rapid backing to the efforts of the United Nations in this troubled region.

At my direction, two other matters will be presented to Congress, their purpose being to promote free world stability by stimulating the hopes, morale and efforts of our friends everywhere. These programs are:

First, an authorization in the magnitude of $600 million to help our Latin American neighbors accelerate their efforts to strengthen the social and economic structure of their nations and improve the status of their individual citizens. This program, which should include further assistance for the rehabilitation of devastated Chile, will promote the dynamism and effectiveness of all our efforts in this hemisphere. I urgently request enactment of this authorization prior to the Economic Conference of the American Republics, which convenes at Bogota on Sept. 5, so that discussions leading to the development of detailed plans may be initiated there.

Second, a proposal to be presented in September before the General Assembly of the United Nations, whereby we and other fortunate nations can, together, make greater use of our combined agricultural abundance to help feed the hungry of the world. The United Nations provides a multilateral forum admirably suited to initiate consideration of this effort.

I consider it important that Congress approve a Resolution endorsing such a program before the United Nations Assembly convenes.

DOMESTIC REQUESTS

Turning to domestic problems, clearly we face a legislative log jam, the possibility of which I suggested, by special message, on the third of May.

Only one major measure -- civil rights -- had then been passed, and this had two major deletions which I hope will now be restored in keeping with the bipartisan support evidenced for these items last month.

Legislating time is now short, and so far in this session only six of the twenty-seven measures I cited last May as required by the Nation's interests have been enacted into law. Because those that fail of enactment before adjournment will go begging for months to come, I urge the Congress to attend to them now. In addition to those already mentioned, I cite these:

- federal assistance in the construction of facilities for colleges, universities and elementary and secondary schools;
- assistance to older people to meet serious illnesses;
- expansion of coverage of the Fair Labor Standards Act;
- a moderate upward adjustment of the minimum wage;
- constructive measures to meet existing farm problems;
- a sound area assistance program directed specifically to the areas in need;
- the authorizing of 40 new judgeships to expedite the rendering of justice;
- proper financing to avoid delays in our Interstate Highway Program;
- an increase in the aviation fuel tax to facilitate proper financing of our Airways Modernization Program;
- removal of the interest rate limitation on long-term Treasury bonds;
- a postal rate increase to avoid saddling the next administration and taxpayers generally, wholly unjustifiably, with a postal deficit nearing a billion dollars a year;
- liberalization of our immigration laws;
- continuation of the long-established authority for the President to reorganize the Executive Branch;
- and a grouping of measures generally in the conservation field.

Also still needed and long ago recommended are Senate ratification of the important Antarctica Treaty, amendments to speed our space exploration efforts, and a restoration of the traditional relationship between the active duty and the retired pay of our military personnel.

All of these items are at least as urgently needed for America as when first recommended. So I urge that we stay on the job until it is done.

Certainly we cannot adjourn the public interest.

I have a special comment on two of these matters.

First, agriculture. I reiterate the theme of my January twenty-ninth and May third messages on this subject. The well-being of our farm people still demands that we act with good sense on their pressing problems, notably wheat. The public will have every right to register its serious protest should the Congress adjourn without responsible action in this area.

The recent history of this problem has been deadlock. The Congress has refused to accept my recommendations and insisted upon unrealistic programs which, of course, I have rejected.

Last January I made one further attempt to resolve this issue. I urged Congress simply to work its will, provided only that the end result fitted within broad guidelines assuring a truly beneficial result for the farmer and the Nation. My own preferred program, leading to greater freedom for the farmer, is widely known. I repeat, however, what I have said many times -- if a different approach is desired, and kept within the guidelines, I will unhesitatingly approve it.

Our farmers need constructive action and for years have been entitled to it. They know, as does all America, that this Administration has been unable substantially to alter the existing type of wheat program because of lack of Congressional cooperation. It has been a program attuned to calamity -- war, depression or drought -- but which in these years of peace and great productivity has resulted in staggering surpluses which overhang the market, depress prices, and threaten the farmer's future. The Congress should promptly provide the constructive remedies for agriculture so long and so urgently needed.

For five years in a row I have recommended area assistance legislation. Regrettably I had no choice but to veto the legislation the Congress did pass this session. It would have frittered the taxpayers' money away in areas where it was not needed and on programs that would not have benefited those truly in need of help.

A new area assistance bill, with Administration backing, was introduced immediately after my veto. It would channel more help directly into stricken areas than any previous measure proposed. Failure to act will deny this help for months to come. Human distress demands action now. If later we find there should be changes either in the dollar amounts or the methods used, experience will dictate the kind of adjustments to be made.

BUDGET SURPLUS

Last January I estimated that, if the Congress would adhere to my appropriation and revenue recommendations, we could look forward to a budgetary surplus of $4 billion. Since then, however, the spending programs enacted and pending -- coupled with the failure of Congress to enact proposed new revenue measures -- threaten to consume the entire expected surplus.

This situation relates very importantly to your forthcoming deliberations because of the need of avoiding further deficit spending and of making, in years of prosperity, savings to be applied either to debt reduction or to tax reform.

In meeting this need I shall not abdicate my responsibility to use the Executive power to help keep the Nation's economy strong and sound while we carry forward our urgent work at home and in the world.

This means that I shall not be a party to reckless spending schemes which would increase the burden of debt of our grandchildren, by resuming, in prosperous times, the practice of deficit financing. I shall not fail to resist inflationary pressures by whatever means are available to me.

This truth we must take to heart: in good times, we must at the very least pay our way. This is the fundamental condition for a dependable future for our working men and women, for management, for consumers, and for the Government. If we will but handle responsibly the taxpayers' money, as I am firmly determined that we shall, private and public action can continue to move confidently ahead.

This simply means that we must adhere to necessary programs and sensible priorities. I have herein suggested those in which I believe.

If the Congress prefers other priorities at greater national cost, responsibility dictates that it accompany them with the additional taxes to pay the bill.

I recognize the magnitude of the task still before the Congress, and, of course, I am not unaware of the other matters attracting public attention in this year 1960.

But I repeat -- if during the critical months ahead we hold to the standard of national interest, the future will be bright for America -- indeed, for all the free world.

CONGRESS OVERRODE ONE OF 24 VETOES IN 1960

President Eisenhower vetoed 24 bills in 1960, bringing his eight-year total to 181 bills vetoed. Congress in 1960 overrode one of the 24 vetoes. It was only the second time in Mr. Eisenhower's term of office (1953-60) that a veto had been overridden.

The bill passed over the President's veto in 1960 was the federal pay raise bill (HR 9883 -- PL 86-568). The House overrode the veto July 1 by a 345-69 roll-call vote, 69 votes more than the required two-thirds majority; the Senate, also July 1, voted 74-24 to override, eight votes more than the required two-thirds. (See story p. 240; for voting, see charts p. 462, 510)

The earlier bill passed over the President's veto was the 1959 public works appropriations bill (PL 86-254). (1959 Almanac p. 315)

While vetoing 181 measures during his term of office, the President during the same period signed 3,545 public bills and 3,171 private bills, a total of 6,716.

Mr. Eisenhower ranked fourth among U.S. Presidents in the number of bills vetoed, behind Franklin Delano Roosevelt (631 vetoes, nine overridden); Grover Cleveland (584 vetoes, seven overridden); and Harry S. Truman (250 vetoes, 12 overridden). (For vetoes by other Presidents, see 1959 Almanac p. 661)

The year-by-year record of Eisenhower vetoes:

Year	Regular Vetoes	Pocket Vetoes	Total
1953	4	6	10
1954	17	25	42
1955	3	8	11
1956	9	14	23
1957	3	9	12
1958	15	24	39
1959	10	10	20
1960	13	11	24
	74	107	181

The President vetoed 13 public and 11 private bills in 1960. The public bills were:

HR 3610 -- Sewage plant grants. Vetoed Feb. 23. House Feb. 25 failed to override, 249-157. (See story p. 250)

HR 7947 -- To permit lending institutions required to buy common stock in the Federal National Mortgage Assn. at par value to deduct as a business expense the difference between par value and the lower free market price. The President said he favored the bill except that it was retroactive. HR 7947 was introduced by Rep. Frank Ikard (D Texas) June 24, 1959, passed by the House Sept. 9, 1959, passed with amendments by the Senate March 28, 1960. The conference report was agreed to May 4 by the Senate and May 5 by the House and the President vetoed the bill May 14. (For later action, see p. 365.)

S 722 -- Area Redevelopment Act. Vetoed May 13. Senate May 24 failed to override, 45-39. (See story p. 292)

HR 6482 -- To give an employer who purchased a business credit for unemployment taxes paid by his predecessor as owner, even if the latter did not ordinarily qualify as an "employer" under federal law. The President said he favored correcting this technicality but not retroactively to 1951. HR 6482 was introduced April 16, 1959 by Rep. James B. Utt (R Calif.), passed by the House Sept. 9, 1959, passed with amendments by the Senate May 4, 1960 and cleared by the House May 19. The President vetoed the bill June 3.

HR 6779 -- To permit unlimited income tax deductions for charitable contributions if the sum of contributions and income tax for two consecutive years exceeded 90 percent of taxable income for the two years. The President said the measure would apply for taxable years 1957-68, and he opposed the retroactivity provision. HR 6779 was introduced April 29, 1959 by the late Rep. Richard M. Simpson (R Pa. 1937-60), passed Aug. 25, 1959 by the House and May 5, 1960 by the Senate, cleared by the House May 19 and vetoed June 3.

HR 7577 -- To relieve U.S. Government drivers of personal liability in accident cases. The President said he opposed an amendment requiring the plaintiff's consent before the U.S., instead of the driver, in effect became liable. HR 7577 was introduced June 4, 1959 by Rep. Emanuel Celler (D N.Y.), passed by the House July 6, 1959, passed by the Senate June 2, 1960, cleared by the House June 6 and vetoed June 11.

HR 9883 -- Federal pay raise. (See story p. 240)

S 1508 -- To give the State of Alaska and the Interstate Commerce Commission regulatory power over the federally owned Alaska Railroad. The President said the Chief Executive was responsible for the railroad and should not be regulated by a state or regulatory agency. S 1508 was introduced March 23, 1959 by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D Wash.), passed by the Senate Jan. 26, 1960 and by the House June 24, and pocket vetoed July 6.

S 19 -- To require the same wage scale at the Portsmouth, N.H., Naval Shipyard as paid at the Boston shipyard. The President said the bill violated the principle of paying the local prevailing wage. S 19 was introduced Jan. 9, 1959 by Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R Maine), passed by the Senate May 26, 1959 and by the House June 29, 1960 and pocket vetoed July 12. In the 85th Congress, the President vetoed a similar bill sponsored by Mrs. Smith. (1958 Almanac p. 239)

Attempts to Override

From 1953-60 Congress made the following attempts to override Eisenhower vetoes. Where the required two-thirds vote was obtained in either chamber, it is marked by an asterisk (*).

Bill	Date of Veto	House Vote to Override	Senate Vote to Override
Postal pay raise	5/19/55	---	54-39
Farm price supports	4/16/56	202-211	---

Rural electrification	4/27/59	280-146	64-29*
Housing (S 57)	7/7/59	---	55-40
Public works funds (HR 7509)	8/28/59	274-138	---
Housing (S 2539)	9/3/59	---	58-36
Public works funds (HR 9105)	9/9/59	280-121*	72-23*
Sewage plants	2/23/60	249-157	---
Depressed areas	5/13/60	---	45-39
Federal pay raise	6/30/60	345-69*	74-24*

HR 11545 -- To extend for one year, through June 30, 1961, a fixed payment for Bernalillo County, N.M., Indian Hospital. The President said it was time to return to the usual principle that the Government contributed only for persons actually hospitalized. The bill was introduced April 14, 1960 by Rep. Joseph M. Montoya (D N.M.), passed by the House July 1 and the Senate July 2 and pocket vetoed July 14.

HR 8860 -- Lead and zinc subsidies. Pocket vetoed Sept. 2. (See story p. 253)

HR 5054 -- To require that imported articles be marked to indicate country of origin if taken from their original container and repackaged, a proposal the President said would be an unnecessary burden to trade. The bill was introduced Feb. 26, 1959 by Rep. A. Sydney Herlong Jr. (D Fla.), passed by the House Feb. 2, 1960, by the Senate June 27, cleared by the House Aug. 24 and pocket vetoed Sept. 6.

HR 7242 -- To amend Bankruptcy Act provisions concerning priority of liens in bankruptcy. The President said some provisions might give mortgages priority over federal tax liens recorded before the mortgage. HR 7242 was introduced May 19, 1959 by Rep. Richard H. Poff (R Va.), passed by both chambers Aug. 25, 1960 and pocket vetoed Sept. 8.

Private Bill Vetoes

HR 6023 -- To relieve William J. Kaiser of liability to refund the United States money improperly paid him as sickness and unemployment benefits under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act while he was also receiving a pension as a retired member of the New York City fire department. The bill also directed the Railroad Retirement Board to repay Kaiser amounts already refunded by him. The President said the bill would constitute a discriminatory Government gift. HR 6023 was introduced March 24, 1959 by Rep. Paul A. Fino (R N.Y.), passed by the House Sept. 1, 1959 and by the Senate March 28, 1960 and vetoed April 11.

HR 7933 -- To authorize retroactive Veterans Administration death pension benefits of $1,582.89 to Mrs. Virginia Bond. Mrs. Bond's husband died June 29, 1957 and she filed a claim for a pension July 11, 1957 but it was rejected. A second claim, with new evidence of eligibility, was filed May 13, 1959 and granted. HR 7933 authorized $1,582.89 in retroactive payments covering the period between the death of Mrs. Bond's husband and the date of her eligibility for a pension under her successful second claim. Mr. Eisenhower said the law clearly stated that payments retroactive to the date of death were permissible only if the claim was filed within a year of death; and that it was well established that only the date of the successful claim, and not of prior unsuccessful claims, counted in determining eligibility for retroactive benefits. HR 7933 was introduced June 23, 1959 by Rep. Richard H. Poff (R Va.), passed by the House Feb. 2, 1960 and by the Senate March 28, and vetoed April 11.

HR 1456 -- To permit Universal Trades Inc. to appeal a 1955 Renegotiation Board ruling to the U.S. Tax Court, even though law required that such appeals be made within 90 days of the end of the Board proceeding. The President said there was no justification for the firm's failure to appeal within the prescribed 90-day period. HR 1456 was introduced Jan. 7, 1959 by Rep. Dante B. Fascell (D Fla.), passed by the House June 23, 1959 and by the Senate May 5, 1960, and vetoed May 14.

HR 8417 -- To refund to the Grand Lodge of North Dakota, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, $1,155.26 in customs duties assessed on masonic jewels imported from Canada. The President said the reason advanced for granting special legislative relief was that the Bureau of Customs had misinterpreted the law relating to importation, and if this was the case a special bill was not needed since administrative and judicial procedures were available. HR 8417 was introduced July 27, 1959 by Rep. Quentin N. Burdick (D N.D.), passed by the House April 5, 1960, passed by the Senate June 2, 1960, and vetoed June 11.

HR 5150 -- To refund to Our Lady of the Lake Church, Mandeville, La., $1,284.17 in customs duties assessed on carved organ boarding imported from Germany. The President said the record contained no reason for granting legislative relief other than the belief that the law had been misinterpreted. HR 5150 was introduced March 2, 1959 by Rep. Hale Boggs (D La.), passed by the House April 19, 1960, passed by the Senate June 2, 1960 and vetoed June 11, 1960.

HR 1516 -- To permit Juan D. Quintos and others to seek compensation in the court of claims for certain items handed over to the U.S. High Commissioner for the Philippines, for safekeeping, in 1941, and then confiscated by the Japanese on Corregidor. The President said the possibility of a valid claim against the U.S. was very remote and in any case the claimants had had ample time to present a claim before expiration of the statute of limitations. HR 1516 was introduced Jan. 7, 1959 by Rep. Eugene J. Keogh (D N.Y.), passed by the House Sept. 1, 1959, passed by the Senate June 23, 1960 and pocket vetoed July 6, 1960.

HR 6712 -- To provide for the relief of Sam J. Buzzanca in connection with Buzzanca's purchase of real estate at a 1954 federal tax sale. The property was later recovered from Buzzanca in a successful suit by the holder of a first mortgage. The President said the U.S. "cannot and does not attempt to warrant or defend title to property seized and sold under the internal revenue laws". HR 6712 was introduced April 27, 1959 by Rep. George Huddleston Jr. (D Ala.), passed by the House Sept. 8, 1959, passed by the Senate June 23, 1960 and pocket vetoed July 7, 1960.

HR 4546 -- To provide a 20-year civil service retirement credit for Margaret P. Copin, a former Treasury Department employee. The claimant was employed for a total period of 20 years and 29 days, but adjustments for a leave of absence in 1922 left her 22 days short of a 20-year credit, and thus ineligible for an immediate reduced retirement annuity, when disability annuity payments she was receiving were terminated in 1958. She was not eligible for a regular retirement annuity until 1964, when she reached age 62, and the difference in the value of the immediate and age 62 retirement annuities, based on life expectancy, was $4,200. HR 4546 would have credited her with the additional 22 days necessary to receive the immediate annuity. The President said there was "no valid justification" for granting the claim. HR 4546 was introduced Feb. 16, 1959 by Rep. Joel T. Broyhill (R Va.), passed by the House Sept. 8, 1959, passed, amended, by the Senate July 2, 1960. The House agreed to the Senate amendments July 2, 1960 and the President pocket vetoed the bill July 14, 1960.

HR 6767 -- To permit Raymond Baurkot to receive a refund claim of $382.10 for taxes paid on beer destroyed in a 1955 flood. The claim was filed two weeks after the March 2, 1959 deadline. HR 6767 was introduced by Rep. Francis E. Walter (D Pa.) April 28, 1959, passed by the House June 30, 1960 and by the Senate Aug. 25, and pocket vetoed Sept. 8.

HR 2074 -- To direct a refund of $1,096.48 to Eric and Ida Mae Hjerpe for a 1952 income tax payment on certain disability allowances. The President said Congress subsequently had enacted legislation permitting relief for taxes paid on disability payments to persons filing a claim within a three-year period. The President said that the Hjerpes had filed their claim four years after filing the 1952 return and 10½ months after the expiration of the statute of limitations. HR 2074 was introduced by Rep. Charles S. Gubser (R Calif.) Jan. 9, 1959, passed by the House June 30, 1960 and by the Senate Aug.30, and pocket vetoed Sept. 14.

HR 7618 -- To waive the statute of limitations and permit a claim for refund of duty paid by H.P. Lambert Co. Inc. and Southeastern Drilling Corp. on certain non-dutiable oil field equipment imported into the United States. The President said that Lambert Co., the brokerage firm, had failed to produce the necessary documention on duty free importation within the required time limit. HR 7618 was introduced by Rep. Hale Boggs (D La.) June 8, 1959, passed by the House June 30, 1960 and by the Senate Aug. 30, and pocket vetoed Sept. 14.

86th CONGRESS... 2nd SESSION

1960 PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATIONS

Unlike 1959, when President Eisenhower sustained his first defeat on a major nomination (that of Lewis L. Strauss to be Secretary of Commerce), 1960 was a quiet year for nominations. The top appointment was the nomination of Thomas S. Gates Jr. of Pennsylvania to succeed Neil H. McElroy as Secretary of Defense. Gates was confirmed Jan. 26. Previously, he was Secretary of the Navy from 1957 until 1959, when he became Deputy Secretary of Defense. (1959 Almanac p. 664-72).

The following table shows Executive nominations for the 86th Congress:

Total received	46,934	44,541
Total withdrawn	8	21
Total rejected	1	0
Total unconfirmed	553	992
Total confirmed	46,372	43,528

The total of unconfirmed nominations was substantially higher in 1960 than in 1959, with 418 more postmaster nominations and 19 more civilian nominations left unconfirmed. This resulted from Democratic hopes that their Presidential candidate would be elected and thus would have a large number of vacancies to fill early in 1961.

Controversial Nominees

Although there were no major controversies over nominees, there were disputes on the following nominations:

● Durfee -- The Senate April 20, by a 69-15 roll-call vote, confirmed the appointment of James R. Durfee to the U.S. Court of Claims. Durfee, a Republican and lawyer from Wisconsin, had served as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board since April 12, 1956. (For voting see chart p. 488)

Controversy arose when Sen. William Proxmire (D Wis.) charged Durfee lacked the necessary experience and had "flagrantly violated" the CAB code of ethics by accepting invitations from airlines to be their guest at Pinehurst, N.C., in 1956 and on inaugural flights to Mexico City and Rome in 1957.

The SenateJudiciary Committee March 7 approved the nomination (Exec Rept 3), saying Durfee had not violated any code of ethics "as generally interpreted" because the practices criticized by Proxmire were considered "an integral part of" a CAB member's functions.

● Bragdon, Wilson, Lee -- The Senate June 23 confirmed three nominations to major regulatory agency positions. By roll-call votes of 73-18 and 68-19, it consented to the appointments of Maj. Gen. John S. Bragdon (ret.) and Vice Admiral Ralph E. Wilson (scheduled to retire June 30) as members of the Civil Aeronautics Board and Federal Maritime Board, respectively, and by a 64-19 roll-call vote, approved Robert E. Lee's nomination to a second term as a Federal Communications Commissioner. (For voting, see chart p. 508).

The nominations of Bragdon and Wilson were opposed June 22-23 by Sens. Clair Engle (D Calif.), John A. Carroll (D Colo.) and Gale W. McGee (D Wyo.), who said that federal regulatory agencies' top administrative positions were becoming overstaffed with retired officers. Engle called the Federal Aviation Agency, headed by retired Gen. E.R. Quesada, a "little Pentagon". McGee said retired military men lacked "the mental orientation to take on these civilian regulatory agency jobs and run those agencies as they should be run". Carroll said, "The real issue here is supremacy of the civilians over the military."

Barry Goldwater (R Ariz.), supporting the Bragdon and Wilson nominations, defended the right of retired officers to serve in civilian capacities. Norris Cotton (R N.H.) took the same position.

William Proxmire (D Wis.) opposed the renomination of Lee and said that both Lee and the FCC were "bad". Proxmire said that Lee's record was reflected in the FCC's lack of action and standards regulating television and radio industries in the public interest. Everett McKinley Dirksen (R Ill.) said that Lee was a "good, able, aggressive, competent public servant". A supporter of the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R Wis. 1947-57), Lee was first confirmed in1954 by a 58-25 roll-call vote. (1954 Almanac p. 497)

● Murphy -- The nomination of Boston lawyer Timothy J. Murphy as a Democratic member of the Interstate Commerce Commission was never brought to the Senate floor, although the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee June 1 voted 11-5 to recommend confirmation. The dispute over Murphy's appointment arose because under existing law, no more than six of the 11 ICC member positions could be filled by members of one party, and the GOP already had six commissioners. Although Murphy was nominated as a Democrat, and at a Committee hearing May 4 said he was a Democrat, he had seconded the nomination of Vice President Richard M. Nixon at the 1956 GOP convention. In minority views in the June 22 committee report (Exec Rept 9), Engle, McGee, E.L. Bartlett (D Alaska) and Ralph W. Yarborough (D Texas) said the question of affiliation alone should disqualify Murphy.

● Donegan, Sweeney -- Also left unconfirmed were President Eisenhower's May 2 nominations of Thomas J. Donegan of New York and Paul A. Sweeney of Maryland as members of the Federal Power Commission. Donegan, an independent, was a former Federal Bureau of Investigation employee and, when nominated, was a member of the Subversive Activities Control Board. He was to replace William R. Connole, regarded as a protector of consumer interests, whose term expired June 22. Sweeney, a Justice Department attorney and Democrat, was named to an unexpired term. Both nominations died in the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

The President April 27, referring to Connole, said, "I think I can get a better man, and that's all." Donegan aroused Senate feelings by telling a reporter, "I have never had anything to do with utilities outside of paying my own gas bill."

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D Conn.) in a May 4 speech on the Senate floor urged delaying confirmation of Donegan until the President gave a "full explanation of his action." Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D Texas) May 4 said the President should "withdraw the nomination and resubmit Mr. Connole, or someone with...experience in the regulatory field." Sen. A.S. Mike Monroney (D Okla.) May 4 said he thought Donegan and Sweeney both were actually selected by Vice President Nixon and Attorney General William P. Rogers.

● Doerfer-Mills -- The White House March 10 announced the resignation of John C. Doerfer, as of March 14, from the Federal Communications Commission, and the designation of FCC member Frederick W. Ford as his successor as chairman. Doerfer's resignation came within a week of his appearance before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Legislative Oversight Subcommittee for questioning on his association with George B. Storer, owner of several radio and television stations subject to FCC regulation. (See story, Investigations section) In his letter of resignation Doerfer said "the best solution to modern-day Government regulation of complex industry problems demands a thorough knowledge of that industry and actual contact with the members thereof. Nonetheless, to avoid possible embarrassment to you and your Administration, I submit this resignation."

President Eisenhower March 24 submitted the nomination of Edward K. Mills Jr., a New Jersey Republican, to fill Doerfer's unexpired term. Mills May 12 requested (and May 16 was granted) withdrawal of the nomination, stating that he was a life beneficiary of two trust funds, including communications stocks, which he did not control and the trustees would not sell. The President Oct. 14 announced Mills' recess appointment as a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

● Kintner, Bicks -- The Feb. 19 nomination of Earl W. Kintner as chairman of the Federal Trade Commission for a second term was still before the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee at adjournment. Kintner was confirmed June 4, 1959 to an unexpired term on the FTC; if he had been approved for a new term, the FTC would have had a Republican majority from 1960-62.

Proxmire and three Republicans, Sens. Prescott Bush (Conn.), Jacob K. Javits (N.Y.) and Kenneth B. Keating (N.Y.), Aug. 15-16 criticized the failure to confirm Kintner and Robert A. Bicks. Bicks, a Republican from New York, was nominated May 9 as Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division, a position he had been holding de facto. His nomination was before the Judiciary Committee at the session's end. Bush said the only objection he had heard to Bicks "comes from large business organizations who seem to fear he is too much of a trustbuster".

● Other Unconfirmed Nominations -- Three other major nominations neither confirmed nor reported in 1960 involved Arthur Alden Kimball of the District of Columbia, a Republican, named to National Labor Relations Board April 7; Charles H. King of Michigan, a Republican, appointed to the FCC June 27; and Mark Sullivan Jr. of the District of Columbia, a Republican, nominated as a District Commissioner Aug. 8.

Ex-Congressmen

Nominations of one former Senator and one former Representative were confirmed in 1960. They were Arthur V. Watkins (ex-Sen. R Utah 1946-59), Chief Commissioner, Indian Claims Commission (promoted from Associate Commissioner); and Brooks Hays (ex-Rep. D Ark. 1943-59), member of the Board of Directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority (reappointment). Appointed to posts not requiring Senate confirmation were Errett P. Scrivner (ex-Rep. R Kan. 1943-59), appointed March 4 as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs in the Department of Defense; Gerald P. Nye (ex-Sen. R N.D. 1925-45), appointed April 14 as special assistant to Housing Commissioner Julian H. Zimmerman; and Guy M. Gillette (ex-Sen. D Iowa 1937-55), named June 22 as chief counsel of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Improvements in Judicial Machinery.

Judgeships

During the 1960 session, President Eisenhower made appointments to fill 14 vacant U.S. district judgeships and 2 circuit court judgeships. Of the 16 appointments, 12 were confirmed.

The remaining four nominations had not received Judiciary Committee approval when the Senate adjourned Sept. 1, 1960. They involved: John Feikens (eastern Michigan district court); C. Nils Tavares (Hawaii district court); Thomas E. Kennerly (southern Texas district court); and Andrew A. Caffrey (Massachusetts district court).

Among the 12 judges confirmed were three originally nominated but not approved in 1959. They were renominated in 1960. They were: J. Joseph Smith, Charles F. Paul and William H. Timbers. (1959 Almanac p. 672)

LOBBIES HAD MIXED SUCCESS IN 1960 SESSION

The 1960 Congressional session was a frustrating one for many of the big Washington lobby groups. Labor, in particular, was all but shut out in its legislative accomplishments. The AFL-CIO, United Mine Workers and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, for example, worked in vain for passage of legislation to finance a program of health benefits for the aged through the Social Security System. The unions, along with the National Education Assn., also were thwarted in their efforts on behalf of a school-aid bill. Minimum wage legislation, a primary legislative goal of organized labor, also failed to gain Congress' approval.

On the other hand, some lobbies representing business were grateful for Congress' unwillingness to enact the labor-backed legislation, but they failed to gain approval for many of their own proposals. For example, the self-employed retirement bill (HR 10) died in the 1960 session. It was supported by virtually every major business organization.

Following is a roundup of how lobbies fared in 1960 and their probable objectives in 1961. Organizations are listed under the subjects which enlisted most of their legislative activity but this does not mean that they did not have other interests.

Business

AMERICAN BANKERS ASSN. (representing approximately 17,000 bankers and bank administrators) -- In a newsletter to member banks, Ben. C. Corlett, senior vice president of ABA, said: "Banking legislation did fare extremely well in the 86th Congress...." Two of the three primary legislative objectives of the ABA were enacted by Congress in 1960. They were: (1) a bill (S 1062 -- PL 86-463) providing for federal regulation of bank mergers and (2) a bill (HR 12465 -- PL 86-671) providing for simpler methods of determining assessments under Federal Deposit Insurance Act. The only bill considered as a primary legislative objective by the ABA and not enacted into law was a measure (HR 7950) providing equal tax treatment for commercial banks and mutual financial institutions.

The ABA also backed a bill (HR 10) that would have permitted self-employed persons to defer payment of income taxes on income set aside for retirement purposes. After being passed by the House, HR 10 was debated briefly in the Senate but was dropped in the adjournment rush.

- According to the ABA newsletter, "Equitable tax treatment among financial institutions is by far the most important task facing us in the 87th Congress." An ABA spokesman Sept. 22 said the bankers also were very hopeful of enactment of a self-employed retirement bill in 1961.

AMERICAN RETAIL FEDERATION (representing 70 state and national retail associations with a total membership of 800,000) -- A Federation spokesman said the ARF was "happy" that Congress did not enact the minimum wage bill (HR 12677) which would have raised the $1.00-per-hour federal minimum wage and increased the number of workers covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act. The ARF also opposed the common site picketing bill (S 2643) that would have exempted building trades unions picketing a joint construction site from certain Taft-Hartley prohibitions against secondary boycotts. Minimum wage legislation was passed by both the House and Senate but died in conference; the common site picketing bill passed neither chamber.

A third bill opposed by the ARF and which also died in committee was the Douglas credit-labelling bill (S 2755). As introduced by Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D Ill.), S 2755 would have required merchants and money lenders to provide potential customers with full knowledge of finance charges in advance of loans and installment purchases.

The ARF supported in part the self-employed retirement bill (HR 10) which died in the August session of Congress.

- In 1961 the Federation will oppose a credit-labelling bill which it said is certain to be reintroduced. It also will press for a modified version of the self-employed retirement bill.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE U.S. (representing 3,400 local and state chambers of commerce) -- The general legislative goals of the Chamber in 1960 were to keep the federal budget in balance, to hold government spending to a minimum and to prevent further centralization of governmental powers. It was successful in opposing legislation that would have provided federal money for school construction and teachers' salaries (S 8, HR 10128); made federal grants, loans and technical assistance available to chronically depressed labor-surplus areas; provided minimum federal standards for unemployment compensation; provided a federal health insurance program to be financed through the Social Security system; and provided an increase in the federal minimum wage and expansion of coverage of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Among the Chamber's setbacks were its efforts in behalf of legislation that would have removed the 4.25 percent maximum interest rate ceiling on long-term Government bonds; increased postal rates by one cent on first class and airmail letters; overturned a 1959 ruling by the Internal Revenue Service that disallowed tax deductions for dues paid to chambers of commerce, trade associations and other groups engaged in lobbying.

- The Chamber expects that most of the bills it opposed in 1960 will come up again in 1961. It will lobby against these and for the same measures it supported in 1960.

NATIONAL ASSN. OF MANUFACTURERS (representing 20,300 businesses firms) -- The legislative goals of the NAM, to a large extent, parallelled those of the Chamber of Commerce. The NAM opposed minimum wage legislation and the social security approach for health care for the aged. It lobbied against the common situs picketing bill and the Douglas credit-labelling bill.

The NAM campaigned unsuccessfully for tax reform legislation (HR 3000, 3001) to reduce corporate and personal income taxes to a maximum of 47 percent (corporate maximum is 52 percent) in five annual installments.

● In 1961 the NAM will continue to press for tax revision.

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF INDEPENDENT BUSINESS (representing 150,000 small businessmen) -- George J. Burger, vice president, said the NFIB was disappointed Congress did not enact a bill (HR 3176) that would have corrected what he called an "inequity" in the method in which excise taxes are levied on tires. According to Burger, about 3,000 retailers are subject to the tire excise tax at the time their invoices are rendered, whereas more than 2,000 stores operated by the so-called big three tire manufacturers -- Goodyear, Firestone and Goodrich -- are exempt from the excise tax. HR 3176, which would have applied the excise tax to tires and tubes sold in stores operated by the manufacturer, as well as by independent retailers, was reported by the House Ways and Means Committee Aug. 15 but did not get to the House floor.

The Federation also opposed minimum wage legislation and the credit-labelling bill and supported the self-employed retirement bill.

● The NFIB in 1961 will concentrate on passage of a bill similar to HR 3176.

NATIONAL RETAIL MERCHANTS ASSN. (representing 11,000 stores) -- John C. Hazen, vice president, said the NRMA considered the Congressional stalemate on minimum wage legislation a victory for the retailers. Another victory, he said, was the fact that the credit labelling bill did not get out of committee. Although the NRMA suffered setbacks in its efforts to repeal the 10 percent excise taxes on furs, luggage, jewelry and cosmetics, Hazen said the 1960 session of Congress was considered successful for the retailers.

● The NRMA will continue to oppose minimum wage legislation in 1961 and will carry on its fight to repeal the excise taxes.

SOUTHERN STATES INDUSTRIAL COUNCIL (representing 2,000 business firms in the 16 southern states from Maryland to Texas) -- Legislative objectives of the Council followed closely those of the Chamber of Commerce and the NAM. In addition, the Council was eager to see enacted a so-called states rights bill (S 3, HR 3) which would limit application of the federal preemption doctrine by state or federal courts. Failure of the states rights bill to get out of committee was viewed as a setback for the Council. Considered as a victory by the Council was the $500-million cut in Mutual Security appropriations (HR 12619).

● Like the Chamber and the NAM, the Council will press for federal economy in 1961 and renew its campaign for enactment of states rights legislation.

Citizens

AMERICANS FOR DEMOCRATIC ACTION (representing 45,000 individuals dedicated to "restoring the influence of liberalism") -- A review of the 1960 Congressional session prepared for the September edition of the ADA World said, "The most predominantly liberal and Democratic Congress since 1936 was barely able to assure the continuance of existing programs, much less respond to new challenges. Every attempt at creative legislative innovation was stifled....

"At the end, Congress could count among its minuscule achievements only the continuation of the Mutual Security Program, a civil rights bill (HR 8601) which satisfied no major objective of rights advocates and minor improvements in the Social Security system. Among the casualties were medical care for the aged, aid to education, public housing, urban renewal and minimum wage legislation. Congress so effectively throttled itself that depressed areas and water pollution legislation were the only notable victims of a veto during the second session."

● ADA national chairman Samuel H. Beer Sept. 4 called for changes in the rules of the House and Senate in 1961 to prevent "sabotage...of the legislative process" by the "Dixiecrat-Republican coalition." Beer said the rules changes should provide that: (1) Congressional committees are composed mainly of members committed to carry out those portions of their party platforms over which the committee has jurisdiction; (2) Legislation cannot be killed in committee by filibuster or arbitrary action of the chairman; (3) Measures reported by committees actually reach the floor for debate; (4) A majority of the Senate will be able to bring legislation to a vote after a reasonable opportunity to debate; and (5) Lawmakers picked as members of conference committees represent the majority will.

FRIENDS COMMITTEE ON NATIONAL LEGISLATION (representing most constituent bodies of the religious Society of Friends in the U.S.) -- Senate ratification of the Antarctic Treaty, in the view of the FCNL, may have been "the most significant act taken by Congress in a year dominated by politics and an intensified cold war." Outstanding feature of the Treaty, according to the Committee, was that it "demilitarizes an area larger than the United States and Europe combined and provides for complete and unrestricted inspection."

The FCNL listed these other actions it considered constructive: the appropriation of additional funds for disarmament studies; the creation of the new Disarmament Administration under the State Department; the enactment of legislation (HR 11001 -- PL 86-565) providing for U.S. membership in the International Development Assn.; the inclusion in the Mutual Security Appropriations bill (HR 12619 -- PL 86-704) of funds for the Indus Basin development project between Pakistan and India; the authorization of $500 million for aid to Latin America; and the inclusion of funds in the Mutual Security Appropriations bill for a study of the advisability of establishing a Point Four Youth Corps.

The Friends Committee lamented the failure of Congress to repeal the Connally amendment to the World Court treaty, to oppose the first use by the U.S. of germ and gas weapons, to approve "adequate" civil rights or refugee legislation, or to abolish the mandatory death penalty for first degree murder in the District of Columbia.

● The FCNL in 1961 will continue to push for further progress in disarmament and international relations.

NATIONAL ASSN. FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE (representing about 350,000 individuals interested in civil rights) -- According to the director of the NAACP's Washington office, Clarence Mitchell: "Pussyfooting and surrender in a real fight are suitable epitaphs for the 86th Congress. In the field of civil rights, bold leadership was conspicuously absent in both parties.... The law that was finally passed (HR 8601 -- PL 86-449) is a useful statute, but it falls far short of what is needed in this critical period."

• In 1961 the NAACP will renew its efforts for stronger civil rights legislation.

Education

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION (representing 140 national and regional organizations and 1,055 institutions of higher learning) -- The Council saw one of its major legislative objectives enacted when Congress gave final approval Aug. 31 to a "stop-gap" housing bill which included a $500 million authorization for the federal college loan fund for construction of dormitories. It failed to get Congress to pass a new $250 million loan program for the construction of academic (non-revenue) facilities.

• In 1961 the Council probably will press for a classroom construction loan program.

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSN. (representing 664,000 teachers and school administrators) -- Again in 1960 the NEA was thwarted in its efforts to get passage of a massive school-aid program. Its primary legislative objective was a bill (S 2, HR 22) that would have ultimately provided $4.4 billion a year to build schools and raise teachers' salaries. The House May 26 passed a bill (HR 10128) providing $1.3 billion over four years for public school construction and the Senate Feb. 4 passed a bill (S 8) authorizing about $1.8 billion over two years for construction and teachers' salaries. A possible compromise between the two measures was precluded when the House Rules Committee refused to permit a Senate-House conference on education legislation.

"Failure to enact a school support bill was a tragedy for the entire Nation," William G. Carr, executive secretary of the NEA said after Congress adjourned Sept. 1. Criticizing the House Rules Committee, he said majorities in both Chambers favored increased federal support of schools. "It is now clear that an even larger majority must exist before the Congress will act," Carr said.

• The NEA will renew its campaign to get a liberal school-aid bill through Congress in 1961. Carr also implied that the NEA would join with the ADA and other groups in an effort to change Congressional rules.

Farm

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION (representing 1.6 million farm families) -- The largest of the farm organizations in 1960 concentrated on enactment of legislation to control the Nation's primary surplus commodity -- wheat. Its recommendations conformed generally to the proposals laid down by Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson. The Farm Bureau's four-point wheat policy as outlined in S 3336 and HR 10666 would have (1) eliminated wheat acreage allotments and marketing quotas; (2) based wheat price supports on the support level for corn with adjustments for differences in weight, nutritive value and buyer preference; (3) restricted sales of wheat stocks held by the Government to protect farmers against competition from surplus Government stocks; and (4) expanded the conservation reserve program (soil bank) to 60 million acres from the current level of 28 million acres.

The Senate Agriculture Committee April 26 rejected the Farm Bureau's wheat plan and April 27 approved a measure (S 2759) which cut national wheat acreage by 20 percent, set wheat price supports at 80 percent of parity and authorized "payments-in-kind" from Government-owned wheat stocks to farmers agreeing to the 20 percent acreage-cutback. The Senate passed the Committee bill June 9 after raising price supports from 75 to 80 percent of parity. In the meantime, the House Agriculture Committee May 18 had approved a bill HR 12261 giving producers a choice between two production control plans. The first would have raised wheat price supports to 85 percent of parity, cut national wheat acreage by 25 percent and authorized payments-in-kind slightly more liberal than the Senate bill. The alternative plan embodied the Farm Bureau proposals -- elimination of all Government controls, a cut in price supports to about 60 percent of parity in 1961 and to 50 percent of parity thereafter and extension and expansion of the conservation reserve to 60 million acres.

HR 12261, which was introduced by Rep. W.R. Poage (D Texas), also provided a national "stabilization" program for feed grains (corn, barley, grain sorghum, oats and rye).

During the House debate on the Poage bill June 23, an attempt was made to strike out everything in the bill except the Farm Bureau wheat plan. The House defeated this move and went on to reject the Poage bill by a 171-236 roll-call vote. By failing to pass a wheat bill of its own and by its rejection of the Senate-passed bill, the House ended any chance for new legislation to deal with the wheat surplus problem. This meant the existing program would remain in effect for the 1961 wheat crop with price supports at 75 percent of parity or about $1.77 per bushel.

Although the Farm Bureau was unsuccessful in pushing its wheat proposals, it listed these legislative accomplishments:

Enactment of tobacco legislation (HR 9664 -- PL 86-389) maintaining 1960 support prices at the 1959 level and providing that prices in subsequent years be adjusted from the 1959 level in direct proportion to changes in prices paid by farmers for commodities purchased, using the previous three-year average as a base.

Enactment of legislation (HR 12115 -- PL 86-566) providing that the 1961 minimum national acreage allotment for extra long staple cotton be the same as in 1960.

Defeat of HR 12261, the Poage bill, in the House.

The AFBF's major setback in 1960, aside from the defeat of its wheat plan, was the enactment of a bill (S 2917 -- PL 86-799) raising Government price supports on milk used in manufacturing and on butterfat.

NATIONAL FARMERS UNION (representing 300,000 farm families) -- The NFU supported a wheat bill in testimony before the House Agriculture Committee March 9. As jointly developed by the Farmers Union, the National Grange and the National Assn. of Wheat Growers and subsequently introduced by eight Democrats and four Republicans (HR 11011-11022), the plan would establish a national wheat quota which in 1961 would be about 950 million acres -- 500 million for U.S. consumption, 450 million for export. Farmers would be permitted to produce 150 million bushels less than the national figure. The 150 million bushel deficit would be taken from the Government's surplus stockpiles. No wheat could be marketed without "use" certificates. To qualify for use certificates, farmers would be required to cut 10 percent from their normal wheat acreage and conform to their production quotas. All certificated wheat would be supported at 75 percent of parity.

The Farmers Union also supported the formula for controlling the production of wheat and feed grains as outlined in the Poage bill.

Among the measures backed by the NFU which were enacted by Congress were the milk and butterfat price support bill; the tobacco price support bill; and extension of the school milk program (HR 9331 -- PL 86-446).

NATIONAL GRANGE (representing 860,000 individuals) -- The Grange, which, along with the Farmers Union and the National Assn. of Wheat Growers, developed the wheat certificate plan, said it was "tragic" that the plan did not get out of committee. The Grange said its accomplishments in the 1960 Congressional session were "practically nil."

Federal-City Relations

AMERICAN MUNICIPAL ASSN. (representing 13,000 municipal governments) -- Patrick Healy Jr., executive director, said the House and Senate in 1960 "indicated an awareness of urban needs and enacted legislation along those lines as far as they could go without running into the House Rules Committee or a Presidential veto." Viewed as legislative victories for the AMA were two items in an appropriations bill (HR 11390 -- PL 86-703) for which Congress provided more money than the Administration requested: For grants for the construction of waste treatment plants, Congress appropriated $45 million; the Administration had recommended $20 million and had recommended the program be terminated. For hospital construction grants, Congress appropriated $186.2 million; the Administration had recommended $126.2 million.

Presidential vetoes stopped two measures high on AMA's priority list: (1) the Area Redevelopment bill (S 722) which would have provided loans, grants and technical aid to urban and rural areas suffering chronic unemployment and (2) a bill (HR 3610) which would have increased grants to communities for the construction of sewage treatment plants. Pigeonholed in the House Rules Committee at session's end was another measure considered important by the AMA: the proposed Housing Act of 1960 (HR 12603) which would have provided an additional $450 million in urban renewal grant authorizations, increased aid for families and businesses in need of relocation assistance and broadened provisions for the conservation of housing.

Two more measures championed by the AMA never reached the House floor: (1) A Senate-passed bill (S 910) which would have provided for payments to local governments of sums in lieu of taxes and special assessments with respect to certain federal real property and (2) a Senate-passed bill (S 3278) which would have provided mass transportation assistance to communities by making matching grants to plan local transportation and by making $100 million available for low-interest, long-term loans to finance the acquisition, construction and improvement of facilities and equipment for use in mass transit systems in metropolitan areas.

● Among the AMA's legislative objectives in 1961, top priority will go to getting increased authorizations for urban renewal grants.

HOME RULE COMMITTEE OF WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Proponents of local self-government for the District of Columbia failed to get the Senate-passed home rule bill (S 1686) out of the hostile House District Committee. The Home Rule Committee reported that at one time as many as 205 Members of the House had signed the discharge petition that would have freed the measure for House debate. The signatures of a majority of the House -- 219 Members -- were needed to force action on the Home Rule bill.

● For 1961, the Home Rule Committee said it would follow the same plan of action. It hoped that the Senate would pass a self-government bill first and then it would concentrate on lining up support in the House. A spokesman for the Committee said the District of Columbia should have a "larger core of friends" in the 87th Congress.

U.S. CONFERENCE OF MAYORS (representing the Mayors of larger U.S. cities and most others over 30,000 population)-- According to a spokesman for the Mayors Conference, the second session of the 86th Congress "failed to act on many items of importance to cities." He ascribed Congress' failure to act on the needs of cities to the rules of the House and Senate which weighted the power of leadership in favor of the rural areas of the country. The spokesman for the Mayors expressed disappointment that Congress had not provided more money for urban renewal, slum clearance grants and public housing. Two other legislative objectives of the Conference, the depressed areas bill (S 722) and the water pollution bill (S 3610), were stopped by Presidential vetoes.

● "A first item of business in the next session of Congress," the Conference's Legislative Digest declared, "will be to revamp the rules of both the House and Senate so as to permit majority rule."

Housing

NATIONAL ASSN. OF HOME BUILDERS (representing 40,000 home builders) -- "The home builders ended the 1960 session with a considerable measure of satisfaction and success," according to spokesman for the NAHB. "A major piece of legislation which would have been highly inimicable to the NAHB was not enacted -- the common situs picketing bill (S 2643)."

Also of importance to the NAHB was the enactment of a bill (HR 7903 -- PL 86-665) extending the veterans' direct and guaranteed home-loan program for an additional two years. The "frosting on the cake," said the NAHB spokesman, was the passage of stop-gap housing resolution (H J Res 784) just before the end of the session. The three-point measure extended the Federal Housing Administration's home-improvement loan program for a year, authorized an additional $500 million for the college housing loan program and an additional $50 million for the public facility loan program of the Community Facilities Administration.

● In 1951 the NAHB will press for enactment of a so-called central mortgage bank bill which would permit the Federal National Mortgage Assn. to make short-term "warehousing" loans on the security of FHA and VA mortgages and to authorize FNMA to charter "federal mortgage investment companies" in local communities.

NATIONAL ASSN. OF REAL ESTATE BOARDS (representing 60,000 realtors) -- The NAREB counted among its legislative achievements the enactment of legislation (HR 10960 -- PL 86-779), part of which contained the so-called real estate investment trust proposal. The NAREB had been lobbying for such legislation since 1956. As signed into law, the investment trust provision of HR 10960 amended the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to exempt from the corporate income tax those real estate investment trusts having 100 or more shareholders and which distribute at least 90 percent of their income to shareholders annually. Another part of HR 10960 which was backed by the realtors was the section dealing with the tax treatment of stock in the Federal National Mortgage Assn. As enacted, this measure permitted the purchaser of FNMA common stock to take as a business tax deduction the difference between the par price, which must be paid at the time of purchase, and the quoted market value, which usually is substantially less than par. Under the new legislation, the purchaser of the stock would not have to dispose of it in order to take the deduction.

● Like the NAHB, the NAREB supported the central mortage bank bill and will continue to press for its enactment in 1961.

NATIONAL HOUSING CONFERENCE (representing 3,000 individuals interested in housing) -- Frank Servaites, executive vice president, listed these legislative objectives of the NHC in 1960: an enlarged and expanded urban renewal program; continuance and expansion of low-rent public housing program to permit long-range planning; an enlarged cooperative housing program; increased FHA mortgage-insurance authorization; and the creation of a Department of Urban Development. Servaites said the Conference was thwarted in most of its lobbying efforts during the 1960 session.

He noted the passage of the stop-gap housing resolution but said it fell far short of meeting current problems in the housing field.

● The NHC will again campaign for a "complete omnibus housing bill."

Labor

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR-CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS (representing 13 million workers) -- The AFL-CIO, with a host of legislative goals in the field of general welfare, considered the 1960 Congressional session a dismal failure. According to one union spokesman: "Every major piece of legislation has failed of enactment." He listed the school-aid bill, minimum wage legislation, health benefits for the aged through the Social Security system, an omnibus housing bill, legislation establishing federal standards for unemployment compensation, the vetoed area redevelopment bill and a strong civil rights measure.

● In 1961, along with stepped-up efforts for the same legislation it supported unsuccessfully in 1960, the AFL-CIO will press hard for changes in the rules of the House and Senate.

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES' COUNCIL (representing 24 federal employee unions affiliated with the AFL-CIO) -- GEC unionists have "good reason to be proud" of the legislative accomplishments of the GEC during 1960, said operations director James K. Langan. "Federal and postal employees have benefitted as much from the 86th Congress as any previous session," he said.

The biggest victory for the GEC in 1960 was the enactment over the President's veto of a bill (HR 9883 -- PL 86-568) providing a 7.5 percent to 8.7 percent salary increase for better than half a million postal and white collar Government workers. It was only the second time in President Eisenhower's eight-year administration that Congress had mustered the two-thirds majority in both Chambers that is necessary to override a veto.

● In 1961 the GEC will press for amendment of the Hatch Act to permit wider participation by federal employees in political activities and to lighten the punitive provisions for employees guilty of violating the Act.

INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF TEAMSTERS, CHAUFFEURS, WAREHOUSEMEN AND HELPERS OF AMERICA (representing 1.5 million workers) -- The principal goal of the Teamsters Union in 1960 was the enactment of a series of amendments to the Landrum-Griffin bill of 1959. Sidney Zagri, director of the Teamsters' department of legislation and political education, said action on Teamster-supported amendments to the Landrum-Griffin bill was blocked by the Democratic leadership in Congress for fear that public hearings on the proposed amendments would be "embarrassing" in an election year.

The Teamsters also supported the Social Security approach for providing health care for the aged.

● The Teamsters in 1961 will continue to work for legislation to ease the effects of the Landrum-Griffin bill and to curtail Government regulation of union activities.

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA (representing 200,000 coal miners) -- A UMW spokesman said the 1960 session proved "disappointing...after the tremendous political gains made in the 1958 elections." He said the UMW supported minimum wage legislation, the depressed areas bill and most other measures supported by the AFL-CIO. He also cited three bills affecting the coal industry that received UMW backing: a coal research bill (HR 3375 -- PL 86-599) providing $3 million for the study of new uses of coal; a measure (H Con Res 661) to establish a special Congressional committee to study the need for a national fuels policy; and a bill (S 743) to bring under the inspection requirements of the Mine Safety Act mines employing less than 15 people. The coal research bill was the only one of the three measures enacted.

● The UMW will continue to support the same general welfare legislation in 1961 that it did in 1960 and will work for enactment of fuels policy and coal mine safety legislation.

Power

AMERICAN PUBLIC POWER ASSN. (representing 1,000 publicly owned electric systems) -- Alex Radin, general manager, said the APPA did "reasonably well" with its legislative program in 1960. The Association was "particularly successful," he said, in getting Congress to include in the Public Works appropriation bill (HR 12326 -- PL 86-700) money for the Trinity River project in California, for transmission facilities in Iowa to bring power from the Missouri River basin to municipal utilities and rural cooperatives and for construction on the Upper Colorado River project. Radin noted that money also was appropriated to start the following power projects: the Lower Monumental dam and lock in Washington State, the Green Peter Reservoir in Oregon, the Melton Hill dam in Tennessee and the Paradise steam plant of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

● In 1961 the APPA will continue to oppose legislation that seeks to remove tax exemptions on interest from state and local bonds and on the income of municipally owned utilities.

NATIONAL RURAL ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE ASSN. (representing 930 cooperatives and public power districts who borrow from the Rural Electrification Administration) -- Listed as victories by the NRECA were an increase in funds appropriated to the REA loan fund; and Congress' refusal to raise the interest rate on REA loans. It failed in its efforts to obtain enactment of a bill (HR 8) that would have permitted the evaluation of recreactional benefits to justify hydroelectric power projects and to increase the number of Government power projects. It also considered as a setback Congress' refusal to authorize federal funds for the construction of the Burns Creek dam on the Snake River.

● In 1961 the NRECA will concentrate on holding down the interest rate on REA loans and getting action on legislation similar to HR 8. An NRECA spokesman said that House Democratic leaders had promised such legislation would be given priority.

Professional

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSN. (representing 175,000 doctors) -- The AMA said its lobbying campaign in 1960 was successful. It opposed financing health benefits for the aged through the Social Security system and supported the federal-state matching grant plan that was finally enacted. The AMA also supported legislation to require that drugs carry labels with detailed information on their use.
